HAPPY! No wonder. He's got M-G-M. That means he gets OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS (Joan Crawford). It's the best bet of today. It's cracking records — Chicago, Detroit, Baltimore — everywhere. He gets WILLIAM HAINES in EXCESS BAGGAGE. Bigger than the stage hit and doing phenomenal business. Held over 2nd week at Capitol, N. Y. He gets LON CHANEY in WHILE THE CITY SLEEPS, a corker! He gets the biggest starring hits of GILBERT, GARBO, SHEARER, DAVIES, NOVARRO, etc., etc. He gets LAUREL-HARDY, OUR GANG and all those happy Hal Roach hits. And those great METRO MOVIE TONE ACTS.

He's sitting pretty! He got rich playing M-G-M and he wants to stay rich. He's one of 12,000 happy showmen playing M-G-M shows.

Despite release to picture houses, "Wings" is still doing capacity at $2 top in 60th week at Criterion, New York!

Sound or silent, rolling up unheard-of grosses in every theatre in which it plays. On its record, THE GREATEST PICTURE ATTRACTION EVER RELEASED! A Paramount Picture.

In seventh week of S. R. O. business at Rialto, New York. Vanings-Lubitsch masterpiece success everywhere and hailed as "THE PERFECT PICTURE". A Paramount Picture.

Clara Bow smash tops even "It" figures throughout country. Breaks Paramount, N. Y., week-end record. New high records, San Francisco, Los Angeles, other points. A Paramount Picture.

Broke Paramount Theatre, New York, record by over $7,000! Bancroft-von Sternberg hit even bigger than "Underworld". Melodramatic marvel. A Paramount Picture.

ERICH VON STROHEIM

“THE WEDDING MARCH”

Two years in the making, now Erich von Stroheim's brilliant successor to "The Merry Widow" is offered to exhibitors. With von Stroheim, the screen's most fascinating star, enacting the central role. Beautiful Fay Wray as leading woman and a splendid cast including ZaSu Pitts, George Fawcett, Dale Fuller, Cesare Gravina, Mathew Betz, Maude George and over 1,000 incidental players. Available silent or with magnificent symphonic accompaniment written by J. C. Zamecnik, composer of famous "Wings" score. Arranged and played by Nat Finston and Paramount Theatre Orchestra of 75 pieces. Plus amazing sound effects. "Paradise", beautiful theme song, already a popular hit. Breath-taking scenes in dazzling Technicolor.

The Wedding March. The flaming, throbbing love story of a profligate prince and a lovely, innocent daughter of the people. Lavishly filmed amid the boudoirs, boulevards and beer gardens of old Vienna and along the bank of the romantic Blue Danube. Romance, spectacle and the most heart-breaking climax ever filmed. In its entirety an Erich von Stroheim creation. Story by von Stroheim and Harry Carr. Presented by Adolph Zukor and Jesse L. Lasky (by arrangement with P. A. Powers). Its fame will ring 'round the world!

UND PICTURES

COLUMBIA has always given you sound values in its silent productions.

You'll get even greater values in COLUMBIA SOUND PICTURES.

Our choice of the Western Electric recording and reproducing system (the same as that now being used by Vitaphone and Movietone) is a guarantee of sound quality in COLUMBIA SOUND PICTURES.

Through our foresight in providing sound box-office vehicles for our "Perfect 36," we now possess a number of outstanding stage plays and stories which are admirably suited for reproduction as sound pictures. Among the plays that we are now carefully considering for this purpose are "The Donovan Affair," by Owen Davis; "The Younger Generation," from the play "It Is to Laugh," by Fannie Hurst; "The Fall of Eve," by John Emerson and Anita Loos; "Redemption," by Count Leo Tolstoy. ¶ Among the stories on the current season's program available for production as sound pictures are "Acquitted," by Mary Roberts Rinehart, and "Trial Marriage," the Saturday Evening Post serial story by Elizabeth Alexander.

Theatre-owners can rest assured that when COLUMBIA finally decides to put a vehicle into production as a sound picture, it will have all the necessary values and qualities to make it a superlative box-office attraction.

TO SOUND

"CAPTAIN SWAGGER" was made for SOUND

The visual realism of this fast moving romantic drama is enhanced a hundredfold by the unsurpassed effects of RCA Photophone.

It presents life in its most colorful and vivid aspects. There is action galore and love that runs riot. The conflict of ambitions and the conflict of emotions. The whirl and the roar of aeroplanes in battle—the jazzy syncopation of the night life of sophisticated cafes.

The story of a real hero in war and peace who knew what he wanted and got what he went after.

A picture unsurpassed in its adaptability to musical and other sound effects.

It presents Rod La Rocque in the type of role the public demands of him and will pay money to to see him in.

A Great Picture Silent or Sound.

PHOTOTONE ON BROADWAY

Although Phototone has been on the market for less than six months it is making its appearance on "Broadway."

We call the Exhibitors' attention to Harrison's Reports—who investigated Phototone, and comment on it in their issue of Saturday September twenty ninth.

We expect to have a library of records for use with Phototone available soon covering a wide range of themes, also sound effects. As these records are now in the process of manufacture, we are unable to give a release date this issue, but hope to have our list available by the next publication of this journal.

Phototone is now available with complete radio equipment at only $75.00 additional cost.

For only $50 additional our new perfected microphone attachment is also available.

Phototone is furnished with Puro-power exponential type horn at $500 complete—includes record rack, 50 records, complete power plant, double disc turntables and motors, electric pickup all operated from electric light socket. All blue prints, plans and descriptive matter for installation accompany the instrument.

Phototone is also furnished at slight additional cost with our famous Dynapower Bell Speaker also with dynamic sound baffle board, specially constructed in our plant.

Editorial Highlights

Heavy Silence and Much Sawing of Wood

By William A. Johnston

WARNER BROTHERS continue to feature in the headlines. . . . One day, it's this circuit they are buying. . . . and then, again, another. . . . In the meantime, as Joe Kennedy sagely observes, you can't tell what's really going on by the news headlines. . . . For instance, there's Paramount . . . big and powerful. . . . Yet Paramount is strangely silent as to any big moves, or acquisitions . . . and there's M-G-M and the big Loew circuit . . . and Nick Schenck says nothing in seven languages. . . . New York is a Loew town. . . . That was pretty well proven when Paramount planned to build some neighborhood super-theatres. . . . Yet, if the headlines were any indication, it would appear that Fox and Warners are to grab up all the desirable neighborhood houses. . . . And another man who has nothing to say is Sam Katz. . . . Yet First National changes ownership right under his complacent eyes. . . .

So we figure that a lot of wood has been sawed . . . under the guise of heavy silence . . . and how the timbers are being stacked is any one's guess and nobody's business. . . . We have an idea of what it's all about and we're pretty sure we're right. . . . But, after all, only the actual results are of trade interest. . . . One result is that the First National Theatres, and after all they are mostly Publix houses—are they not?—have got Vitaphone franchises. . . . The headlines read that Warner Brothers had secured the First National Theatre outlet . . . whereas, they should have read that the First National Theatres had secured Warners' sound pictures. . . . Also, we note that the Loew Theatres are getting Vitaphone installations as fast and furiously as any theatres could. . . .

Speaking of Warner Brothers and their astounding rise to the top of the heap, isn't it remarkable that just one picture did it? . . . Looking back, it would appear that, from the very beginning, one picture here and there, has not only put a company to the fore but has actually determined the trend of the entire picture industry. . . . Moulded it, so to say . . . which makes one stop and think that, after all, show genius, and only that, turns the big tricks. . . .

* * * *

One of our staff correspondents at Hollywood writes an article on stock market gambling as a cause of poor pictures. . . . Yes, it is. . . . But we let the story, published elsewhere speak for itself. . . . There is another point about which some remarks seem to be in order. . . . We call it the "Single Track Mind." . . . Meaning that the industry tends to get itself sold on one thing at a time to the exclusion of other vital matters. . . . Just now, it's sound. . . . Well, you can't blame film folk for concentrating, single-track fashion, on that. . . . But let's not forget that there are other important problems. . . . Such as the proper production of silent pictures for thousands of unwired houses. . . . And advertising and exploitation that will do the job only those two things can. . . .

No Deal Imminent for Sale of K-A-O, Says J. P. Kennedy

By William A. Johnston

A DENIAL that any deal is imminent for the acquisition of Keith-Albee-Orpheum by Warners was made by Joseph P. Kennedy, recently returned from Europe, in the course of an interview I had with him this week.

Mr. Kennedy, who is, of course, the chairman of the K-A-O Board, told me that offers from several different sources to buy K-A-O had been made, but none of them was 'good enough.'

"There is no deal on the fire," he added, "with any immediate prospect of closing."

Discussing his other interests, Mr. Kennedy said that Pathe was going right ahead. As a matter of fact, the excellent position of the company, he continued, was shown thus: out of a bank credit of $2,000,000, it had been necessary for Pathe to borrow only $75,000. FBO, he said, was in splendid shape.

When the conversation swung around to sound pictures he expressed regret that no theatre installations had been made by Photophone. There was no doubt in his mind that this process was the best, but this availed little, he thought, unless installations were made.

So far as interchangeability is concerned, Mr. Kennedy holds the same opinion frequently expressed by this paper: it will have to come.

Passing to the general situation, he made the observation that the people in the industry were spending too much time talking about what is going to happen, instead of attending to the job at hand.

pert motion picture director, and the other an expert stage director. Bert Glennon will be film director, and Mr. Kane is now negotiating with a well known stage director. Gene Markey, author, will collaborate with the co-directors in the preparation of the scenario and dialogue and production will start as soon as the cast is assembled.

Josiah Zuro, musical impresario, recently named general musical director for all FBO and Pathe sound films, and his orchestra of 35 pieces will prepare the musical synchronization for "Stepping High."

Many Chicago Showmen to Attend Toronto Convention

Chicago is to be well represented at the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, which will be held in Toronto, Canada, on October 16th, 17th and 18th. Exhibitors who have already signified their intention of going, include President Jack Miller, Secretary Ludwig Siegel and Tess Heraty of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago; Fred Gilford, Joe Pastor, Maurice Choyinski, Lester Retchin, Arnold Schaak, James Stepanek, Wm. Mueller, V. T. Lynch and Aaron Saperstein.

A representative delegation of supply and equipment dealers and manufacturers have also made reservations for passage on Jack Miller's Special, via the Grand Trunk and Canadian National Railway System. Jack Miller's Special will leave Chicago on Monday, October 15th at 5:30 P. M., and will arrive at Toronto the following morning at 8:30 A. M. The Chicago party will make their headquarters at the King Edward Hotel.

Powell Succeeds Kent in "Four Feathers"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, October 4.—William Powell succeeds Arnold Kent in the cast of "Four Feathers" for Paramount. Mr. Kent died Saturday as the result of injuries sustained when he was struck by an automobile.

Mr. Kent was a native Italian, his real name being Lido Manetti. Re-shooting of scenes will be necessary on the production.

Small Re-Opening N. Y. Casting Office

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, October 3.—Edward Small is reopening his New York casting office with Mike Connolly in charge.

Small is concentrating on vaudeville bookings for talking shorts, and also a casting service for dialogue features.

Buckley Heads U. A. Chain

To Become General Manager Succeeding Anger, Coast Hears; Riesenfeld Synchronization Expert

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 3.—Harry D. Buckley is now en route to New York, where it will be officially announced that he has been appointed General Manager of the United Artists theatres, succeeding Lou Anger, who is reported retiring from the active management of that chain, but will retain his stock interest.

This was learned on authoritative information by MOTION PICTURE NEWS today.

Further changes which are being made in what is described as a shakeup at the Los Angeles United Artists theatre are the resignation of Bruce Fowler as resident manager. He is being succeeded by Hal Horne.

It is further reported that Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld will permanently devote most of his time between New York and Los Angeles to the direction of the synchronization of musical scores for United Artists productions.

Still further changes are reported here as scheduled.

Eastern Feature Production Under Way In Two Weeks

THE first steps in what promises to be quite a revival in eastern feature production activities will be under way within the next two or three weeks when two pretentious productions will be launched. Both will be synchronized with sound and dialogue. The pictures are FBO's "Stepping High" and United Artists "Say It with Music."

"Say It with Music," Irving Berlin's first film venture and Harry Richman's first talking-singing motion picture will be put into production in a New York studio within three weeks. John W. Considine, Jr., United Artists Studio production head, will leave Hollywood within a few days for New York, bringing with him Alan Crosland, who will direct the film, and C. Gardner Sullivan, who is adapting Irving Berlin's original story. The players in the feature will follow shortly after.

While making the picture, Harry Richman will continue to play in George White's "Scandals," in which he is a featured player. White, it is understood, will assist in production of the film by staging some dance numbers. There will be eight new Irving Berlin songs and Berlin will personally supervise the entire production.

Robert Kane, president of Sound Pictures, Inc., in New York, announces the completion of negotiations for the purchase of "Stepping High," a novel by Gene Markey, which will be made into an all-talking picture by FBO at Sound Studios.

As a somewhat new departure the picture will be co-directed by two men, one an ex-

Studio Move Denied

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 4.—Rumors to the effect that Warner Brothers will move from their present plant on Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, to the First National Burbank studios, selling their present land holdings for a really subdivision because of its high value are denied by Warner executives. They stamp this, among many other reports, as the product of Hollywood imagination.

Stock Market Gambling Seen As Cause of Poor Pictures

Many Studio People Spend Valuable Time on Ticker Tapes Instead of Concentrating on Production Work

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 30. — Stock market gambling is definitely assigned as the major reason for inferior product emanating from most studios on the West Coast. Production executives, writers and directors are spending too much valuable time and concentration over ticker tapes when it should be on story and production. Exhibitor complaints that distributors have been delivering an increasing number of poor pictures brought forth varied alibis from the producers, many of which are logical.

A survey of production and those engaged in it, showed that some of these alibis have slight basis, but the principal cause for production delays, lack of concentration, resulting in poorer pictures, is simply too much stock market gambling within the walls of studios. Stocks have become the dominant subject of conversation on practically all studio lots, with production executives, players, writers, directors and even the lesser employees, playing the market during the hours they are supposed to be working on pictures.

Executives Waste Time

Executives waste their own time by transacting stock buying and selling during the day. They keep employees waiting to see them on important production decisions while orders are given brokers or time is consumed in listening to discussion of the trend of the market by a supposed expert.

A glaring example of this is the case of one prominent production executive who carries a wide variety of stocks. Recently he was in the midst of a story conference with two writers on a production which had to be ready to start in a week, as director and leading cast members had already been engaged. Before the discussion was half completed, a stock broker phoned the executive and informed him of the sudden drop of one of the latter's pet stocks. The executive talked for half an hour, and when he finished was noticeably upset over his sudden losses. He told the writers he would send for them the next day to continue the story conference, as he was not able to get his mind back on the subject that day. However, it was four days later before the conference was resumed, and the production was delayed a week. Then the director had to start before he had the complete script from the writers. When finished, the picture was mediocre, but it went out on schedule nevertheless.

Every production executive is not involved in the stock gamble, but enough of them are so that the quality of production, on the general run, is lowered. Writers, directors, and others who are playing the market, seem to disregard all obligations they might have for the studios employing them by taking time to look after their stocks and make frequent phone calls to the brokers for quotations.

It is intimated that sudden stock declines affect picture production to the tune of thousands of dollars a year. Some months ago, two stocks (both heavily supported by picture people) crashed downward in a wild week of excitement. The coast film colony lost an estimated $12,000,000 alone, and production in certain studios was demoralized for a week. The first day of the stock toboggan found most of the production staff of one studio sweating in endeavors to raise mere margins to protect their holdings while important production decisions of the company were entirely disregarded.

Motion picture stocks have been getting a heavy play on the coast, with the Warner stock getting the biggest. Thousands have been both won and lost on the sensational rises of this stock during the past two years, and many of the losses were occasioned by individuals selling the market on Warners short at the start of a spectacular rise.

Consistent Stock Buyers

Many players, directors and writers who are at present getting large salaries, have been consistent buyers of stock. These transactions have been for investment purposes only, and include only those stocks

$12,000,000 In Sound On Coast

Initial Investment of Licensed Companies in Stages and Equipment Reaches Fabulous Amounts

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 30. — Sound stages and equipment necessary to convert all of the present coast studios to produce talking pictures will require an initial investment of approximately $12,000,000. Western Electric, through its subsidiary, Electrical Research Products, will supply the bulk of the apparatus that will be used by producers for recording by film and disc methods, but RCA Photophone will be utilized by three or four companies according to present plans.

Ten sound proof stages are now completed and ready for use on the coast; while a total of twenty more are either under construction or planned. Warners have the jump on the field with five sound stages now being used for dialogue production; M-G-M has one stage just finished, while Paramount is dialoguing pictures on two stages.

The Western Electric contract with producers for Movietone recording provides for a set price on the cost of installing the sound recording system on each stage; plus a minimum guarantee against a fee of $500 for each reel that is Movietoned by the producing company. One producer constructing an initial unit of two stages figures that the cost of building the stages and the equipment necessary for them will run about $550,000. The Movietone equipment and cost of installation will total approximately $175,000 per stage. He also will pay the license fee of $500 per reel when producing Movietone pictures. If other producers want to utilize the stage for Movietone recording, they must first be licensed by Western Electric, and then pay the usual fee of $500 per reel in addition to the regular rental of the stages. The minimum guarantees required of producers working under the Movietone licenses vary according to the amount of production they will make during the course of the year. Recording equipment installed on sound stages remains the property of Electrical Research Products, although leased to producers for a long term of years. This arrangement is similar to the exhibitor contract for theatre Movietone installation.

Sound stages have to measure 76 by 106, and this size is arbitrary to accommodate the electrical equipment. In addition, there are two monitor rooms about half the size of stages, and a building to accommodate generators and recording rooms.

Just as exhibitors have complained about the prices of sound equipment, so have the producers when it came time for them to figure on construction of sound stages. The electrical equipment necessary for recording runs into huge figures, but one producing executive pointed out that the producer contract with Electrical Research Products was very fair to the film companies, regardless of individual opinions on the subject. He pointed out that the contract relieves producers of royalty payments for musical compositions used in their pictures; and also guarantees the film companies protection against litigation

Big Break for First National Talkies in Warner Deal

Purchase of Former Company by Latter Means Vitaphoning of Product and Saving of Months, Says Rockett

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 4.—Far-reaching results are foreseen as the result of the purchase of First National by Warner Bros. Definite announcements as to full details of plans are lacking, but conjecture has crystallized on certain points in the last few days. Notable among these is the fact that First National features with dialogue will be on the market three or four months ahead of the original schedule. This will be made possible by Vitaphoning at Warner studios.

Confirmation of this intention was obtained from Al Rockett, in charge of First National productions. Pictures already made that will be released as talkies include "The Barker," "The Divine Lady" and "Outcast." Dialogue will be added to "Synthetic Sin," with Colleen Moore, and "The Changelings," which are now under way, besides all other forthcoming features.

"Even if we had been able immediately to synchronize pictures upon completion of our talkie stages at First National, this would have meant a delay of thirty days in getting started, an amount of time that has actually become a serious matter in the present excited condition of the market for sound film," said Mr. Rockett. "My personal belief is that it would have taken three or four months really to get under way. Building sound stages is only a preliminary step; learning technique is a more serious problem. And Warner Brothers have a long head start over every other company. By virtue of their purchase we can now avail ourselves of this advantage in getting our product with sound on the market early."

Regarding details of the deal itself, Mr. Rockett was silent pending the return of Jack Warner, who is expected to make the first official announcement. It is generally understood that the purchase is one of many ramifications, and that only part of it has been fully settled. This pertains to physical assets. The important question of contract remains to be ironed out, and anent this, one hears plenty of rumors.

The average franchise holder, it is understood, has been taking only a portion of First National product. The Warner deal will automatically greatly increase that product. Unless a new arrangement is made with the franchise holders much of this product will have to be sold on the open market.

Naturally that is not a source of great worry to the heads of the Warner organization. With talkies ruling the movie entertainment field they hold the major key to the situation. It is probable, however, that the combined product of the two studios will be reduced considerably from what it is at present. Both organizations, having small stock companies, with comparatively few stars to be taken care of, will be in an excellent position to do this.

Later, of course, will have to come consolidation of studio properties in all likelihood, but it is presumed that the Warner frontage on Sunset Boulevard can be disposed of to the marked benefit of this concern, despite their investment lately in new sound stages. One of the big things to be considered about such stages is the possibility of their becoming old-fashioned in a year or two. This might make the building of new stages necessary, and it could be done to better advantage at First National than at the present Warner studios. The fate of the old Vitagraph lot is in doubt for the present, but it is assumed that that too, will eventually be disposed of.

Rumor Links Stage Plays-RCA Vocafilm Also Mentioned in Reported Negotiations of Legitimate Producers to Make Sound Pictures

RUMORS are again rife regarding the production of Broadway stage plays into sound pictures, with eight or ten of the Broadway producers interested on the one hand and RCA Photophone and Vocafilm on the other. According to the latest story RCA is to take over Vocafilm and with the Broadway producers produce and distribute these sound pictures. E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Pictures, who has control of Vocafilm, and J. D. Williams, executive vice-president of World-Wide Pictures, are also connected with the latest story, in that their organizations will handle the physical distribution of the product.

For some months past Broadway producers have been endeavoring to perfect some sort of organization for the talking picture production of their stage plays. It was said originally they would produce under the Vocafilm system and it was officially announced that production would be under way before the present time. Then came a legal hitch in the sale of Vocafilm when a temporary injunction halted proceedings. This injunction, however, was recently set aside. But the Broadway producers apparently abandoned their plans temporarily. Among the producers mentioned are A. H. Woods, William A. Brady, Arthur Hammerstein, the Shuberts, Sam Harris, Jed Harris and others.

For the past several weeks efforts to get a statement regarding the plans of these legitimate producers have availed nothing. It is known that they have approached RCA Photophone with the idea of entering upon a production agreement with that company. It is also generally accepted that at least two of these legitimate producers are financially interested in Vocafilm, and would like to include that device in any deal.

While the story of some sort of agreement persists, it is generally denied from several quarters. The J. D. Williams office claims to know nothing of it. At the offices of Educational, it was said that they had not heard of such a contemplated deal, though Mr. Hammons was not available for a statement at press time. RCA headquarters offered a general denial.

According to report Mack Sennett is to make the sound pictures for the stage group, while Mr. Hammons and Educational will handle the physical distribution of the product in this country and World-Wide Pictures will handle the foreign rights.

The plan is to filmatize with sound or with sound and dialogue each of the stage plays of the legitimate producers as soon as these plays become established on the Broadway stage. Where possible the stage plays will be reproduced for the screen just as they are originally given on the Broadway stage and with the same casts. This will do away with extensive rehearsals necessary for screen players in making sound pictures and will consequently materially cut the costs of production.

As the plan was originally outlined in the statement made by the legitimate managers the film productions of these stage plays were to be road-showed in legitimate houses first and then generally distributed among the picture houses. Several leases of legitimate houses in different cities are known to have been negotiated by the stage producers with this end in view.

All First National Productions to Have Dialogue Sequences

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 3.—Starting immediately, all First National productions will have dialogue sequences using the Western Electric disc system, announced Al Rockett, production manager on his return to the Coast Tuesday.

Whether the Vitaphone trade name will be used in conjunction with the Warner Brothers-First National tie-up has not been decided. Rockett made no mention of the Warner deal, confining his remarks to the Motion Picture News reporter to production only.

He announced the purchase of six plays, among them being: "The Night Hostess," "Riviera," and "Weary River."

Win Sunday Movie Rights

Battles Being Waged in Various Sections of Country Decided in Exhibitors' Favor

BATTLES are being waged in various parts of the country for the right to show Sunday motion pictures, with the majority of them apparently being decided in favor of the exhibitors.

Ed Zorn, who operates the Bond and Crescent Theatres at Pontiac, Ill., has won his hard fight for Sunday movies. Mr. Zorn staged a strenuous campaign in the newspapers and by a house to house canvass and succeeded in convincing the majority of the voters that Sunday movies would benefit the city.

Another Illinois town where the blue law advocates lost out at a recent election, is Wilmette, that exclusive north shore suburb voting for Sunday movies. It is understood that Wilmette may have a motion picture theatre at an early date.

Upon the presentation of a petition signed by a large number of business men and residents of the town, the city council of Ortonville, Minn., introduced recently an ordinance which would allow showing of pictures on Sunday evenings after 8:30. The council will attempt to reach a decision on the matter in the near future.

Martin's Ferry will probably have Sunday movies as a regular diet as a result of the dismissal of 39 charges by the Belmont Grand Jury under Ohio statutes against exhibitors for keeping open on Sunday. Theatre owners are circulating a petition asking a referendum on the Sunday Movie Ordinance enacted by the Council. In the case the referendum is granted, the ordinance cannot become effective until after the 1929 election. So, in all likelihood, the movie houses will remain open on Sundays.

In a hotly contested election to decide whether or not the people in the town of Morrill, Nebraska, desired Sunday motion picture entertainment, a record vote of 206 was cast, with the result that the Sunday movie proposition was lost by a total of six votes. 127 votes supported Sunday movies and 133 were cast against them.

Labor Disputes On Wane

Still Some Trouble at Kansas City But Musicians in Other Cities Reach Agreements

A GENERAL quieting-down among participants in recent labor controversies is noticeable at the present writing and eventual agreement appears in sight between those who are still at odds, according to reports received this week. A few points still report trouble, while in other cities amicable understandings have been reached.

In Kansas City, where there has been considerable disturbance due to employment of non-union musicians who were part of a traveling stage band, J. W. Holmes, manager of the Capitol theatre, has reported to police that he has received a threat that if stench bombs would not settle the difficulty, dynamite would be used.

At Salem, Ore., union musicians employed in the three Salem theatres have been forced out as the result of a recent strike on the part of stage hands. It is a sympathetic move on the part of the musicians, and up to the present the stage hands are holding out for their demands and refusing to arbitrate.

Contrary to the above situations, sections in the northwest operated by the John Hamrick Blue Mouse chain and San Francisco musicians are reported to have settled their dispute.

Hamrick has signed a three-year contract with the musicians' union to take care of music at various houses which are also equipped with sound apparatus.

The San Francisco report states that musicians have been granted practically all demands they made upon theatre owners. A. A. Greenbaum, representing Local No. 6, and A. M. Bowles, chairman of Allied Amusement Industries, the latter controlling most of the houses involved in the controversy, have announced a settlement in which musicians were granted an increase of one-sixth of their present wages, retroactive to Sept. 1. In addition to the increase, they were granted a six-day week in all theatres where the six-day provision was not already in effect. Other demands granted will increase the minimum number of local musicians who must be paid under such conditions as a musical show having its own orchestra, and the employment of an orchestra in theatres wired for sound pictures.

J. C. Brady Will Be One of Leaders at Convention

When the members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America flock to Toronto, Ontario, for the 1928 convention of the association, October 16, 17 and 18, they will meet the outstanding figures of the field of independent exhibitors in Canada in the person of John C. Brady, proprietor of the Madison Theatre, Toronto, regional vice-president of the M. P. T. O., president of the Ontario Division of the organization, and chairman of the general convention committee.

In point of years Mr. Brady is a veteran among veterans, as he has been a resident of Toronto since 1866 when he was old enough to perform military service in connection with the Fenian trouble in Canada. But he is still young enough to be a fighter and a champion of the rights of independent exhibitors.

Joseph Schildkraut, who is about finished his featured role in "Show Boat," will play the leading role in "The Devil," which Universal will produce for next season.

Ruth Elder Embarks on Free Lance Career

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 3.—Ruth Elder has embarked on a free lance film career, following Paramount's non-renewal of her contract, which was for one picture.

While the aviatrix proved herself a capable actress, Paramount is said to feel that the salary paid her was too much for her current importance, as she was signed immediately after her trans-Atlantic flight and then occupied all the front pages. A year passed before she started work. In the meantime, it is figured, much publicity value was lost, and instead of being starred, Miss Elder was cast as leading lady opposite Richard Dix in "Moran of the Marines."

She may appear in a picture for Columbia as a free lance.

New Glyn Series for Sound Pictures?

(Hollywood Bureau Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 3.—Paramount is reported negotiating a new agreement with Elinor Glyn covering a series of original stories for sound production.

Her last story under the old contract, "Three Week Ends," is now being made with Clara Bow in the stellar role.

New British Production Company Formed

A NEW British film production company, Regal Films, was recently launched which will undertake to complete six feature pictures during the first year.

Behind the venture are the well known chain theatre operators, A. E. and D. A. Abrahams; Charles Gulliver, vaudeville magnate; John Maxwell, chairman of British International, and Sam Berney, an Abrahams associate.

E. Oswald Brooks, in the past active with Pathe, Mutual and Gaumont, has been appointed production manager. Shooting on the first picture has already started at the Stoll studios at Cricklewood.

Stock Gambling Seen As Cause of Poor Films of companies that are paying normal dividends and which are soundly established.

Reports from New York that heads of prominent producing and distributing companies posted "no stock market transactions during business hours by employees" are said to have caused stock brokers doing a large business with the film colony great concern. An official of one branch brokerage house having many picture accounts, recently stated that his office averaged about 250 phone calls daily from studios regarding market quotations. One broker is said to have offered the free installation of a ticker in a studio, pointing out to the studio officials that the company would save the cost and time of hundreds of phone calls weekly.

Brokers Get Big Play

Broker branch offices in Hollywood get a big play from the film colony and the morning hours from seven to ten finds them jammed to the doors. With coast time three and four hours earlier than New York, stock exchange transactions are posted in local offices starting at seven in the morning. A smart casting agent who handles a select number of people, has been transacting most of his business with film officials and directors in the brokerage offices in the early morning hours, as he finds it possible to catch his prospects in those places during the course of two or three days.

How long present conditions will continue is a question. As long as they do continue, there will be studio executives and others trying to produce motion pictures involving millions of dollars while their main thoughts are on the stock they are holding for sensational rises and huge profits.

Shaw Ready To Dicker for Screen Rights

"Executors Might Sell Plays for 6 Pence Each," He Tells News Correspondent

By Heinrich Fraenkel

Berlin Correspondent of Motion Picture News

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Happening to be in London I, yesterday, had the opportunity to meet George Bernard Shaw when he was volunteering to do a little scene for a German sound film concern.

It will be remembered that, some time ago, "G. B. S." did a like turn for Fox by consenting to be "Movietoned" in the garden of his country house. His friendly attitude towards sound films and his readiness to put in a personal appearance, Shaw claims to be due to the fact that this useful invention would permanently save him the bother of having to go abroad lecturing or of even to contemplate such unpleasant vista.

After a vain effort (stopped by the authorities) to plant the machinery in the Whitehall neighborhood, we went out to the Elstree studio and Shaw improvised a little scene with his friend Ivor Montagu, the young British film producer. Shaw did his "job" as conscientiously as any actor, and only after repeated rehearsals would he allow the scene to be shot.

On the way out to the studio I asked Mr. Shaw, if there is any foundation in the story that, on principle, he would never part with the screen rights of his books and plays. Mr. Shaw told me that, although he certainly can afford to take his time and wait for offers which would satisfy him in every respect, he certainly harbors not the least principle of barring his literary work from being screened. On the contrary, he told me, he is very keen and fully decided on disposing of this property during his life time, "as otherwise his executors might give it away for six pence apiece." Obviously G. B. S. was quite in earnest.

As a matter of fact, Bernard Shaw is a firm believer in the ever-growing hold of the movies on the entertainment market. He is firmly convinced, so he told me, that the legitimate stage is, in the long run, doomed as a business proposition, being quite unable to compete with the movies. As to his opinion on the development of talkies, Mr. Shaw refused to be drawn, countering with the final argument that, being at this very moment engaged as the star of a Phono film concern, although he did not receive any pay for his services, it would be unfair for him to make a statement on the matter.

Completes Plans for Quebec Famous House

Early plans for the new Famous Players house in Quebec City, Quebec, have been completed by Thomas W. Lamb, the New York architect. It has been announced that the theatre, which will be started early next spring, will cost approximately $1,000,000. It will have talking equipment. Famous Players officials have asked permission to erect bridge over McWilliam street to provide for the entrance to the theatre.

Keith-Albee-Orpheum interests recently reconstructed the Auditorium Theatre in Quebec City at considerable expense.

Levigard, "U" Director, to Produce 2 in Europe

Joseph Levigard, Universal director, will depart for Berlin next month to make two pictures in Europe for Universal, the first to be "The House of Glass," from Max Marcin's play, and the second "Fallen Angels," by Arthur Somers Roche. Mary Nolan, it is said, may be the lead for the productions.

Jack Hawks has adapted the Marcin play.

Novel Voice Testing Device In Use by Central Casting Bureau

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 3.—To discover talking picture possibilities in the ranks of extras, the Central Casting Bureau here is installing an amplifying system in conjunction with its telephone switchboard, which segregates any one of approximately eight hundred voices phoning in each hour and gives it the same effect as the recording systems in the studios.

The idea was conceived by Dave Allen, head of the bureau, who found during telephone conversations, several extras who were worth special consideration because of their voices. Engineers are now building new apparatus for telephone switchboards. Through these boards go thousands of calls daily giving extras work. There are equally as many incoming from extras seeking work. When the amplifying segregation system is completed, Allen hopes to secure a complete filing system of voices showing exceptional possibilities for producers' use and to aid unknowns in the extra ranks.

Film Boards Aid Storm Swept Florida

Instructs Members to Cooperate With Red Cross and Offers Free Films for Benefits

THE fund for the hurricane-swept section of Florida will be materially increased through efforts of distributor-members of the Film Boards of Trade, instructions to the 32 boards in this country to cooperate with the American Red Cross, having been sent out from the home office. Free films will be offered to those who offer benefit performances and this gratuity is expected to greatly speed the organization's plans. Many theatres have been affected by the storm, business in the area is practically at a standstill and latest reports place the death toll at more than 2,000.

Reports from theatremen, who have visited the storm damaged territory, are that practically all the independent theatres from West Palm Beach to Fort Lauderdale are badly damaged. The Flamingo Theatre at West Palm Beach was totally destroyed, but the Stanley at that place has reopened. The Oakley Theatre at Lake Worth was completely demolished and at this time the town has no theatre. The roof was blown off the Lyric at Stuart, which is managed by John Hancock. The Polk Theatre at Lakeland lost its roof.

C. C. Klutts, who operates the Glades theatre at Moore Haven, and the Clewiston house, both cities on the shore of Lake Okeechobee, gives an interesting account of the recent storm.

He and his wife located a nice heavy refrigerator car on a siding about 15 miles from Moore Haven, they and three families taking possession. With the dawn they made their way back to Moore Haven, finding their home pretty well damaged but no material damage to the theatre. However, when he finally got to Clewiston he found his house there badly wrecked.

"However, we will get busy and try to rebuild," says Klutts, "as we did two years ago. We have a refugee camp here and I am trying to help them out with some good pictures."

Atlanta and Jacksonville theatres have rallied to the call for help, a joint benefit show being staged at Loew's Capitol in Atlanta, with talent from Keith's Georgia and the Howard Theatre, assisting. All houses cooperated to make the advance sale a success. In Jacksonville, Manager Guy Kenimer of the Florida theatre, also gave a benefit performance at $1 admission. General orders from the Sparks office fixed Sept. 30 for benefits in every theatre operated by the Sparks circuit and every dollar will be turned over to the Red Cross fund. Charlie Morrison, of the Palace, Temple and Arcade in Jacksonville, also held a benefit at the Temple under the auspices of the American Legion.

The first morning show ever staged at Daytona Beach was presented at the Publix-Florida theatre for the local Red Cross. 700 people attended and witnessed their first Vitaphone act presentation. This program was furnished through the courtesy of the Vitaphone Corp. and about $500 was turned over to the relief fund. M. J. Mullin, of the Publix maintenance division, has been at Palm Beach making a survey of damage done by the storm.

Out in the northwest, talent from all Portland, Ore. theatres joined in a benefit at the Auditorium. It was given under the direction of the Portland Fire Bureau and the united efforts added a total of $27,000 to the fund.

Haines Signs With M-G-M For Long Term

William Haines last week signed a new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer which will keep him with that organization for a long length of time. "A Man's Man" is his next starring vehicle.

"King of Kings" Being Universally Exhibited

"The King of Kings," Pathe's special which was set for release in over 300 theatres in the United States on September 30, is now being shown in every civilized country in the world, Pathe claims.

In France it is being shown under the title "Le Roi des Rois"; In Hungary

Norman, Okla., Repeals Ancient Blue Law

AN ancient ordinance prohibiting the exhibition of motion pictures on a Sunday was repealed last month in Norman, Oklahoma, where a city election gave the showmen a slim margin of victory of some 40 votes, 2500 votes being cast by the townsfolk. The opposition to the Sunday shows put up a stiff fight, but under the leadership of H. N. Britten, manager of the Sooner and University Theatres, the issue was carried successfully. The town's theatres have now been open for five consecutive Sundays and the majority of its inhabitants are pleased with the change.

"Kiralok Kiralya"; in Norway "Konngernes Konge"; in Holland "De Koning der Koningen"; in Brazil "O Rei dos Reis"; in Sweden "Konungarnas Konung"; in Germany "Der Konig der Konig"; in Mexico "El Rey de los Reyes"; in Cuba and Spain "El Rey de Reyes"; in Poland "Krol Krolow"; in Portugal the same as in Brazil; in Belgium the same as in France; in Italy "Il Re dei Re"; in Finland "Konungarnts Konung"; and in Denmark "Kongenes Konge." The meaning of all the titles is the same as in English.

T. O. of W. Pa. Asked to Endorse New City Division

The M. P. T. O. of W. Pa., has received a letter asking for the indorsement from the organization of a proposed ordinance which has been introduced into city council providing for the creation of a Division of Fire Prevention, and giving that division a considerable sway of power. The particular clause in the bill of interest to theatre owners is one requiring the installation and maintenance of a complete outfit for fire prevention and fighting, containing such items as portable fire apparatus, axes, pikes, hose, hose-reels, ladders, chemical extinguishers and portable pumps.

Fred Herrington, secretary of the M. P. T. O., in commenting on the proposed ordinance, said that even though theatre owners were now taking great precaution to prevent fires, this bill, if passed, would involve considerable additional expense on the part of exhibitors, and in view of these present measures, it didn't look reasonable to him that such extra requirements as the bill provides for would be justifiable.

FBO Finishes 3 Special Productions

"The Air Legion," a story of the air mail service with Ben Lyon, Antonio Moreno and Martha Sleeper; "Tropic Madness," with Leatrice Joy; and "Hey Rube!", with Gertrude Olmsted, are three new specials that have been recently completed at the Coast studios of FBO.

Special "Circus" Showing For English Royalty

A command performance of Charlie Chaplin's "The Circus" was witnessed last Wednesday night, September 19, by Their Majesties, King George and Queen Mary, at Balmoral Castle in Scotland. The Duke and Duchess of York were present also.

Neighborhood House May Play Day Date with Downtown Theatre

THE opening of the new Fisher Theatre, West Grand and Second boulevards, Detroit, Mich., will bring first run downtown shows to a neighborhood section, according to recent report.

The Kunsky interests, major downtown operators, will operate the house under lease from Fisher Bros. No mention has been made of affiliation, but this project will be the first to bring together two groups situated in the foremost ranks financially.

There is a strong possibility of an even more conspicuous move. The Fisher may present first run vehicles day and date with one of the downtown Kunsky houses. The program would include Publix stage acts. This would save patrons living north of the boulevard a six mile journey downtown to enjoy the screen's latest.

Completion of the Fisher is scheduled for next month. The house will seat 3,000.

Atmospheric Theatre in Tropical America

The Encanto theatre has introduced to Cuba the atmospheric design which has grown to such great proportions of popularity in the United States. It is the work of a Cuban architect who has brought to this production the highest standards of design and decoration as exemplified in the best houses in this country. The exterior of the Encanto is shown above. Other views of this playhouse appear on the two pages following.

ENCANTO BRINGS ATMOSPHERIC DESIGN TO CUBA

WITH the opening of the Encanto in Havana, which, incidentally, was one of the most important theatrical events in that city in recent months, Cuba became the home of what is generally regarded as the most beautiful playhouse in tropical America. Here is a theatre, with a seating capacity of 1,500, which in architectural style, appointment and equipment, compares with the finest examples of the beautiful and comfortable cinemas dotting the cities of the United States.

The Encanto (a name which translated into English means Enchantment) is owned by Messrs. Solis, Entrialgo y Cia., proprietors of the largest department store in Havana. It was designed by the Cuban architect, Eurique Gil y Castellanos, who has followed the atmospheric type of design and whose thorough knowledge of the architectural beauties of old Spain and Colonial America he has adroitly worked into the decoration. The interior suggests a magnificent Spanish Colonial garden of the earlier days.

Just as it matches in charm of its architectural scheme that standard obtaining in the best houses in the United States, the Encanto here is equipped to afford comfort to its patrons.

It has Carrier equipment for air conditioning and cooling, and its pipe organ, screen, projection equipment are all of standard American make. It is the first theatre in Latin America to be equipped with an air conditioning and cooling plant.

SPANISH ATMOSPHERIC DESIGN AT NEW HEIGHTS OF BEAUTY

Loew's Louisville Regarded by Ebersson, Architect, His Best Work in This Style

WITH the opening of Loew's and United Artists' new Louisville theatre, Louisville, Ky., on September 1st, there was added to an already large number of atmospheric theatres in the Spanish style in this country a structure which in many respects surpasses its predecessors.

The Louisville is regarded by the architect who designed it, John Ebersson, "the most pleasing and most unusual atmospheric theatre that my organization ever designed."

This new playhouse has a seating capacity of 3,500. The orchestra floor accommodates 2,500 seats, with 1,000 in the balcony—400 of which are loge seats and 600 in rear balcony. It represents a total investment, including real estate, construction and equipment, said to exceed $2,000,000. It has a main entrance on fourth street, in the very heart of the theatrical district of Louisville.

In style of design and ornamentation the theatre represents the Andalusian Spanish architecture—a note carried out from the lobby to the proscenium arch. The facade similarly is a representation of the Spanish style. This is worked out in pulschrome terra cotta, effectively floodlighted from a marquee. The chief architectural feature of the exterior is a main upright display sign, rising as a central turret and worked into the design of the facade.

The entrance is of paneled wood, with wood grille doors. The main lobby is a gorgeous Spanish room, cor-rely furnished and notable for the unusual lighting effects obtained through indirect cove lighting, which eliminates the cluttering ceiling fixtures which in many instances obtrude upon the architectural schemes of these necessarily large and roomy portions of the theatre. The outer lobby has a carved and polychrome wood ceiling. It is 3 stories high, and features a Spanish staircase leading to mezzanine and balcony. Hand wrought iron rails on stairways and upper levels are striking features of the ornamentation. There is a combination brass strip terazzo and faience tile floor in this lobby.

The auditorium represents an outdoor garden, with the sky effect particularly realistic due to adroit application of indirect lighting. The main light sources in the auditorium are 12 massive shells in the rear under the balcony. The "cove lighting" system is applied in the niches decorating the sidewalls and behind the battlements.

A four-circuit lighting system is used, with the colors continuously changing to give variety to the scene during presentations. Deep recessed illuminated garden niches and a classic fountain in side stage and various "reveals" in the sidewalls give an almost unlimited variety of detail to the architectural scheme of the auditorium.

The theatre is splendidly equipped. Its furnishings include many authentic period pieces. There is a specially designed ventilating system, the shell diffusers for the lighting under the balcony also acting to diffuse air from the ventilating and cooling plant.

The projection booth is spacious and finely equipped. There is an elevating orchestra and organ pit. The Louisville is wired to reproduce Vitaphone and Movietone synchronization, and it is perhaps the first of the theatres to include in its original plan a feature of decoration introduced to apply where sound films alone, without an orchestra accompaniment, are presented. This feature is the orchestra pit, the absence of which, with the platform lowered, is replaced by a tropical garden effect built inside the orchestra pit rail.

The seating arrangement works out perfectly for unobstructed vision of stage and screen from every chair in the auditorium.

Phototone is sweeping the country. Hundreds of these fine instruments have been installed by exhibitors everywhere. Phototone has proved itself. It is affording enjoyable entertainment to hundreds of thousands of movie fans. It is solving the music problem for many of America's keenest minded and progressive exhibitors.

The Phototone is not cheap music—it is the finest possible to produce, yet the apparatus is so scientifically built that low cost is a feature. The Phototone is all electric, with instant control made possible with triple combination, double motors, double turntables and double electric pick-ups.

New record service including special sound records is now available for Phototone exhibitors—Mail the attached coupon now, for complete details.

Air Conditioned by Carrier

El Teatro Encanto has Manufactured Weather

THE tropical climate of Havana brings torrid days and nights not conducive to attendance at the theatre. Messrs. Solis, Entrialgo & Cia, in equipping El Teatro Encanto with Carrier Manufactured Weather, have provided for their patrons a cool, refreshing, healthfully dehumidified atmosphere, a place where entertainment may be enjoyed, regardless of outdoor temperature or humidity. This is the first theatre in Latin America to be equipped with an air conditioning and refrigerating plant, and, so far as we know, the first theatre in any tropical city to be equipped with this modern contribution to health and comfort. This is the same air conditioning system, including Carrier Centrifugal Refrigeration, which provides Manufactured Weather in such great theatres as the Roxy and Paramount in New York, in the Carlton in London, the Paramount in Paris, and in an evergrowing list of modern theatres in and out of the United States.

Theatre owners, architects and engineers are invited to investigate the results accomplished by the Carrier System for Air Conditioning. Write for the Book, "Theatre Cooling and Conditioning," and ask for a visit from one of our Engineers.

Q Here is the concluding instalment of Mr. Rigaumont's article on "The Relation of Sound Pictures to Theatre Architecture," the first part of which, suggesting multiple sound stations to effectively distribute amplified sound in large theatres, appeared in the August SHOWMAN. Here the author projects in detailed plan—

The Future 10,000 Seat Theatre Made Possible by Sound Pictures

Enlarged Projection and Colored Films Will "Throw" the Show—Balconies Will be Eliminated in Theatres Seating Less Than 5,000

By Victor A. Rigaumont, A. I. A.

(Copyright, 1928, by Victor A. Rigaumont)

LARGE theatres of today have reached their maximum seating capacity. For instance, the Roxy at 50th Street on Broadway, New York City, has a seating capacity of over 6,000 distributed on three levels, the farthest seat being as far as practicable from the stage, and the farthest side seat being the maximum distance from the center of the screen.

The Roxy, which is the world's perfect large theatre, seems to have reached the limit of size, presentation of stage spectacles, singing and picture projection. If the distance from the last seats to the stage were to be increased, the actors and the stage would be dwarfed in size, their voices would be faintly heard, and there would be an impression of vastness that it would become necessary to put on the stage immense spectacles with greater casts, choruses, and orchestras—if the great area of this type of theatre is to be kept from appearing empty. Extraordinary spectacles and productions are very costly and, unless the attendance is continuously maintained at an excess peak, the financial success of such large theatres becomes a serious problem.

To stimulate attendance at the present

large theatres, a great deal of money is spent for expensive productions, resulting in high prices of admission. Some weeks are profitable, depending upon the feature picture and the season. The cause of unprofitable weeks can be traced to competitive theatres in the vicinity which have smaller seating capacities, smaller expenditures on the stage, and smaller admission prices for very good shows.

Sound pictures will stimulate theatre attendance, providing the price of admission is proportionately reduced with the economies effected by the elimination of costly spectacles and large orchestras, through the medium of talking moving pictures in color which should be as large in size as the present stage settings and should be accompanied by synchronized music of equal quality.

In order to bring down the price of admission below that of any other competitor, it means that greater seating capacity than ever before attempted must be attained without increasing the cost of stage productions, orchestras and advertising. In fact, these costs should be less.

Theatres seating 10,000 persons are far from being impossible. In other words, a theatre twice the size of the Roxy with seats no further away from the stage—let us say with exactly the same seating arrangement—together with the same size orchestra and presentation are possible, mechanically, through the medium of synchronized sound pictures and music.

The accompanying diagram illustrates the basic idea of placing two 5,000 seat theatres facing the same joint stage, resulting in a seating capacity of 10,000. While sound lasts, this arrangement will be an advantage; if sound dies, there can be two independent stages by readily constructing a central wall creating a stage for each theatre having joint lobbies, all under same operation and management.

THE joint stage is to be entirely mechanically operated, the removable projection booth being located between each facing each audience. This projection booth shall be so constructed as to be removed together with screens by sliding or lowering the entire equipment to the offstage, in case it is necessary to show a chorus spectacle or orchestra with real performers, the production and scenery being so arranged so as to play to both audiences simultaneously.

However, the best and most profitable adaptation of this scheme is the elimina-

IT'S THE seemingly unimportant things that sometimes make or break a theater. The lounge lighting, for example. If your lounge is lighted glaringly or unattractively, your patrons won't tell you. But your box-office receipts will suffer. Progressive exhibitors know the box-office value of good lighting.

Good lighting is dependent upon good lamps. When you use Edison MAZDA* Lamps you get lamps that are of a known standard of lamp quality. In addition, you receive through reliable theater supply organizations the engineering services of the Edison Lamp Works of General Electric Company.

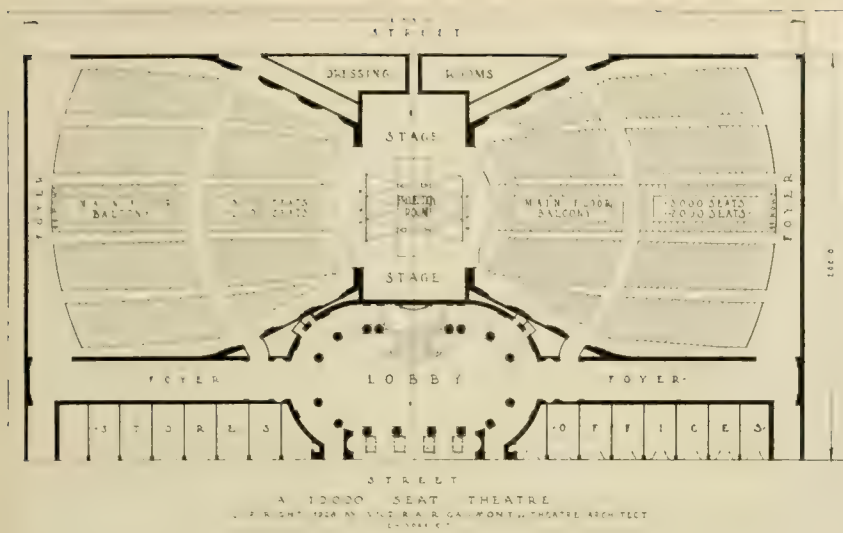

Examine your lighting. Write today for your copy of the new free bulletin, "The Lighting of Theaters and Auditoriums." You will find in it many valuable ideas for the proper lighting of your particular type and size of theater. tion of actors, orchestras and other dependent employees, together with the elimination of scenery, electrical effects and equipment, and substitute therefor sound pictures which faithfully reproduce all of the entertainment now placed before the public at such present high costs.

In order to convey the impression of a large stage in its true size and effects, it is necessary firstly to create colored films with the same electrical effects and stage atmosphere; secondly, to enlarge the screen to a size equal to the usual large stage setting, thirty-six feet wide by eighteen feet high or larger. In order to project, for instance, a musical comedy on such a large screen, it will be necessary to have two levels of three projectors, or six projection machines, for each large screen, all simultaneously operated and synchronized with speech and orchestration of course, it will also be necessary to have six cameras photographing the actors and the settings at the studio, the cameras being located in the same respective positions as the projectors will be at the theatre. The theory of projecting through the back of the screen is nothing new, and has been well accomplished before and can be perfected.

The entire future of sound pictures rests upon faithful distribution and reproduction of speech with all its mannerisms, softness and shadings. In the preceding installment of this article, my theory of frequent horn stations, each toned to its zone, throughout all parts of the auditorium would apply to this super type of theatre. Furthermore, no innovation will be fully developed unless it will be more profitable than present methods, and the profit in sound pictures will be the economies effected over the present methods of operation and showmanship. This may mean the adjustment of labor conditions, but the mechanical perfections generally have resulted in greater production, therefore, greater employment as may be illustrated, for instance, in this suggestion of a greater projection booth and more machines.

The real estate problem, in connection with a 10,000 seat theatre, is by no means secondary. It will require more auditorium main floor area but, if correctly planned, the lobbies need not be proportionately increased, inasmuch as our modern lobbies of today are mainly utilized to police and herd the standing patrons, uncomfortably, until these underseated theatres of 5,000 seats upwards are cleared to seat the waiting audience. Larger, practical theatres, which are possible with sound pictures, will materially solve the question of congestion, dissatisfaction and resultant kick-backs, and will draw better attendance looking for seats to sit upon.

An Independent Weighs "Sound" and Sees "Normalcy" Ahead

AN exhibitor who has had the opportunity of studying the so-called "sound situation" at home, and made the opportunity of studying it in New York—which he visited to confer with officials of Electrical Research and the R. C. A. companies as well as observe the reactions of New York picturegoers to presentations at the Broadway theatres—announced the following conclusion at which he has arrived, to this interviewer:

"I am not signing any contract for installation at this time, although I believe I will do so in the next six months."

Thus, W. H. Harris, treasurer and manager of the Sycamore Amusement Co., Inc., of Petersburg, Va., operating the New Palace Theatre there, sizes up the sound picture as it affects the independent theatre operating in the smaller cities of the country. Mr. Harris' visit to New York primarily was concerned with the object of solving the "interchangeability" question—a problem which probably more than anything else is the always fringed with alarm on the subject of a successful investment and is logically dependent upon rental income besides the rental of the theatre proper. A 10,000 seat theatre should be necessarily located where the crowd is or will come. This further concentration of "10,000-ready-to-spend" patrons demands that the project be designed with many stores and offices, the rental value of which would be handsome and these would materially assist in financing and carrying the investment.

There are several cities in the United States and the rest of the world which could accommodate immense theatres which this article advocates. However, the joint stage with dual auditorium can also be applied to smaller cities, the feature being that theatres up to 5,000 seats or less can be constructed without balconies, there being 2,500 seats or less within range of the stage on each main floor. This would result in far more reasonable construction costs, even though it means more ground, because we all are aware that the large balconies of big or small theatres are extremely expensive and the cost per balcony seat is far greater than the cost of constructing main floor seats.

The elimination of balconies will result in an auditorium of lesser height and volume, and will produce better acoustics and will eliminate grand staircases and elevators and save construction costs. Above all, it will mean better control, faster manipulation of crowds on one level, a one-price admission, and a tremendous saving of lost motion and money which, because of the unlimited possibilities of sound pictures, will result in—exactly what every theatre owner is looking for—better attendance and more profit.

"I agree with Mr. Johnson's editorials in which he says 'there will be interchangeability.' It is not a question of interchangeability, but when! On my visit in New York I could not get any information whatsoever on this point from the Electrical Research or the R. C. A. company representatives with whom I conferred. Time alone will tell which is the best sound system to install.

"I do not believe that music with the film will become especially popular to the point of eliminating from the better theatres the orchestras and organs.

My business has increased about 25 per cent since my competitor put in the sound system, and I have not increased my expense. I firmly believe that within three months the novelty of talkies will wear off, and we will settle down once more to a safe and sane business. The theatre giving the best show for the money getting the business."

The auditorium of the Selzer Theatre, a typical example of how effectively one central chandelier can be used to ornament and illuminate.

ELECTRIC light, in common with other electric developments, has made tremendous advancements in the past few years. The art of decorative lighting by means of efficient and ornamental fixtures has so improved that new theatres, erected by competent architects and master showmen, depend on decorative lighting effects to add the finishing touch.

Necessary as a utility, artificial illumination as a decorative medium is unsurpassed. In addition to being a decorative medium in itself, light stimulates other decorative medium and ornamental effects. No matter how beautiful the furnishing and decorative treatment of a theatre may be, certainly, they lose much of their attractiveness, if good and sufficient lighting is absent. Correspondingly, they gain much when the proper light is present.

Upon close analysis and comparison, it will be found that no other equipment of the same cost will decorate a theatre more effectively than lighting fixtures. The interior of a theatre being naturally dark, decorative illumination is most prominent and conspicuous, because it is so readily noticeable. Consideration should also be given to the design and appearance of lighting fixtures when they are not illuminated. They should conform to the architectural detail or period, as well as the spirit of the building. The appearance of and the effect created by lighting fixtures cannot help but make an impression on the minds of the people who see them. The impression is either a good or bad one.

Theatre men who have investigated modern illumination and its psychological effects on their audiences know that the selection of the correct and proper decorative lighting equipment is just as important and just as profitable, as the selection and booking of good pictures. People may not come to a theatre to see the lighting effects, but if the lighting effects do not provide proper and sufficient illumination, comfort and relief of eyestrain, chances are that these people will go to theatres that do have these modern improvements and comforts. Today, the successful showman does not depend entirely on the picture to draw. Modern decorative lighting equipment provides another medium, most economical and most effective.

THE time to consider lighting fixtures for a new building is when the building is being planned, rather than wait until the time lighting fixtures are to be bought. If this procedure is followed, the best results will be obtained. It is, of course, not necessary to make purchase at this time, but the lighting fixture plans should be then made, provisions made for certain conditions, circuits, etc. Bids and estimates can be considered later, when the time comes around to purchase this equipment. Oftentimes, desired effects and advantages have to be passed up, because proper and sufficient thought was not given to certain matters, in advance. Because so much depends on proper decorative illumination, the general arrangement of electric outlets, the location and quantity, as well as the style or type of lighting fixtures most suitable for the individual locations, should be determined well in advance of wiring the building. the building, its physical proportions, size and general decorating scheme are all factors which govern. Proper consideration given to all these factors in the plans, will insure not only the most suitable, appropriate and effective installation, but the most economical, as well.

The photograph illustrating the Seltzer Theatre clearly shows how a well planned, modern lighting installation will enhance the appearance of a theatre auditorium. The owner and architect of this theatre had in mind using ten small chandeliers, in two rows of five each, suspended from the ceiling. With this plan in mind, they came to the fixture manufacturer. After consultation, the plans were changed so that only one chandelier would be used. Note how advantageously this one chandelier enriches the decorative appearance of the auditorium. Visualize these two arrangements and compare the different effects. How much more suitable and appropriate and up-to-date is the one rich chandelier, which cost no more than the ten small ones; how much more attractive the theatre to its guests; how much more of a

Including Analysis of Key City Attendance Averages

Above Average Business	AA	Very light new construction
Average Business	A	Light new construction
Under Average Business	UA	Moderately heavy construction
		Heavy new construction

The map of the United States shown here is divided into seven territories, with colored shading indicating the division of new proposed theatre building as represented for the period from August 15th to September 15th. This new construction is represented in valuation of dollars and cents rather than number of projects.

The shading is in four densities; solid, which represents the greatest value of proposed theatres; heavy stipple, which is second in valuation of new construction; medium, which areas represent conservative building; and the very light areas, where the investment in new theatre projects is very light. The information used in compiling the statistics visualized by the map was obtained through several reliable sources, and the map is to be considered as very nearly accurate in representing comparative theatre building activities in various sections of the country.

These attendance statistics were compiled from an analysis of the Key City Reports, published weekly in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and other sources of information gathered by this publication.

THE trend toward the building of smaller theatres requiring a lesser investment, indicated as growing in proportions in our report for July, is shown to be reaching its peak as a notable feature of new theatre construction during 1928, in this current resume of building statistics for the period August 15 to September 15. A considerable increase in the number of projects brings the total of investments estimated for new theatre buildings up to $10,093,000, as compared with a total of $8,286,000 for the previous period.

Figures for the current map show that 49 new projects were scheduled, or an increase of 15 over the number reported last month. It is only in the cost per theatre and cost per seat columns that the figures for the current map are below those of last month. And in this phase of the building program of 1928, the same trend has been evident for several months.

The decrease in the investment per project while the total investment for new theatre building continues to hold up to our original prediction that 1928 would see an even greater volume of investment in theatre properties than the previous record year of 1927, is highly significant. Obsolescence, or "theatre mortality," a factor which this journal repeatedly has stressed in editorials anent the sporadic cry of pessimism and alarm over the "over seating" bogey, is undoubtedly a factor in this new trend which theatre building has taken. The mammoth de luxe theatre was rushed to the fore to supply the demands for such amusement resorts in downtown sections of the big cities, now the pendulum swings toward the smaller theatres of the metropolis, with the need for replacement of worn out theatres with structures designed to function efficiently as homes of the motion picture and its allied entertainments.

Going back to the report, in the August Showman we find that the cost per theatre on new projects scheduled during that period was $220,000. Last month's figures showed the average cost per theatre was $243,700. And the figures for the current report reduce the cost per theatre estimate to $206,000.

Going back to the complete record, our report for the period August 15 to September 15, shows that 49 new theatres were scheduled for construction in the United States. The total of new seats is 52,110, with the average seats per theatre 1064, the average cost per theatre $206,000, and the average cost per seat $193.60.

THE North Atlantic States, with a total of 12 new projects, totalling 16,200 seats to be constructed at a cost of $4,500,000, still leads in new construction in the United States, as illustrated on the accompanying map. Two of these 12 theatres are to cost over $1,000 to erect.

Second to that are the Pacific Coast states, where a heavy building program continues. The new projects reported during the current period from that section total 10, with 11,210 new seats, to be built at a cost of $2,345,000. One of these new theatres is to cost more than $1,000,000.

The middle section of the map comes next, with new theatres scheduled to be built at a cost of $1,333,000 for the largest number of new projects of any section—a total of 15. The figures thus show that the cost per theatre in this section is $88,867. These theatres will add 10,900 new seats, the average number of seats per theatre being 727, at an average cost per seat of $122.24.

New England reports 3 new projects to cost $770,000 and have a total of 1867 seats. Average costs per theatre are thus $256,000, and average cost per seat $137.47.

In the Southwestern States 5 new projects were announced, the total cost estimated at $745,000. This makes an average of $149,000 as the cost per theatre, and with 4,500 new seats provided for, the average cost per seat is $165.56.

The Western States reported that 4 new projects were scheduled, to add 3,700 new seats in that section, at a cost of $400,000. This is at the rate of $100,000 cost per theatre, and $108.00 cost per seat for an average of 925 seats per new theatre scheduled.

In the South Eastern States no new projects were launched during this period.

Canada is to have one new theatre to be built at a cost of $30,000 and seat 400 persons as the result of the launching of a new theatre project there during the period.

New Jersey and California each are to have five new theatres as a result of the scheduled building plans announced in this report. Pennsylvania is in second place with four and New York and Illinois tied for third place with 2 new projects each.

Reports from equipment distributors show that their business is ahead of the same period last year—a condition which has prevailed throughout 1928, with few exceptions and little variation. According to statements by the national distributors of theatre equipment September this year is well ahead of the same month in 1927. The previous month went slightly below last year's figures, but that was the exception over a considerable stretch, for July, June, May and April were well above the 1927 marks.

The installation of "sound" equipment is a large factor in this increased business. The high-intensity arc lamps for projectors, in consequence, are a leading item of the replacement business being done by the equipment concerns.

AS the map shows, theatre attendance during the August 15 to September 15 period was remarkably brisk in the key cities—which, by the way, are the only ones this department attempts to report in dealing with box office business around the country.

On the entire map, it will be observed, there is only one city rated at Under Average during the August 15 to September 15 period—and that Los Angeles, where a heat wave was a large factor in reducing attendance one week, and where the National Air Races, with their thrills and the attendant ballyhoo turned the minds of the average amusement seeker to spectacles of speed, daring and danger in the skies. The Hollywood theatres throughout the period did excellent business, but the downtown Los Angeles houses felt the opposition of heat one week and air races the next—and two weeks are quite enough to reduce averages based on four weeks of business.

The Labor Day holiday was a favorable factor in many cities, and the cooler weather speeded up business generally. But the conviction persists that a renewed interest in pictures is the direct benefit accruing to the larger theatres through the excitement which has been created over "sound films." Not alone the synchronized films, but all films are apparently commanding more attention and more enthusiasm than they were several months ago—in the days 'fore "The Jazz Singer," which must stand as a milestone in the history of this business evolution from "silence," to "sound," and also from apathy to enthusiasm in the motion pictures.

The talking and synchronized pictures continue to occupy the center of the stage as box office attractions. Among the sensational accomplishments credited to them during the period on which we are reporting, nothing is more convincing of their power to attract than the records of theatres which have reopened after summer darkness. Among the houses which closed for the summer after protracted periods of very poor business and which are now on their way back to popularity and a large following are the Regent in Pittsburgh, and Loew's Aldine in the same city. Both immediately jumped into a brisk stride with "sound" films as attractions. The Newman in Kansas City, which had been doing poorly for months, went dark for a brief period and then opened up again with a sound policy and the response made it look like the Newman of the days when it was the most popular house in that city. The Stillman in Cleveland was slated to go into retirement, when sound films came along and it is still operating, and very profitably.

THE individual attractions which proved the biggest box office factors during the period for the most part are sound accompanied. The Ten Best, which we rate here every month for the purpose of the record and such value as it may be in forecasting the strength of the films in later showings in the smaller theatres, we this month start off with "sound" films—the first five on the list falling into that classification. Our reports from the Key City first run houses show that the following were the films which earned the greatest number of Above Average records at the box offices. The list follows:

|-------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1. "Lilac Time" | 6. "Four Walls" |
| 2. "Street Angel" | 7. "Cardboard Lover" |
| 3. "Tempest" | 8. "Excess Baggage" |
| 4. "State Street Sadie" | 9. "The First Kiss" |
| 5. "Fazil" | 10. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" |

Some unusual individual records have been scored during the period by the sound pictures. For example:

"Lilac Time," played four weeks to big business at the Stillman, Cleveland, and topped a 12-year record at that house, beat the high record of "The Jazz Singer" at the Grand Central, St. Louis. "The Terror," which failed to figure in our "10 Best" only because it had comparatively few showings during the period of this record, established a new high mark at the Music Box in Seattle, gave the Midland in Kansas City the biggest week in several months, played to enormous business at advanced prices at the Warner theatre in Los Angeles, and scored a record "take" at the Mark Strand, Albany, N. Y., during a very hot week. "Lights of New York" played seven weeks at the Blue Mouse, Portland, did unprecedented business at the Stanley, Philadelphia, and played day and date at the New and Metropolitan, Baltimore, to big business. "Our Dancing Daughters," Metro's sound offering, also played to fine business at several houses, the Stanley, Baltimore, Loew's Temple, Birmingham, and Pantages in Salt Lake City, among them. "Street Angel" played four big weeks at the New, Baltimore; was held over for a second week at the Capitol, Cincinnati, and at the State, Minneapolis. Many remarkable records also went to such attractions as "State Street Sadie," "Women They Talk About," and "The Jazz Singer" continues to be heard from here and there about the country.

How to Avoid Operation Errors that Mar Presentations of "Sound" Pictures

By Russel H. McCullough

Supervisor of Projection and Electrical Equipment West Coast Theatres, Inc.

SOUND pictures are here to stay and future developments are expected. The present equipment which produces sound requires study for care and operation. We have had considerable experience with sound pictures and as yet we do not term them as being perfect. We believe, however, that it will take some time until the industry is capable and fully equipped to handle this new novelty with perfection. Some difficulty is encountered in teaching projectionists to operate sound equipment, and also everyone has a different opinion as to how loud or how soft the volume should be in the auditorium.

The West Coast Theatres have endeavored to teach their managers the importance of volume control of "sound pictures." Synchronized pictures can very easily be ruined by a projectionist or by someone around the theatre giving orders as to how the volume should be controlled. The manager himself, or some designated person, should control the volume of all sound productions, instead of letting anyone give instructions, as we have encountered. We find it necessary to make the music and speech as natural as possible with synchronized pictures. This requires experience and criticism from others.

It is well to remember that perfect volume control can not be judged at rehearsals, as during the time when sound pictures are being rehearsed the auditorium is most always empty. It is advisable to confer with your musical director or someone with musical knowledge to assist you with controlling the volume for sound pictures. The speaking part of sound pictures, you should be able to judge for yourself. The volume control is the most important part of sound pictures. The volume can not be judged from one certain part of the auditorium. Frequent visits are necessary to various parts of the auditorium to determine how the sound is coming through. With different capacities of patrons in the auditorium it will be necessary to change the volume control setting.

We have received complaints from patrons who have heard sound pictures. Most of them are because of music or speech being too loud or not loud enough. We realize, however, that it is impossible to please everyone concerned as to how the volume of sound pictures should be controlled, but with personal supervision it will eliminate severe criticism. Sound pictures are a new field and theatre patrons have not become accustomed to them.

To some theatre patrons a theatre does not seem natural without an orchestra or organ accompanying the picture. We find by properly rehearsing sound pictures and observing them closely at all times that our patrons are becoming used to them. The only subject which has not received severe criticism is the Movietone News and this is because theatre patrons are tired of the biff bang orchestras and organ music which have accompanied these subjects for so long. As to the Movietone News, this type of entertainment is demanded by the public.

The projection room in every theatre should always receive close attention. Every manager should make frequent visits to his projection room and keep in personal contact with his chief projectionist. The success of the performance depends largely upon the operation of this department. All requests for the replacement of parts and new equipment for the projection room should be investigated and granted, providing such requests are in order. All of our projection rooms on the West Coast Circuit are equipped with the best of equipment and always kept in very good condition, which insures us against any interruption during the performance which is likely to happen because of neglect.

Sound pictures have advanced the industry more than ever before. It is necessary that we keep up with the advancement and in order to do this we have to collect as much knowledge as possible. Projectionists are bringing forth every

Official Lists 6 Main Sources of Projection Booth Fires

SOME very interesting advice regarding the prevention of film fires in moving picture theatres has been prepared by W. A. Oswald, of Victoria, B. C., assistant fire marshal of the Province of British Columbia, for the guidance of all exhibitors and projectionists. It is information which contains many suggestions for the consideration of moving picture men everywhere. Mr. Oswald says:

"First: Carelessness in the laboratories sends out brand new prints in hazardous conditions. Shrinkage due to too fast drying, improper and imperfect spacing of sprocket holes, poor patches made with poor or defective cement are some of the cases of carelessness as applied to release features and are apt to lead to film fires.

"Second: Carelessness in the projection rooms of theatres in the form of allowing the projection machine to get into such shape that it ruins film. How many projectionists make a weekly or even a monthly complete inspection of their equipment? Can you tell right off-hand whether your sprocket teeth are under cut at all; to be undercut any is too much. Have you the same tension on both of the tension shoes? Is your aperture plate true? Is your gate true? How about the idlers? Have you too much tension on your shoes or on your takeup? Any one or more of these are potential fire-breeders. How do you care for the film while it is in your room? Do you occasionally slip your fingers along the edges to test the patches and feel for cracked holes? A patch came apart; the sprocket holes broke out or the film broke due to strain on one side and an aperture pop resulted; the heat of the film gave more fuel to the flame, and the lower magazine was soon ablaze; these are some of the answers to the question, "How did it happen?"

Third: Carelessness in the film exchanges. Careful revision of film extends its life a long time. Careless revision is worse than none at all. Are the revisors given ample time to revise a film well? Do they use good cement? Are they careful?

Having considered the chief cause, we have now to consider the secondary causes; namely, over-speed, under-speed and brittle film.

First: Over-speed. To-day, as never before, the theatre-going public are demanding and getting full value for their money. This applies to second and third run houses as well as to de luxe houses. Double program billing, specialties of all Remote control of lighting circuits for theatres is important.

It means flexibility of control, simplified wiring, and dependable service if “Diamond H” Remote Control Switches are used.

Type F Remote Control Switch shown above can be used to control the circuits of your entrance signs, marquees, to control stage and effect lighting, or large groups of lights.

“Diamond H” Remote Control Switches are designed and built by the pioneer switch builder, and they are reliable and dependable.

If emergency circuits are used for your important lighting such as exits, aisles, stairways and lobby circuits, we have double throw switches that are entirely automatic, throwing from one circuit to the other and back again.

Bulletin No. 10 completely covers these switches with wiring diagrams.

A Review of the Latest Developments in Theatre Engineering

Any further information that may be desired regarding equipment devices described in this department may be had upon request. Address such inquiries to The Showman, Motion picture News, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

Orchestraphone Junior for Smaller Theatres

NATIONAL THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY recently put on display at all branches of the company the new Orchestraphone Junior Model, a smaller edition of the Orchestraphone reproducing instrument designed for the small motion picture theatre.

The new instrument does not replace the regular Orchestraphone, for the many added features of the larger models adapt them particularly to use in large houses. The fields for the two models are thus distinct. For all practical purposes, Orchestraphone Junior is amply equipped to efficiently care for the musical needs of the smaller theatre.

Orchestraphone Junior Model is equipped with two turntables, powered by synchronous motors. The "fade-out" of one record and the "fade-in" of the second is effected through rheostat control—one turn button—regulated by the operator.

The same pick-ups used with the regular Orchestraphone are employed in the Junior Model. They are set and controlled directly by the operator.

A regular Orchestraphone air column horn is a part of the Junior Model standard equipment.

New Orchestraphone Junior Model opened and showing two turntables.

Automatic Devices Designs

New Steel Curtain Track

ANNOUNCEMENT of a new curtain track, built of steel and to be known as the "Silent-Steel Curtain Track," has been made by the Automatic Devices Company of Allentown, Pa.

This new device, the announcement declares, is the result of many months of intensive tests and actual operation directed toward the effort to produce a curtain track that will answer in every detail the newest requirements of stage equipment.

Since the development of the hardwood "Roll E. Z." track by the Automatic Devices Company, the announcement continues, "a demand has gradually developed for a curtain track retaining all the features of the Roll E. Z. type combined with smaller dimensions and greater strength in proportion to weight, qualities which are inherent with the use of steel."

Akeley Develops Universal Gyro Camera Tripod

THE Akeley Camera Co., has started production of the new Akeley Universal Gyro Tripod, which makes available to all makes of camera the flexibility of range which was a distinctive feature of the Akeley camera.

The new Universal Gyro Tripod, illustrated on this page, is adjustable by hand manipulation to any speed and any angle as the picture is being taken. In his announcement of the new tripod, John L. Spence, president of the Akeley company described the following features as outstanding in the new design:

"The tripod has been kept as light as possible consistent with strength.

"The new tripod comes at an opportune time to fill the needs created by the development of the talking moving pictures. The extreme weight of the new "talkie" equipment overtakes the sturdiness of even the best of the previous design of tripod. The new tripod's design enables it to carry the additional burden."

Testing New Type Speaker Unit for Sound Films

A NEW system of sound projection, employing a speaker unit of special design to be suspended in the center of theatre auditoriums, this week is being given final tests at the Fox studios in New York, according to an announcement issued by Christian A. Volf, Jr., engineer and acoustician who developed the system.

The Volf Reproducer employs new acoustical principles which are said to reproduce amplified sound so that all hearers receive the sound in equal volume and clarity, irrespective of the acoustical properties of the building. Describing the design and acoustical principles of the new speaker, the statement says:

"From a sounding chamber employed in conjunction with an electro-dynamic speaking unit a linen screen is suspended. This is broader in its lower circumference and acts as an amplifier. The waves

Drama Finds a New Vehicle in Television

THOUGH it is less than a year since Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson brought his television receiver out of the laboratory and demonstrated it before newspaper men, the device for sending vision and sound by radio is now being employed to regularly broadcast drama from Station WGY in Schenectady, New York.

On September 1, during the regular television period of the Schenectady station the first play by television was broadcast by a dramatic group organized to present drama to the radio audience, transmitting picture and voice simultaneously on separate radio channels.

This accomplishment was made possible by the development by Dr. Alexanderson, consulting engineer of the General Electric Company and chief consulting engineer of the Radio Corporation of America, of a portable transmitter or camera.

The play broadcast was J. Hartley Manners' "The Queen's Messenger." Owing to the fact that in its present form the transmitter permits of showing only the heads of the actors, a dramatic technique adapted to the medium was evolved by Mortimer Stewart, producer and director of a series of radio plays broadcast by WGY and New York stations last spring. Since the present, and still crude apparatus, does not permit of conveying action by means of head movements, facial expression or gestures, Mr. Stewart adopted the "close-up" method frequently employed in motion pictures. Thus, for example, the lady of the play offered to pour some wine for the messenger, a separate camera picked up the image of the lady's hands with bottle and glass, as she poured the wine. Keys, a ring, a revolver and many other props were introduced in "close-ups" to forward the action of the play.

In the presentation of "The Queen's Messenger" three cameras were used.

The camera consisted of three units, a cabinet containing a 24-hole disc and a 1000-watt lamp as a light source, and two smaller cabinets each housing a photoelectric tube with amplifier.

In a statement in which he commented upon the first drama broadcast by television, Martin P. Rice, manager of broadcasting for the General Electric Company said: "Now we have shown what Dr. Alexanderson has accomplished and in broadcasting a play by television, we have endeavored to point out one of the very interesting applications of the new art. When television has reached that stage of development where 'sight' signals may be received as reliably as 'sound' signals are now received, we at WGY hope to be prepared to carry the image as well as the voice of the actor to thousands not heretofore privileged to enjoy the drama."

Another Tremendous Achievement In Theatre Lighting

As revolutionary as it is modern; as modern as it is efficient; as efficient as it is economical—this is the graphic news of the new Major Chromium Plated Reflectors. As originators, pioneering in the application of this new metal to stage lighting equipment, Major again puts its trademark on the newest, the most unusual and resultful in lighting effects.

Chromium itself is not new, but it has defied science to successfully plate with it until just recently. Now Major can not only plate it successfully, but has designed all Major Equipment to use this increased light producer and present to the theatres of America this means of finer lighting effects.

Major Chromium Plated Reflectors have been in production nearly a year, full tests have been made and several of the newest DeLuxe Theatres have been equipped. So this new product is not an experiment, yet is the most modern of all. Send for the new bulletin—now, quick!

Pinanski Puts New England Public Under the Showman's Microscope

Finds Mass Psychology There Reacts to Good Taste in Plays, Theatres and Management

ACCORDING to Franz Molnar, "The Play's the Thing."

But in New England, at least, the satisfaction in amusement formula is not so simple as all that.

According to a man who has his finger constantly on the New England pulse, there are many other things to be considered in satisfying his public.

This man is Samuel Pinanski, president of the New England Theatre Operating Corp., which controls some thirty theatres in the New England states with several more under construction. His experience in show business dates from some sixteen years back, when having decided on theatres as his career, he affiliated with the Modern theatre, Boston, where he plodded through every phase of theatre operation learning the things that have placed him, still in his thirties, at the helm of New England's largest independent theatre organization.

Pinanski is peculiarly qualified to pass opinion on the New England situation. He has it analyzed.

He considers first of all that he has to deal with a distinct type of audience. Your New England audience is characterized to the point of adage as the most critical in the world. Shows have been known to flop in Yankeeland after they have taken the rest of the country by storm.

The answer, says Mr. Pinanski, is the New England temperament. The inhabitants of that section differ from those of more cosmopolitan centers in that they are homogeneous in thought and taste.

Certain artistic ideals have obtained for so many generations that they have come to be characteristic. These people are less susceptible to the radical in art. They adhere to standards sanctified by long usage.

Consider dramatics.

They will not object to the startling so long as it is in good taste.

They want beauty of form to their plays rather than fly by night experimentation.

They recognize true dramatic values and insist upon them.

But the most important point of all is that since their standard of living is high, they insist on comfort in their places of amusement.

When Samuel Pinanski came to be head of Netoco, that organization had some twelve theatres. Under his direction, the corporation expanded its holdings to thirty. All this in the short space of less than a year. His plan embodies beauty and service.

He states that in New England, famous for the beauty of its public and private buildings, the theatre should be an object of civic pride. It should be worthy to be set down in the guidebooks as of equal artistic interest with the churches, museums, etc. With this in mind, Mr. Pinanski, himself an artist of no little note, saw to it that each of the newly acquired theatres was completely redecorated, and that plans for all the new theatres were considered with meticulous care.

The atmospheric house was accepted as the standard.

Four new theatres under construction embody this plan. The Netoco Seville in East Boston and the Netoco State in Portland, Maine, are to be of Spanish architecture and decoration throughout. The Netoco Egyptian in Brighton is planned after the famous Temple of Karnak at Thebes on the Upper Nile, while the Netoco Colonial at North Attleboro is, as its name suggests, of Colonial architecture and appointment.

The East Boston and North Attleboro houses will be ready for opening early this fall, and the Portland and Brighton houses will open their doors during the winter. Plans for additional atmospheric houses are now being considered, and construction will begin as soon as desirable locations are acquired.

BUT Mr. Pinanski does not stop at this. The personal touch is necessary. There is that intangible homelike atmosphere to be striven for. Without this, the theatre becomes like an iceberg, beautiful enough to look at, but hardly the place to spend a few relaxing hours. He will say, yes, the play's the thing, but by all means let the play be presented in a theatre that does not blatantly intrude on the tired patron's consciousness, but leaves him in harmony with his surroundings, mind at ease, to drink in the beauty of the program.

The housemanager, the doorman, the girl in the ticket booth, the ushers, the telephone operator, all these have direct contact with the theatre patron, and it is from their treatment of him that he patron judges a theatre. The cordial greeting—not servile, for servility is as repellent as brusqueness—courtesy in handling the individual in a crowded lobby are as important as the soft seat, soft lighting, beautiful music.

For the de luxe house has risen into prominence to fill a need.

The atmospheric house with its courteous service is as much an escape from the tedium of life as the motion picture is vicarious adventure.

For the price of the box office admission, the patron finds himself king in a palace with a host of willing servants at his beck and call, who soften his native antagonism and critical or not, put him in a receptive mood.

These then, are the little things that have brought the critical New Englander to the Netoco houses and have kept him coming.

In his new theatres are being embodied certain service ideas that experience and observation have shown him to be of inestimable value. The plans include for instance ladies' smoking rooms, children's nursery rooms, an adjoining open air garden, large parking spaces and every mechanical and decorative contrivance for the entertainment of the public.

Exploits Switched Booking With Question Marks

A FILM feature delivered at the Centre Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, the night before it was scheduled to open a week's run there did not suit Manager Don Stapleton. Then a wild night started!

Using the long distance telephone, Mr. Stapleton found that the picture he wanted was 175 miles away. Jumping into his car at midnight he made the trip and was back at 5 A. M. on the Saturday, when he rushed to the newspaper offices to cancel the advertisements and readers on the canned feature. Having a box of teels but no half-tone cuts or paper, he spanned into a new style of "Take-a-Chance Week" by running the displays in the day's papers with question marks in place of the title, mentioning only the names of the two stars, Lois Moran and Norman Kerry. The feature really was "The Irresistible Lover" but he did not announce it, in view of the fact that he had no illustrations or reading notices on it.

Later that day the editions carried the Centre Theatre display with such queries as "What have we got this week?"; "? ? ? Picture Supreme with Norman Kerry, Lois Moran"; "At the Centre, the Best—What is it? Why is it?"

The immediate result was that the mystery attracted crowds and telephone calls galore and the centre did well—so well, in fact that Manager Stapleton did not announce the name of the attraction until the third day. And the public never knew the real reason behind the question marks!

A reputation older than the Movie Industry

BEFORE the first movie theater was built, C-H Simplicity Dimmers were the choice of the country's leading showmen.

As the show industry has developed, the reputation of C-H Dimmers has kept pace. Features which assure velvet smooth control, adaptability to all requirements, long life, and low operating costs, make them the choice of the modern showman.

Your architect or contractor will explain how easily your theater can be C-H equipped. But be sure to inform yourself on all the advantages of C-H Simplicity Dimmers by writing for the booklet "Illumination Control for the Modern Theater".

drawing power; how much better an investment? At no extra cost! But properly planned!

Brackets are used on the side walls, not so much to provide general illumination, but to relieve the dark walls, by providing more balanced illumination. In addition to wall brackets, a combined illuminated mirror and drinking fountain is used on the back wall, at the standee space. An item of this nature gives two features in one. In addition to its utilitarian purpose, it adds refinement, creating that distinctive, theatrical atmosphere, which attracts theatre fans. It is more in keeping with theatre equipment, than the ordinary procelain type niche or pedestal, with no ornamental qualities, illuminating or decorative effect.

If proper consideration is given to decorative lighting equipment when the theatre is planned, such items as illuminated mirrors and drinking fountains, exit and direction signs, recessed ceiling grilles for under the balcony, etc., can be provided for, so that the entire installation is in harmony and balance. Theatre owners who leave these items go until the last minute, or only give it consideration when it is time to buy, often find it necessary to make installation in such a way, so that the full benefits are not secured, because proper provision and planning had not been arranged for. The opportune time to consider these items is when the plans are first made.

Today, they must keep pace with the modern trend. Thousands of theatres can benefit by saving on current consumption, providing appropriate decorative illumination, as well as comfort and attraction, by availing themselves of the opportunity afforded by modern decorative lighting equipment. Old theatres with out-of-date, improper and unsightly lighting equipment installed ten and twenty years ago should become acquainted with the advantages modern, colorful, decorative illumination provides.

The exhibitor interested in attracting new patrons, as well as holding regulars, should check up on his decorative lighting equipment. Lighting fixtures today are radically different than the styles and types of years ago. The tremendous advancement and improvement in all things electrical have modernized lighting fixtures, especially for theatres. With the new styles and types, you can effectively decorate your theatre and bring it up-to-date; make it more comfortable, more attractive and more profitable. Use color; soft dim lights during the show, brights before and after. Effects—that's what the modern showman uses. Give your patrons a change. Because lighting fixtures are the most prominent and conspicuous part of your visible equipment, new decorative lighting equipment is the most economical and most effective means to dress up or rejuvenate your theatre.

Ottawa Drama League Backs Little Film Theatre

The Little Theatre, for picture presentations, appears to be an established success in Ottawa, Ontario, where the experiment of presenting a special production, "King of Kings," was tried during the week starting September 22, under the direction of T. D. DeBlois as house manager. N. S. Harris of New York, F B O representative, had charge of exploitation, after having directed the "King of Kings" engagement in Massey Music Hall, Toronto, recently.

Patronage at the Ottawa Little Theatre, which accommodates 490 persons, was rather slack at early performances but increased to such an extent that the production was held over for a second week. A five-piece orchestra accompanied the feature. It is interesting to note that, while the Ottawa playhouse seats 490, Massey Music Hall in Toronto holds approximately 4,000 persons.

set up create a downward current of air through the screen and the sound is directed into 13 suspended organ pipes. These pipes, as has been demonstrated in well-known acoustical experiments, act as selectors, carrying and resonating only the sound frequencies for which they are fitted by diameter and length.

"The purified tones, after passing through the pipes, are somewhat weaker—especially through the elimination of mechanical frequencies, and they are blended and amplified anew in a huge bowl filled with a fluid mixture and hung under the pipes. It is known that water carries sound very quickly, strongly and clearly.

"Through the apparatus metal parts are insulated and cannot project metallic frequencies. Muffling and distortion are prevented by the scientifically constructed sounding chambers, which provide natural amplification.

The reproducer is housed completely from view by a lighting fixture designed by Frank Houlihan, of the firm of Cox, Nostrand & Gunnison, Inc., Brooklyn. Mr. Houlihan has employed clear glass bars separated by decorative metal surfaces. The light is entirely indirect, being reflected by the metal surfaces and diffused through the bars. A system of control projects changing patterns through the glass tubes.

Patrons of First Movie at Tivoli's First Sound Show

Old residents of Richmond, Inc., who attended the first movie show in that town thirty years ago, were invited to see and hear the first talking picture when it was presented recently at the Tivoli theatre there. The invitation was issued by Manager I. C. King of the Tivoli.

Only a few of the residents who gathered in the rear of a Main Street jewelry store thirty years ago to witness the invention of Charles F. Jenkins, Richmond man, are living but all were invited to be guests of the Tivoli management.

King said sound pictures will be shown exclusively following the initial showing of "The Lion and the Mouse," to Richmond theatregoers.

Among those who composed the world's first movie audience are the inventor's two brothers, Atwood L. Jenkins and Will Jenkins, well known local insurance men, and Demas S. Coe, president of the J. M. Coe Printing company. Mr. Coe attended the first movie demonstration in the capacity of a newspaper reporter, and he recalls that another reporter who was present was Strick W. Gillilan, author of the classic, Off Agin, On Agin, Gone Agin, Finigan.

sorts, are the cause for over-speed. Over-speed means added hazard, and it does not matter how careful a projectionist may be; he is bound sooner or later to have a break and a pile up and then, fire-works.

Second: Under-speed. How many projectionists take time to measure their shows? How often have you run slow to stretch out your show to a certain time, having speeded up prior to that? You know what dark or black film, slow speed and reflector arcs spell. Just as sure as fate that combination spells fire.

Third: Brittle film is the direct result of subjecting the film to the heat of the of subjecting the film to the heat of he rewind and may feel O. K. to the fingers, but the life has gone out of it. This "perished" process has been speeded up by the use of the reflector type lamp with its intense heat at the aperture. Watch out for it.

In conclusion: Be careful, keep your machine in shape, over and under-speed as little as possible, watch your film, be on your toes.

Sets New Policies for All His Zanensville Theatres

Caldwell Brown, general manager of the Brown Theatrical Company, which operates all of the motion picture theatres in Zanesville, Ohio, has announced that new policies will be introduced in each of the houses. The problem of each house has been carefully studied, and changes will be made to correct them.

The Liberty will show talkies and sound pictures, including synchronized productions.

The Quimby will play silent movies of the first magnitude.

The Imperial will continue its present policy of showing westerns and action pictures.

The second run of the big feature photoplays will go to the Grand, which has been completely remodeled and is gaining popularity.

A New Booklet on EVENHEETERS

ARCHITECTS here in a new booklet on EVENHEET-
ERS and the care of the organ.
It is yours for the asking. In it you will find the reasons why EVENHEETERS are being endorsed by several leading Theatre Architects and why you should specify EVENHEETERS in every organ chamber you design.

EVENHEETERS are necessary for organ welfare. They not only keep the organ dry but ward off cold as well as save your client many times their initial cost by decreased organ maintenance. They should be specified because they are the organ chamber heater that is efficient, practical and durable. Ask for that booklet today.

N. Y. Capitol to Inaugurate Midnight Shows Oct. 6

Simultaneously with the advent of the sound-picture policy starting at the Capitol theatre, New York, on Saturday, October 6th, the inauguration of regular midnight picture presentations will occur. Capitol's first midnight attraction will be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new synchronized film "Our Dancing Daughters," with Joan Crawford heading an all-star cast, and other features of the program will be announced later.

effort to secure knowledge and training on sound equipment, which means perfect handling of sound equipment. Every manager should secure literature on sound equipment and study the contents carefully. This will enable you to check the sound equipment installed in your theatre. During every sound equipment installation engineers leave instructions for horn settings, fader settings, etc. These instructions should be carried out to insure perfect operation.

Interruptions during the performance can be avoided. Positive oiling and keeping working parts clean will avoid trouble. Before starting each projector a thorough inspection should be made to see that all working parts are free. Check the sound equipment. Inspect film directly after each showing. Fuses and connections should be checked quite frequently. Make sure that all of the projection room equipment is in good condition.

The management of any theatre can not make alibis to patrons for interruptions during the performance. It often happens in theatres where only one light and power service is available, that the service is temporarily cut off once in a while for short intervals. This can not be avoided except by installing an emergency service, which in some instances is very expensive. Most all large theatres have some means of emergency service for the projection room equipment, in case of an interruption in the power service, which automatically cuts in and avoids any delay.

Starting out of frame and allowing white screens during the performance are inexcusable in any theatre. Every projectionist should observe the screen results closely at all times.

The Proper Control of Light On Your Screen

Picture films vary as well as current conditions. Your projectionist can adjust his arc current to always give you a clear, bright picture if you equip with PERFECTION. Current saving also is a result of PERFECTION equipment, for he need not use full current till the actual projection is started.

Nothing So Essential to a Theatre As a Good Electric

A GREAT electric sign, with powerful letters of light . . . the added appeal of various colors . . . motion . . . intense light from a brilliant marquee . . . an attraction-board of clearly readable electric letters featuring the current show!

When people see a theatre like that, they go in. Light is the greatest attraction theatres can employ. And Flexlume electrics—glass letter, exposed lamp, neon tube, or combinations—offer exhibitors the most brilliant and spectacular electric display.

Some designs of electrics are better for theatres than others. Ask for the free helpful booklet "Theatre Electric Displays" illustrating some of the Flexlume types that have proven highly productive of crowded houses. FLEXLUME CORPORATION, 1857 Military Road, Buffalo, N. Y.

What to Expect from a Projection Lens

A lens can only produce on the screen, that which is registered on the film.

The following are the four qualities—and the only four—that a projection lens can give to the projected image. They are identical with the characteristics of the CINEPHOR Lens.

1. Flatness of field
2. Maximum illumination
3. Clear definition
4. Contrast between black and white

When you have a CINEPHOR you have a lens that possesses these qualities and that will faithfully reproduce the film image.

We will gladly send you further information on the CINEPHOR. Just send your name and address.

Pearson New Member of Ontario Censor Board

Of considerable interest to moving picture men in all parts of Canada is the announcement of the appointment of "Bob" Pearson as a member of the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors, Toronto, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of J. M. O'Brien several months ago.

In many respects, "Bob" Pearson is an outstanding Canadian. Famous in sports for years, a college graduate, high up in Masonic and Y. M. C. A. circles, and a former member of Parliament, his vocation in life for some years has been that of a minister of the gospel. He also served for a long period as a captain with the Canadian Expeditionary Force in France during the Great War and, apart from his meritorious military service, he was busily engaged in Y. M. C. A. activities at the front.

He was a member of the Provincial Parliament of Alberta from 1917 to 1926, representing the City of Calgary, being twice victorious in the elections. A Methodist in religion, Capt. Pearson was pastor of Methodist and United Churches in Alberta for a number of years, resigning recently to become an Ontario film censor.

FBO Will Distribute 7 During November

Seven features have been set for general release November by FBO. Three of them will first be seen on November 4. They are "Sinners in Love," with Olive Borden and Huntley Gordon; "Traiked," starring Ranger, the dog; and "Rough Ridin' Red," a vehicle for Buzz Barton.

On November 18, "Taxi 13," one of the FBO specials, synchronized with sound, music and dialogue, will be distributed. For a prologue to "Taxi 13," George Lemaire, musical comedy star, uses his act, "Joy-riding."

"His Last Haul" with Tom Moore and Seena Owen, will be shown on November 11, while "The Tyrant of Red Gulch," featuring Tom Tyler, and "King Cowboy," a Tom Mix picture, will appear respectively on November 25 and November 26.

A. J. Kleist, Jr., Seeking 5 Theatres in Miami

A. J. Kleist, former prominent Michigan Theatre owner and official of the M. P. T. O., is reported to be negotiating for five theatres in the Miami, Florida, region. He intends to operate them at popular prices. He will announce the names of the houses at an early date.

A plan of Mr. Kleist is to arrange with bus lines to operate buses by the Masonic Temple, thus eliminating the transportation problem.

Mr. Kleist is presenting a stock company, headed by Robert Burton and Marjorie Garrett, at his Temple Theatre, Miami, on October 21, the plays to extend over a 24-week period.

Brother of Valentino in FBO's "Tropic Madness"

Albert Valentino, a brother of the late Rudolph Valentino, has a supporting role in "Tropic Madness," an FBO vehicle for Leatrice Joy. This is said to be his first appearance on the screen.

"Wild Cat" Talkie Stock Salesmen Invade Hollywood Studios

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 30. "Wild-cat" stock salesmen are seizing on reported fortunes made by talking picture companies as the basis for organizing new "talkie" firms and conducting stock selling campaigns among exhibitors particularly. One group, which formerly confined its activities to the sale of gold-mine and oil stocks, has established headquarters in San Francisco and now is attempting to open operations in Hollywood and Los Angeles. At present they are making a survey of synchronized motion pictures and a history of the stock manipulations for sales arguments.

All branches of the film industry, allied with both the production and distribution ends, will be the first point of "attack" by these salesmen. For their prospectus, they are using a history of the Warner Brothers and their overnight rise to the top of the industry as a result of Vitaphone and also the money made by Fox investors since the advent of Movietone. The Warners have issued warning to all regarding speculation and are in no way favorable to their organization being used as an example by these promoters.

Exhibitors and all others who may be approached by salesmen offering talking picture stock are notified to investigate thoroughly before investing a penny.

West Coast Charged With Conspiracy

8 Other Distributing Firms Also Included in Suit Brought by Dept. of Justice

CONSPIRACY to violate the anti-trust laws is charged in a petition filed September 28 in the District Court of the United States for the Southern Division of the Southern District of California, according to an announcement from the Department of Justice. West Coast executives, according to Harold B. Franklin, president of Wesco, are glad to have the matter aired.

Defendants in the case are the West Coast Theatres, Inc., the operator of approximately 100 out of a total of some 300 motion picture theatres in the southern half of California, and the eight principal distributors of first-class motion pictures in that territory, Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, First National Pictures, Inc., Universal Film Exchange, Inc., United Artists Corporation, Fox Film Corporation, Vitagraph, Inc., and Pathe Exchange, Inc.

The Government's petition alleges that West Coast Theatres and the distributor defendants engaged in a conspiracy from on or about July 27, 1927, to on or about December 31, 1927, to exclude independent exhibitors from contracting for motion picture films to exhibit first or second run or first suburban run in Los Angeles and in other cities and towns in Southern California, to exclude independent exhibitors from contracting for motion picture films to exhibit in competition with exhibitions by the West Coast Theatres, and to exclude from the interstate trade and commerce in picture films all independent exhibitors who exhibited two feature pictures on one program or gave gifts or premiums to their theatre patrons, or charged less than ten cents minimum admission.

Harold B. Franklin, president and general manager of West Coast Theatres, in a recent statement, said that his company welcomes the action, because only through a suit of this kind could the question of clearance be settled. He further declared that without protection between first and subsequent run showings the whole industry would have to be reorganized on a smaller scale, and the soundness of clearance has never been questioned in the show business, where it is a tradition.

7 First National Stars Now At Work in Films

Seven of First National's nine stars and featured players are now working.

Colleen Moore is launching "Synthetic Sin," Richard Barthelmess is filming "Scarlet Seas," Billie Dove is working in "Adoration," and Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackaill are doing "Stranded in Paradise."

W. J. Locke, Novelist, to Write for U. A.

WILLIAM J. LOCKE, the English novelist, has signed a contract with United Artists to write for that company. The author made the announcement of his new affiliation at the Metropolitan Club in New York before a group of fellow authors and publishers including Will Durant, Rupert Hughes, Bruce Barton, Ray Long, James Quirk, George Doran and others.

The author said that he would leave for Hollywood next Friday.

Reported Ceballos to Stage Unit Shows for Warner Circuit

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 3.—Following their acquisition of the Stanley Circuit, it is reported Warner Brothers will send Larry Ceballos East to produce stage units for tours of key city houses under their control.

Ceballos is from the New York musical comedy field and has been staging revues at Warner's Hollywood Theatre since its opening. In many quarters here it is pointed out that he has forced all local presentation producers into the background within a short period.

According to the report, the Warners are considering having Ceballos stage about twenty acts at the rate of one each week to rotate throughout the circuit.

Kennedy Discusses Films

Declares in Radio Talk Producers Will Succeed Who Cater to Popular Intelligence

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY, president of F B O, chairman of the board of directors of K-A-O, and business advisor to Pathe, addressed the radio audience over the blue network from station WJZ Sunday night, September 30th, with regard to motion pictures and the show business in general. He declared the entire show business was now in a state of experimentation and expressed the opinion that in the long run the producer would succeed who bet his brains and money on popular intelligence in the form of entertainment provided.

Mr. Kennedy said in part:

"The day has gone when the intelligent public we seek as permanent customers will tolerate a hodge-podge of poor plots and pretty faces. They want substance to stories and real acting. Perhaps the time will come when television will carry the best of entertainment into the home.

"I don't know. The entire amusement industry is in a state of flux and experimentation. Novelities of today become obsolete tomorrow.

"But one thing I do know, and everybody who has any business in the amusement business should know—that sophistication is on the increase, and that prizes in the form of profits only go the way of producers who bet their brains and money in the long run on popular intelligence.

"Amusement, more even than education, reflects popular taste. Vaudeville, which was the backbone of entertainment five or six years ago, has found it necessary to re-vamp itself to meet advanced popular taste. We are meeting with success in that this year. Trashy pictures and plays would not be produced if there were no trashy people to patronize them.

"The only way in which the American or any public can improve the quality of supply is to make known an improvement in the quality of demand. As clean, sensible entertainment is patronized, it will be produced.

"That is the only answer we who run the mechanics of the show business can make to critics of its defects. And the answer is sufficient. A country finally gets the quality of government it deserves. It like wise receives only the type and grade of entertainment it wants."

Pathe Begins Releasing New Serial October 14

"Eagle of the Night," a new Patheserial starring Frank Clarke, stunt flier, tops the list of Pathe short subjects set for release during the week of October 14. Other shorts on the program are "Muscle Marvels," a Grantland Rice Sportlight; "A Fair Catch," a Football Sense subject; "The Bargain Hunt," a Mack Sennett comedy; "Monkey Love," a new Aesop film fable; Topics of the Day No. 42, Pathe Review No. 42, and issues Nos 86 and 87 of the Pathe News.

In addition to Clarke the cast of the new serial also has Shirley Palmer, Maurice

18 Shorts from M-G-M During Current Month

Six silent short subjects and 12 Movietone acts are coming from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer during the present month. The short feature releasing program of the company is now divided into two parts, the first taking in the regular Metro shorts, Roach comedies, Ufa oddities and the like, and the second including all the newly added Metro Movietone acts.

"Early to Bed," co-starring Hardy and Laurel, will be released on October 6. Next on the list is "World's Playground," a Ufa Oddities, set for October 13. This same date also serves for the release of "Do Gentlemen Snore?", a Roach comedy. "Our Gang" will be seen in "The Ol' Gray Hoss," to make its initial appearance on October 20, while October 27 will see the release of "Wives For Sale," an Oddities, and "All Parts," starring Charley Chase.

The Movietone acts are as follows:

Walt Rosener and his Capitols, Locust Sisters and Leo Reers, October 6; Miller and Lyle, Joseph Regan and M-G-M Movietone Review, October 13; Ponce Sisters, Odette Myrtill and Marion Harris, October 20; and Van and Schenek, Fuzzy Knight and George Dewey Washington, October 27.

Two Christie - Paramount Comedies for October

"Loose Change," starring Jack Duffy with Neal Burns, Lorraine Eddy, Winnie Law, Eddie Barry and Buddy the dog, has been scheduled along with "Picture My Astonishment," second of the "Confessions of a Chorus Girl" series, as the two Christie comedies to be released by Paramount during October. Frances Lee, Billy Engle and Eddie Clayton are players in the latter release.

New Griffith Film to Open at Rialto October 12

David Wark Griffith's "The Battle of the Sexes" will have its New York premiere at the Rialto Theatre, New York, on Columbus day, October 12.

Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman wrote the story for this new United Artists release, and Gerrit Lloyd adapted it. In the cast are Jean Hersholt, Phyllis Haver, Belle Bennett, Sally O'Neil and Don Alvarado.

Henigson to Europe on Mission for Laemmle

Henry Henigson, former General Manager of Universal City, sails on the Leviathan for Europe October 6, on a mission for Carl Laemmle, President of Universal.

The nature of the mission has not been disclosed.

Flader Finds U. S. Film Prospers in Europe

"AMERICAN films are going wonderfully well over there.

The chatter about their boycotting our pictures is a stretch of some one's imagination." Thus Fred A. Flader, general manager of Universal Theatres Corporation, characterized the prosperity of the American picture industry abroad upon his return from an extended tour of the Continent.

"But they want good pictures," Mr. Flader pointed out. "They are like us in that they want the very best films, and you can't put over poor ones in the big houses." It is Flader's opinion that, with regards to talking pictures, Europe is waiting for America to "give them the goods."

Apropos the "talkie," Mr. Flader thinks "we musn't think because it (picture) has a new form we can put over any old kind of film. We are going to keep up the standards of our pictures, although I am sure that the talking picture is the thing, and is here to stay."

The Multnomah Theatre will install equipment for talking pictures in their Portland, Ore., houses, said Mr. Flader, and also in the two theatres in Eugene and the two in Corvallis.

over patents or infringements in connection with the Movietone system.

He further stated that Electrical Research Products is charging producers at the rate of cost of equipment and installation plus twenty per cent, and at the end of two years the electrical corporation will have its books audited to see that this rate of gross profit is not exceeded. A rebate will be made to producers on a pro rata basis if a profit over the amount fixed is shown by the audit at that time. This plan prohibits the possibilities of the initial producers installing Movietone bearing the brunt of the heavy expense necessary to properly organize delivery of sound film devices.

Producers and exhibitors have many millions of dollars tied up in the talking picture venture, but a close follower of the situation claims that the electrical companies stand to lose just as much money as both producers and theatres combined, if by any chance talking pictures should not become as popular as is generally believed at the present time.

Western Electric Company alone will have over fifty million dollars invested in the sound picture field. This tremendous sum represents the cost of additions to their plants in Chicago, Philadelphia and Kearney, N. J., together with the cost of equipment necessary to manufacture Movietone apparatus for both producers and theatres. The sudden demand for Movietone

New Invention Would Permit Stars of U. S. to Talk Foreign Tongues

THE problem of foreign dialogue in American pictures may be solved by an invention of Edwin Hopkins of New York. The inventor explained the process to a meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at Lake Placid last week. By the use of the invention an American star may speak fluently from the screen in Chinese or any other language.

According to Mr. Hopkins, motion picture producers may synchronize their films perfectly with phonetic recordings made after the film is taken. One actor may film the picture while another, whose voice is better adapted to the role, will record the vocalization. The two are combined later. The effects, the inventor explained, are accomplished by adapting the films to fit the recorded voice. This is done by lengthening or shortening the films through insertion of "frames"—single pictures which comprise the film.

equipment made the supplier gear up production to the last notch, and the delicateness of the Movietone outfits for both producers and theatres made it imperative that the most skilled mechanics in the electrical field be employed. And every employee must be practically hand-picked to insure the greatest efficiency.

If talking pictures do not become the vogue over a period of years, Electrical Research Products and others that are now manufacturing equipment on a large scale will stand to lose millions of dollars in plants and specially adapted machinery. They cannot hope to get back their investment through the contracts they hold with producers and theatres, if the talking film should die out in public fancy.

2 Publix de Luxe Houses Now Give "Whole Show on Screen"

TWO Publix de luxe theatres—the Howard in Atlanta and the Alabama in Birmingham—have gone "Vitaphone and Movietone." The stage band unit shows finished Saturday night; and Monday, October 1, saw the inauguration of the new policy with "the whole show on the screen." Stage presentations have been a feature of the Howard's entertainment since Publix instituted the unit show policy; the Alabama, which opened in January of this year, will now present its first all-picture program.

No radical change of policy can be regarded lightly. It stands to reason that mature consideration preceded the decision in these cases, particularly in view of the fact that even to the casual observer it is manifest that the Howard box-office has flourished during the past few months, and that the Alabama during the same period has made the best showing in its brief career.

During the summer, both the Howard and Alabama installed sound picture equipment. Each has presented some notably successful sound pictures, and throughout the period each house continued its stage band unit shows.

The decision to switch to a policy of "the whole show on the screen" certainly indicates that Publix has faith in synchronized pictures—and the courage to put that faith to the test.

The Howard and Alabama plan to bring to Atlanta and Birmingham "The Singing Fool" and a long list of outstanding sound picture successes and present them at the regular admission prices.

Under the realignment brought about by the adoption of the Vitaphone-Movietone policy in the Howard and Alabama, those theatres are withdrawn from the division headed by Milton H. Feld and now come under the supervision of Frank J. Dowler, Jr., Publix division manager for the entire Southeast.

Another new alignment puts all Publix houses in Atlanta, Birmingham and Anniston under the guidance of District Manager Willard C. Patterson. Heretofore Mr. Patterson was responsible only for Keith's Georgia and the Howard in Atlanta, and the Alabama in Birmingham.

Throughout the week the Howard has been running a special trailer advertising "The Super Six in Sound," a particularly brilliant group of sound pictures.

Pickford "Talkie" Will Be Pre-released April 1

"COQUETTE." Mary Pickford's first all-talking production, will be released simultaneously in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and Boston on April 1, 1929, probably at advanced prices, definite contractual arrangements with the producer of the stage play having been effected.

"Coquette" will be nationally released next fall, it is planned. There will be a silent as well as sound version. Sam Taylor will first make the "talkie" before producing the silent version.

The production date set for the new Pickford vehicle is October 15, at which time it is expected that the sound stages at the United Artists studio will have been finished.

Photophone Equipment Contract Signed for K-A-O Circuit

E. E. BUCHER, vice president of R C A Photophone, has dispelled all rumors as to whether or not Photophone would make installations in theatres. He has announced the signing of a contract with the Keith-Albee-Orpheum circuit whereby Photophone devices will be installed in all of their houses with the exception of eighteen. The eighteen previously were contracted for some months ago with the Western Electric Company device.

According to Mr. Bucher, the contract calls for approximately 700 installations, the first of which will be made on October 1st. As rapidly as possible the houses will be wired and the Photophone equipment put in. It is estimated that it will require about four months to equip the entire chain, though Photophone is manufacturing equipment with all possible speed.

Some months ago R C A Photophone announced that they were being swamped with orders from theatres all over the country and that they would make their first installations some time in July. Deliveries were not made at that time and subsequently it was said that machines would be installed in August or September. When no action was forthcoming rumors were rife that Photophone would withdraw from the sound reproduction field and would merge their interests in this direction with Western Electric. Stories were printed to that effect and consistently denied by Mr. Bucher.

As rapidly as possible now Photophone will take care not only of the installation in the K-A-O houses, but of all back orders and new ones that will be placed. Among the first installations that will be made will be that in the Eastman Theatre in Rochester, which is now being wired.

With his announcement of the K-A-O deal, Mr. Bucher took occasion to deny several other rumors, among them one of an impending legal tilt over the question of interchangeability. R C A has insisted consistently that there could be no question as to the right of theatre owners reproducing their sound subjects either on Photophone or Movietone and the company still maintains the same stand. According to Mr. Bucher, there is no truth either, in the published stories of an impending shakeup in the executive forces of Photophone. He declares that the company staff is merely being enlarged to take care of anticipated expansion.

"Honky Tonk" First for Sophie Tucker

"Honky Tonk" will be the title of the first Vitaphone picture in which Sophie Tucker will star for Warner Bros. It will be an all-talking production, marking the screen debut of this noted comedienne. Miss Tucker will leave for the coast as soon as she completes an engagement in vaudeville with which she is now occupied.

Metropolitan Increases Sound Stage Units

Work on additional units of sound-stages, monitor rooms and other buildings for the making of talking pictures not originally called for when plans were recently announced, has started at Metropolitan Studios. Al and Charles Christie ordered the extra construction shortly after the first

Pathe Features Will All Have Dialogue

ALL of Pathe's features will be dialogued in the future, according to the announcement of Colvin W. Brown, Executive Vice-President, who has just returned to New York from a visit to the Pathe Studios in Culver City, California.

Brown is much pleased at what he saw, and heard, of the sound tests which were first made by Benjamin Glazer while he was at the studio. The results were so satisfactory that work was at once begun in putting dialogue into pictures now in production. The dialogue will be confined to those portions of the pictures which are particularly adapted to the new treatment. The sound recorders being used are the RCA Photophone.

units were begun as it was early realized that demand for facilities would be much greater than the buildings in the original estimates which were made several months ago.

An extra stage, 76 x 106, and an additional monitor room, 50 x 50, has been started adjoining the first plant, and also there will be another building to house special cutting rooms and a projection room for the talking pictures.

Inject Newsreel Talkies in Football Film

Harry C. McDonald, managing director of the Brooklyn Strand sprung an innovation with considerable success last week when Harold Lloyd in "The Freshman" was an added attraction to "The Lion and the Mouse."

As the climax to the football picture, Lloyd wins the game with a final dash over the goal line. Into this last reel a talking sequence was introduced. It was taken from a current news reel in which are seen and heard Knute Rockne instructing the Notre Dame foot ball squad, Bill Roper putting Princeton through their paces and "Hurry Up" Yost telling Michigan how it is done.

Warners Sign New Talent for Vitaphone

Warner Bros. continue to sign leading talent from the variety and musical comedy stages for Vitaphone acts. Among the latest are, Hazel Kennedy, "America's Youngest Comedienne"; "Red" Corcoran and Irene Stone, Jay Velie, musical comedy star; Bert Hanlon, Broadway comic and author; and Jack Baxley, veteran of the variety stage. They will all appear in Vitaphone short subjects.

Curtiz Doing Vitaphone Sequences on Feature

Director Michael Curtiz has taken over one of the large Vitaphone stages at Warner Bros. studios for the making of Vitaphone sequences in "Madonna of Avenue A," starring Dolores Costello. The picture is based on a story by Leslie S. Barrows, author of "The Singing Fool." Supporting Miss Costello are Grant Withers, Louis Dresser, Douglas Cavanna and Otto Hoffman.

Vaudeville Acts As Talkies Hit Snag

Current Material Is Too Valuable for Use As Shorts on Screen

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 30. Vaudeville headliners signed by film producers for talking shorts do not intend to present their current stage vehicles in sound films. The major portion of material being used by vaudevillians making their entry to synchronized shorts are either vehicles used and discarded some years ago, or a rehash of former acts. Theatres should therefore exercise care in the advertising of well known vaudeville actors appearing in talking shorts and eliminate possibilities of unintentional misrepresentation with resultant complaints.

A popular vaudeville actor routine has a potential value of thousands of dollars to the player or writer, and most headliners have balked when asked to reproduce their currently-played act in films for a meager sum in comparison to the act's worth in vaudeville over a period of years. In a number of cases, current standard or unusual vaudeville acts will be filmed as talking shorts, but the majority of vaudeville headliners that appear in pictures of this nature will use material other than that they are presenting on the stage.

These facts were brought to the attention of Motion Picture News by a scenario writer who has had wide experience in the vaudeville field. He contends that talking shorts with vaudeville names will eventually have to be filmed from specially written material supplied the act by the producers.

This condition arises through what is termed "copyrighted material" in the vaudeville field. Many acts that are using certain sketches, dialogue or individual spoken gags are not the owners of the fully copyrighted material, which is leased on a royalty basis by the authors. The latter are paid a percentage of the act's salary or a straight weekly fee, and in most cases reserve all mechanical reproduction rights for themselves. On a royalty basis, a standard vaudeville routine or act is good for consistent bookings over a period of five or more years, and worth thousands of dol-

Broadway Stage Players Get Tests for Mary Pickford's "Coquette"

BROADWAY stage players, aspirants for the various roles in Mary Pickford's first all-talking picture, "Coquette," were given voice and screen tests this week at the Famous Players Studio, Astoria, Long Island. The results are being rushed to Hollywood for Miss Pickford's inspection and selection. The players comprised a group who were interviewed by Sam Taylor, Miss Pickford's director, during his recent trip to New York.

Included were: Weldon Heyburn, now playing the leading role in "Skidding," and Rollo Peters, both possibilities for the role of "Michael." James Rennie and Ben Smith, Jr., had previously had tests taken, which have been sent to Miss Pickford.

Inez Clough, now playing in the road show revival of "Abraham's Bosom" in Schenectady, came to New York after the performance Wednesday evening. She is one of Miss Pickford's possible selections for the role of "Julia," the colored Mammy servant.

Tests were also made of: Frederick Perry, Lester Lonergan, and Fannie De Knight, the colored actress who played in "Lulu Belle."

The tests were made under supervision of Monta Bell, who is attached to the Long Island studios.

lars to the author during the life of the act.

Film producers, in order to compete with the potential values of vaudeville acts, will have to meet the author's possible gross through vaudeville channels, otherwise the author will not release the material for talking shorts. Illustrating this point, the writer told of his recent experience with a producer of talking shorts. The writer submitted a two reel act to the producer for possible sale, and received an offer of $1,000 which was refused. Instead, he sent the act East to his representative who put it on with two nominal-salaried actors and booked it for forty weeks over a big vaudeville circuit. This booking alone will net the writer over $2,000 in royalties, and he claims the act will be good in that field for five years or more.

It is said that Johnny Burke, formerly of vaudeville and now in pictures under contract to Mack Sennett, was asked by the latter to make a talking short of his vaudeville act. Burke agreed, but with the condition that Sennett pay him $50,000 for the act. Sennett, realizing that the market in its present condition could never stand that much negative cost for a short subject, refused to pay it. Burke declared the act was worth much more than that figure as a vaudeville attraction, and he would not sacrifice its future stage earnings by making a talking film reproduction.

Established writers of vaudeville material (all of which is fully protected by copyright) will not allow their acts to be sound filmed, unless the picture producers are willing to offer them a price in proportion to the values of their royalties from stage performances over a period of years. Neither will these writers supply producers with original material for talking short sketches at the present prices offered by producers for this type of work. It is figured that gags and acts based on unusual ideas are worth much more to them for the stage than what producers feel the same type of writing is worth for their needs.

Producers signing vaudeville headliners for short films in talk, will have to exercise unusual caution in selecting the material for recording. Acts may represent material in their routine to be owned by themselves and give producers usual protection on copyright; the film companies will be held responsible for any copyrighted material owned by other writers used in the sounded film and will be liable for all damages. One vaudeville writer now on the coast declares one of his copyrighted gags was used by a producer in a recent talking short. He claimed he could enter suit for damages against the producer in question, but will not take such steps and jeopardize his present standing in the picture field.

He confirmed the statement made by the first writer that producers would find themselves in numerous damage actions as the result of making talking shorts of vaudeville acts and material. His only suggestion to eliminate this condition was that producers eventually should engage writers of original vaudeville acts to write for the screen, but declared that present salaries paid writers in the film business would be small in comparison to what first class vaudeville writers would demand.

Metro - Movietone Acts Now Being Released

The Metro-Movietone Acts which are being released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are now an established addition to the sound film field. The first release of the first series of twenty-six productions featuring Van & Schenck, was released on September 29 and will be followed during the same week by two additional releases. The release schedule calls for three releases each week.

Talking Sequences Under Way for "Gang War"

The FBO studios in Hollywood are busy making talking sequences for "Gang War," in which Olive Borden and Jack Pickford are co-starred. It will be the first appearance of either before the recording camera.

Film Sign Language Urged by Mutes

THE institution of talking movies in the large theatres of Baltimore and other large cities is working a hardship on deaf mutes, according to Edward Gibbs, of Baltimore, who claims that many mutes have enjoyed silent movies for many years and that now it is being taken away from them.

He suggests that the sign language be employed in some of the pictures produced. At the present time the mutes are being driven to the neighborhood theatres which still have silent movies, according to Mr. Gibbs, who has been deaf and dumb since infancy.

If all the theatres finally go in for talking pictures this form of amusement will be taken away from them entirely.

Large Gathering Attends Re-opening of Colony with "Lonesome"

THE Colony Theatre in New York was re-opened last Sunday night under the auspices of Universal, with the first public showing of "Lonesome," the Paul Fejos production, with sound and dialogue, with Glenn Tryon and Barbara Kent in the leading roles.

Not intended originally as a gala occasion, less than 200 specially invited guests were expected, the remainder of the house being held for the public. The opening was such a success that the Colony management found it expedient to put on a midnight show to take care of the crowds.

The Colony, now under the management of James A. Carrier for Universal, presents an unusually well-rounded program as its new policy. Ben Bernie as master of ceremonies is there with his orchestra. Barbara Kent made a personal appearance, and Universal presented a novelty Movietone act with the Brox sisters, popular singers and dancers of the vaudeville stage.

Otterson Sees Great Value in Talkies in Educational Field

J. E. OTTERSON, president of Electrical Research Products, makes a prophecy regarding sound pictures that they will be valuable, if not more so, in the educational field, than they will in the entertainment field, where their worth is already being proved to the satisfaction of some 600 theatres that have been wired. He sees in them a means of communication whereby the art and inspiration of great actors, teachers, preachers, and statesmen may be carried from the sphere in which they move, to the ever widening sphere of world interest and to future generations that will lead to a still higher civilization in the days to come.

Discussing the possibilities of talking pictures, Mr. Otterson said:

"Were I to enter the field of prophecy, it would be to speak of the application of talking pictures to the fields of advertising, politics, education and religious teaching.

"I visualize the use of talking pictures to deliver the message of factory executives and sales managers to their employees, to their conventions, to prospective customers in sales and demonstration rooms throughout the world.

"Political campaigns in which the Governor Smiths and the Secretary Hoovers will speak in screen person to thousands of audiences throughout the country in place of submitting to the limitation of their physical endurance to withstand the hardships of speaking tours, are another likely development.

"Schoolrooms where children are privileged to listen to the lectures of great teachers and national leaders and to receive the inspiration of their speaking personalities, are more than probable in the future.

"Small churches may be aided where the shrinking congregation may be replenished and awakened to a new interest in spiritual life by the opportunity of hearing and seeing the really great ministers and religious leaders.

"Future generations may see and hear the great characters of this generation and generations to come, for here is a new basis for recording history. What would it mean to the youth and patriotism of this day if we could have such a record of Lincoln when he delivered his immortal Gettysburg address."

FBO Talking Prologues Also Separate Acts

F B O talking short subjects being made at Sound Studios, Inc., in New York, as atmospheric prologues in FBO'S special features are being so made that they can be played alone as acts in wired houses. As an instance, George Le Maire's "Joyriding" act will be used as a prologue for "Taxi 13," and Edgar Allen Woolf's "The Scoop," a one-act playlet having to do with newspaper activity, will be used as a prologue for "Gang War." These two short subjects, however, tell a complete story and can be booked independently of the feature films.

New Company Acquires Phonofilm

General Talking Pictures Corporation has acquired the De Forest Phonofilm Corporation. All of the patents, both granted and pending of Dr. Lee De Forest, are included in the deal. General Talking Pictures was organized two weeks ago by the Schlesinger interests of America, England and South Africa for the purpose of acquiring the rights to Phonofilm and making it a large factor in the talkie field.

The new company will license other companies to produce pictures under the Phonofilm system, manufacture and distribute projection apparatus, manufacture and install recording apparatus, as well as doing synchronizing and musical scores and sound effects to pictures produced by licensed companies.

Zuro Supervised "King of Kings" Recording

Josiah Zuro, general music director of Pathe sound pictures, supervised an audible accompaniment to Pathe's "King of Kings," the Cecil B. De Mille biblical production. The synchronization was done through the RCA Photophone process. For the playing of the score of sacred music Mr. Zuro recruited a symphony orchestra from leading symphony organizations and opera houses. The chorus of 100 voices was also selected from operatic forces and from Broadway musical productions.

The staff associated with Mr. Zuro is composed of Attilio Marchetti, assistant scorer and conductor; Jacques Grunberg, assistant scorer and conductor; Edward Gould, assistant to Mr. Zuro; Grace Goldberg, secretary; Irving Held, librarian, and Raoul Kraushaar, librarian.

Sound Music Listed in Whitmark Catalogue

M. Whitmark & Sons of New York, will list in the sound picture catalogue and music library now being prepared, more than 2,000 world rights compositions selected from the firm's output over a period of 43 years.

Part One, which is devoted to instrumental numbers has already been completed, while Part Two, which covers light operatic music, period successes and vocal ballads, numbers from the Whitmark Black and White Series, will be completed within a few weeks.

Vidor Arrives in N. Y. to Test Colored Talent

King Vidor, who will soon start on the first scenes of "Hallelujah," his picture with negro cast, has arrived in New York and will supervise tests for colored talent. After leaving the coast last week, he stopped off at Chicago where he made some screen tests. He plans a trip through the South and the East until he has assembled his cast.

It is understood that the picture will have a single white actor and a large number of negroes. Spirituals and sound episodes will play an important part.

Stage Scenes Exact for "Half an Hour"

THE first hundred per cent talkie which will use scenes exactly as played in the stage version will be Sir James M. Barrie's "Half an Hour," with Ruth Chatterton, H. B. Warner and Robert Edeson and directed by William De Mille for Paramount.

The only additional scenes will be off-stage action.

Wilcox in Hollywood to Study Sound

(Hollywood Bureau Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 3.—Herbert Wilcox, director of the British and Dominion Films Corporation, arrived here this week, preceding Henderson Cleland, president of the company, who was due later.

Messrs. Wilcox and Cleland intend studying the methods used in different studios for recording sound with the idea of adopting the best for British productions.

Mr. Wilcox brought with him prints of the latest productions made abroad: "The Woman in White," starring Blanche Sweet, and Hall Caine's "The Bondman," starring Norman Kerry.

Pathe Vocal Trailer for "King of Kings"

PATHE has provided a vocal trailer for "The King of Kings." The selling talk prepared by John C. Flinn, vice-president of the company, is intended for reading before a microphone hooked up with the theatre wiring equipment for the talkies.

If the house is properly wired, all the exhibitor has to do is to secure a microphone and a key to switch the announcing through the multi-stage amplifier and loud speakers used for the usual synchronized accompaniment to the audible pictures.

Installations Reported from Southeast

New installations of Vitaphone in the Southeast, with probable opening dates, reported this week, are as follows:

Sunset Theatre, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., October 21.

Arcade Theatre, Fort Myers, Fla., October 14.

Sunrise Theatre, Fort Pierce, Fla., October 15.

Palace Theatre, Bradenton, Fla., October 8.

Milane Theatre, Sanford, Fla., October 20.

Saenger Theatre, Vicksburg, Miss., October 31.

Saenger Theatre, Monroe, La., October 23.

Strand Theatre, Port Arthur, Texas, October 24.

The last three are Saenger Amusement Co. houses, while those in Florida are operated under the E. J. Sparks banner.

Two Qualify for Pathe Topics Talkies

Thirteen artists, five men and eight women, participated in auditions for the second issue of the Pathe Topics of the Day, conducted by Don Hancock of the Amedee Van Beuren Enterprises at the studios of the National Broadcasting Company in New York this week.

Of the thirteen candidates, all of whom had previously qualified from point of experience and voice, but one man and one woman registered with sufficient effect over the loud speaker to become eligible for this unique kind of movie work.

Warners Sign David Lee to Long-term Contract

David Lee, the three-year old child actor who plays in Al Jolson's "The Singing Fool," has been signed to a new contract by the Warner Bros. and will appear in three more pictures this season, the first to be "Frozen River," in which Rin-Tin-Tin will be starred.

Dates for Vitaphone Pre-Releases Set by Warners

Warner Bros. have scheduled pre-release dates for two Vitaphone productions. "Land of the Silver Fox," a Rin-Tin-Tin vehicle, will have its first showing beginning October 13, while "The Home Towners," the Vitaphoned version of the stage play with Richard Bennett, will be pre-released beginning October 27.

Columbia Pictures Signs with Western Electric Co.

COLUMBIA PICTURES has signed a contract for the production of sound pictures with Electrical Research Products, Inc., subsidiary of Western Electric Company, and that process will be used on this season's program. The announcement was made by Joe Brandt, president of Columbia, who at the same time made it plain that the high quality of the silent pictures on the company program will not be affected by the sound pictures. A special organization is working at the studios in Hollywood and in New York to perfect those pictures that are to be accompanied by sound, music, effects and talking sequences.

Discussing the Columbia production program and the signing with Western Electric, Joe Brandt said:

"We are particularly fortunate in having among our vehicles for the season 1928-29 a large number of outstanding stage attractions. These are now being seriously weighed and considered for production as sound pictures. Among the plays that Columbia has on its program are 'The Donovan Affair,' one of the outstanding mystery stage plays of the season; 'The Younger Generation,' adapted from Fannie Hurst's stage play, 'It is to Laugh'; 'The Fall of Eve,' a stage play by John Emerson and Anita Loos, and 'Acquitted,' from a story by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

"These plays and several of our other stories are all being carefully weighed from the point of view of sound production. The industry can rest assured that when Columbia finally does decide to put a vehicle into production as a sound picture it will have all the necessary values and qualities to make it a superlative box-office attraction.

"In coming before the exhibitors of the country with a program of sound pictures, we wish to point out that Columbia as always is in a position to go out and sign up the best talent the industry affords. However, not all of our forthcoming pictures will be in sound. We are also going to continue to make silent pictures. But we want to go on record that whether sound or silent, Columbia pictures will always be sound in value to the exhibitor."

Fox Completes Movietone City; Staff is Organized

MOVIEZONE CITY has been completed by Fox Film Corporation at Fox Hills, Los Angeles, ten miles from Hollywood proper. It was specifically designed for the new art of talking pictures and was created in record time. The twenty-five buildings, all of concrete, covering forty acres, were completed in ninety days.

The rapidity with which the work was accomplished was made possible by a novel system of time-saving. Starting on July 28th, three shifts of workmen, numbering between 300 and 350, worked night and day, including Sundays and holidays, and the shifts were arranged to overlap by half an hour so there would not be a moment of delay.

The result of all this activity are four buildings containing the sound proof stages for Movietone production. They are 212 feet long, 165 feet wide and 45 feet high. Each building has two stages that possess individual equipment, apparatus rooms, test laboratories and projection rooms. Every modern convenience is included for the maintenance of the huge plant. Stage One has on its second floor what is said to be the largest Wurlitzer organ ever constructed. It was built especially for Fox Movietone.

While the plant was being constructed Fox executives were signing a supervisory staff for production activities so that there would be no delay in getting under way at once. Among the easterners who have been promoted to responsible positions on the staff are Philip Klein, son of the noted playwright, Charles Klein; Kenneth Hawks, J. K. McGuinness, erstwhile New York columnist, and Luther Reed, one-time dramatist. Ben Jackson, former manager of several New York theatres, is production manager at Movietone City.

Others who have been elevated to new prominence are Charles Judels, former stage director for the Shuberts; Eugene Walter, author; Tom Barry and Hugh Herbert, authors of vaudeville playlets; Maude Fulton, former star and author; Earle Lewis McGill, formerly associated with Jed Harris; A. H. Van Buren, director; Arthur Caesar, playwright; Ben Holmes, writer and director of musical comedy, and Harlan Thompson, author of musical successes.

Among the stars who will be seen and heard in Movietone are Bobby Clark and Paul McCullough, Chic Sales, Sylvia Field, Helen Twelvetrees and Donald Gallagher.

J. D. Reilly Appointed U.A. Buffalo Manager

United Artists has appointed J. D. Reilly sales manager of the company's Buffalo exchange. He succeeds George Moerer.

Eddie Leonard Signed for "Minstrel Man"

UNIVERSAL has signed up Eddie Leonard, the minstrel man, to appear in its forthcoming production, "The Minstrel Show," by Norman L. Sper and George R. Rogan. The continuity, written by Curtis Benton, has been completed and Harry Pollard has practically been assigned to the production.

Eddie Leonard and his wife, Mabel Russell Leonard, will leave for the coast within two weeks, Mr. Leonard having instantly cancelled all of his vaudeville engagements. Actual production is scheduled to start about December 1st.

S. M. P. E. Elects L. C. Porter President

THE Society of Motion Picture Engineers, at their fall meeting at Lake Placid, New York, last Friday, elected L. C. Porter, of General Electric, to the post of president of the society.

Henry P. Gage, of Corning Glass Works, was elected vice-president; William Hubbard, of Cooper-Hewitt Light Co., treasurer, and Robert Durant, secretary. William Kunzmann and Herford Cowling were elected to the board of governors.

Important improvements in the facilities for the production and reproduction of sound pictures were heralded in papers read at the closing session of the society.

New York Secretary State Charters 3 New Firms

Newly incorporated motion picture companies receiving charters from the secretary of state at Albany during the past week and organizing in New York state, included the following: Cosma Enterprises, Inc., Yonkers, capitalization not stated, Lewis W. Cohen, Theo. J. Martin, Martin E. Smith, Yonkers; Gem Home Talking Machine and Film Co., Inc., capitalization not stated, Bertram Raff, Harriet Goldstein, Joseph J. Grumet, New York City; Briskin Distributing Corporation, $10,000, Matie Hammerstein, Gertrude Lebelson, Beatrice Z. Caine, New York City.

Canadian Women Boost the Movie Industry

A boost for the motion picture industry is incorporated into a letter from the secretary of Toronto Council of the National Council of Women of Canada to Col. John A. Cooper, Toronto, president of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada. The letter reads in part:

"The Toronto local Council of Women wishes to express its great appreciation of the splendid class of pictures that were put on in the large theatres of Toronto during Exhibition time. The Council feels that giving the people from out-of-town an opportunity to see these splendid pictures will do much to further the interest in moving pictures throughout Canada."

A wish for the "ultimate success of the moving picture industry in the Dominion," was also expressed in the communication.

"Through the Ages," Castle Novelty, Booked for Roxy

A new single reel Castle novelty, entitled "Through the Ages," has been booked for a week at the Roxy in New York, a week at the new Stanley in Jersey City, a week at the 55th Street Playhouse and at other houses in addition to more than 335 days over the Loew and other circuits in the New York territory.

Twenty-five prints will be in readiness beginning October 7, reports P. M. Brown, manager of Castle Films' New York exchange. On this date begins "Fire Prevention Week," and as "Through the Ages" deals with fire the Castle officials regard it as an appropriate film for the occasion.

In and Out of Town

W. E. CALLAWAY, Southern sales manager for First National, left Monday, October 1, on a three-weeks' trip through the Middle West and South. He goes first to Chicago and then on to St. Louis, Kansas City, Oklahoma City, Dallas, New Orleans, Memphis, Atlanta and Charlotte.

CLARE FAMES, who had a prominent supporting role in Rex Ingram's "Three Passions," has just landed in New York from England, having completed her part in the production.

SUE CAROL, returned from Europe last Monday, after having had her vacation cut short by a sudden summons from the Fox Studio to hurry back to Hollywood for work in a new Fox production.

JIMMY HICKS, film executive from the South, recently appointed motion picture representative for the "Voice of the Sky, Inc.," which specializes in a new method of exploitation, will leave New York for the Coast Saturday. He expects to remain in California for about two weeks before returning to New York.

SAUL E. ROGERS, vice-president and general counsel of Fox Films and Fox Theatres Corp., returned on Monday on the Leviathan, after a four months' stay in Europe.

RICHARD WEININGER, German banker and member of the firm of Von Lustig & Weininger, co-partners of First National in the formation Deju Pictures, and Ray Rockett, production manager of Deju, arrived in New York last Monday aboard the Leviathan.

CARL MOS, Universal advertising assistant, has returned to the Universal New York office, having completed a special mission in the London office of the European Motion Picture Company, Universal's British distributors. Altogether he was in England for nine months.

Frawley Paramount Pep Club President

BY a sweeping majority, the Paramount Pep Club of Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation, at their annual election held last week, elected G. B. (Judge) Frawley to the presidency. Edward A. Brown, cashier of the corporation, was elected vice-president; Marion Coles, treasurer, and Rose Eidselberg, secretary.

The vacancies in the board of governors, caused by five retiring members, were filled by Vincent Trotta, the club's retiring president; Sam Dembow, of Public; Lou Diamond, of Paramount News; Sara Lyons and Alice Blunt.

On Thursday, October 18, the new officials will be installed in office at the annual dinner of the club, to be held at the Hotel Astor. At that time a statement of the policy of the new administration will be made.

Craft May Make Film for "U" in Germany

William Craft may make a picture in Germany for Universal. Charles Kenyon is now adapting "The Five Frankfurters," a continental drama based on the Rothschild family, the work of Carl Roessler. This is the story that the director will film, it is said.

"Driftwood" Columbia's Third for September

Columbia's third feature release for the month of September was "Driftwood," a story of the south seas with Don Alvarado and Marceline Day in the leads. Christy Cabanne directed the picture.

M. P. News Renews Lease in 729 Seventh Avenue

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has renewed its lease for offices in 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City, known throughout the world as the center of film activities.

The News has occupied space in the building ever since it was opened in 1916.

Says Rural Exhibitors Are Not So Bad Off

W. J. MILLER, Iowa theatre broker, states that he believes that the rumors that the small town exhibitor is having such a hard time are too strongly put. In his trips over Iowa and western Illinois Mr. Miller says he finds the exhibitors not paying much attention to talkie pictures, that they say their audiences do not ask for them and that while the theatre men have their troubles that it is all wrong to think that they are especially favored that way.

It is his belief that good showmen can turn an honest penny at a small town theatre as well now as in any day. He believes that in towns where the Sunday blue laws have been voted out that the one real handicap has been removed. However, there are places where business is not good, as in the lake resort districts, but in these cases Mr. Miller feels that the exhibitor should reason out his difficulty and find a better location if he has first chosen a poor one.

30,000 More Seats to Swell Philly's 200,000

AT the last count Philadelphia's motion picture theatres numbered nearly two hundred thousand while houses now in course of construction or planned call for nearly thirty thousand more. Work on the new Mastbaum at 20th and Market streets, a 4,800 seat house, is well under way and will be followed by the building of a 3,400 seat house by the Stanley Company at 2nd and Chestnut streets. The same company will build another new house in Frankford to be known as the Circle, which will seat 3,200. The steel framework of Al Boyd's new theatre at 19th and Chestnut streets is nearly all in place and work is progressing rapidly on the new Uptown Theatre at Broad and Susquehanna avenue. Plans for William Fox's new 4,800-seat house at 17th and Market streets, it is said, call for completion by September of next year.

Producers Wise Up To Home Talent

Up from the Ranks Boys Are Getting Deserved Breaks

PRODUCTION executives have awakened to the fact that there are better prospective directors within their own boundaries than they can import from other sources. Several former assistant directors, writers, "gag-men" and cameramen who were given their first directorial assignments recently have made good beyond the fondest hopes of the producers. The custom heretofore has been to promote actors to megaphone-wielders, or to bring directors to Hollywood from other countries.

Producers find that writers, cameramen and assistant directors develop much faster. Three of the most recent cases, Tay Garnett and William Cowen at Pathe, and Raymond Cannon at Fox, have been signed to new contracts as directors following previews of their first efforts in charge of a megaphone. Garnett was one of De Mille's ace scenarists. Ralph Block, associate producer gave him his first opportunity to direct with "Celebrity" for Pathe. As a result he was given "The Spieler" which is now completed. William Cowen was for years an assistant director and had a tough time selling the idea that he was capable of directing by himself. A recent preview of "Ned McCobb's Daughter," which was his first chance, proved him worthy of a permanent director's chair, which is to be assigned him. Raymond Cannon invested his savings in an independent production to prove he could direct even as well as he could write. When Fox saw his picture, he was signed.

Others who have made good during the past year from the writer, gag-man, cameraman and assistant director ranks, are Mervyn Le Roy at First National, Bert Clennon at FBO, Otto Brown at Paramount, Nick Grinde at M-G-M, Lew Collins at Universal, Lee Jason with the same firm; Norman McLeod at Fox and several are shortly to be promoted in various studios from those departments.

"Nize Baby" Held Up

Production on "Nize Baby" has been stopped at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Story trouble is given as the reason, executives being undecided as to whether to keep it a story of mother love, or change to farce comedy. Hobart Henley, who has been directing, is reported called off, and if a new theme is decided upon another director will be assigned. Changes in the cast have been reported scheduled, but are denied by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. According to the reports, Benny Rubin is to succeed Harold Waldridge.

Via Airplane

Dr. Paul Fejos left Hollywood via airplane Wednesday night for New York. He intends to get authentic night club scenes and data for the forthcoming Universal production of "Broadway."

Signs with "U"

Benny Rubin, ace master-ceremonier for West Coast houses, has been signed to a six months' contract with Universal. He is to write and direct and act in a series of short Movietone subjects.

Celebrities

Irving Berlin and Geo. White are slated to be among the celebrities who will appear in bits for "Say It With Music," which will be Harry Richman's first starring vehicle for United Artists. The production is to be 100 per cent synchronized with talk, music, singing and dances. Alan Crosland, who was signed by John W. Considine, Jr., to direct, leaves for New York next week, where he will begin work.

Cleaning 'Em Up

Eugene O'Neill has written new versions of "The Hairy Ape" and "Desire Under the Elms," with a view towards making them motion picture material, according to reports. Both these plays come under the Hays' office ban and hence have been unavailable to film producers.

The Healing Qualities of Slumber

HAD George Bancroft not changed his mind regarding certain demands made of Paramount executives, Wallace Beery would have recently succeeded him in the leading role of "The Wolf of Wall Street" and Bancroft would have found himself on the "available" list to other studios. The option on Bancroft's contract had expired. In drawing up the new contract, Paramount executives gave him what they deemed a very fair adjustment on salary and billing in view of his work since "Underworld." According to one executive, this adjustment was considered extremely good because of bonuses, which had been paid Bancroft over his contracted salary during its period.

Bancroft thought otherwise and refused to accept the new contract. He is reported to have asked a salary greater than any now being paid by Paramount to any player or director. This demand is alleged to have been made on the grounds that Bancroft believes himself a greater box-office attraction than any Paramount offers. Paramount executives told him to go home and sleep it over and meanwhile announced that Wallace Beery would succeed him. Bancroft reported the next day and signed the contract as offered.

Whoops, My Dear

For the first time in his career, Eddie Quillan, Pathe's young comedian, stages a female impersonation in a sequence of "Geraldine," Paul Bern's first for Pathe. Brown has added Clarence Marks to his staff as a gag-man.

Arizona Bound

"Hoot" Gibson and his entire troupe have departed for Arizona to film scenes in "The Hell Wrecker," which Reeves Eason is to direct for Universal.

Helps Veterans

In "The Shopworn Angel," Director Richard Wallace is using five hundred ex-overseas men in the first all-dramatic production he has directed in five years.

Hail Caesar

Arthur Caesar, famous "Playboy of Broadway and Greenwich Village," in New York, has arrived in Hollywood under contract to Fox films as a writer. Coincident

Hollywood Drawing Lambs Members

THE Lambs Club of New York will soon have to establish a branch in Hollywood. Every day, according to reports, the Lambs finds the membership ranks being depleted. There are perhaps more members of The Lambs in Hollywood than at any time since its inception.

Sound pictures has caused the trek to Hollywood. The latest to desert his favorite corner of the famous organization is A. H. Van Buren, who is credited with staging many successes in the past three years as stage director.

Van Buren will leave New York for Hollywood as soon as he finishes "Fast Life," which he is staging for Al. H. Woods, to fulfill the terms of a contract recently entered into with Fox Film Corp. He will direct feature length productions for Fox Movietone.

Academy of M. P. Arts Hold Nominations

Report Fairbanks Will Resign Office of President

NOMINATIONS of new members for the various boards attached to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences were held Friday, October 5. With no opposition tickets running, nominations in these cases are akin to election. Elections will be held October 20, following which plans will be made for nomination and election of new executive officers to take place after the annual meeting which is scheduled for October 27.

Present indications are that Douglas Fairbanks will not take the office of president again. While the Academy is desirous of having him continue, and is at present coaxing him to do so, Fairbanks himself feels that he cannot do justice to the post with the production plans he has for the coming year. Other executive officers, who will undoubtedly continue, are Fred Niblo, vice-president; Frank Woods, secretary; M. C. Levee, treasurer.

Those nominated, and hence practically elected follow:

Board of Directors, to serve three years: Actors' Branch, Conrad Nagel; Directors' Branch, William De Mille; Producers' Branch, M. C. Levee; Technicians' Branch, J. T. Reed; Writers' Branch, Benjamin Glazer.

Executive Committees for the various branches to serve one year have the following nominees: Actors', Conrad Nagel, Hallam Cooley, Lois Wilson, Rod La Rocque; Directors', Sidney Olcott, Richard Wallace, J. Stuart Blackton, Donald Crisp, Reginald Barker; Producers', L. B. Mayer, B. P. Schulberg, J. L. Warner, Mary Pickford, A. L. Rockett; Technicians', J. T. Reed, Anton Grot, J. M. Nickolaus, Charles Rosher, Arthur Edeson; Writers', Waldemar Young, Jack Cunningham, Winifred Dunn, Joseph Farnham, Al Cohn.

Pathe Studios Increasing Stock Company

Recent additions of Marion Nixon, Carol Lombard and Stanley Smith, all of whom have been placed under contract during the past few days, indicate that the Pathe studios in Culver City are bent on enlarging the number of stock players. Already included among the Pathe stock performers are William Boyd, Phyllis Haver, Alan Dale, Robert Armstrong, Eddie Quillan and Jeannette Loff. Miss Haver is the only one of these who is not under a new and recently signed contract.

The production forces are also being augmented.

Screen Title, Unused, for Reasons

GEORGE MARION, Jr., is credited with it. He wrote it for a picture, but it wasn't used. Probably believing that it may offend their future employers. The title:

"They laughed at us as they laughed at Columbus, the radio and the Warner Brothers."

Dotty Jottings

By Jerry Hoffman

ONL of Hollywood's mysteries to me always has been . . . the sudden announcements and flood of publicity sent out on girls called "finds" . . . studios flood local newspapers and fan magazines with pictures and stories of how the girl was "discovered" in the extra ranks, a five and ten cent store, or how she made a test just for a "whim," being . . . you see . . . a "society girl" . . . and then after a few months nothing more is heard of the girl . . . except on the expiration of her first contract . . . that her option was not renewed . . . the cause for this outburst is that Frances Hamilton . . . announced as a "find" nine months ago by First National . . . returns to Pasadena society from whence she came . . . contract not taken up . . .

WITH girls such as Miss Hamilton who are independently wealthy . . . it doesn't matter . . . but there are others . . . who after bucking extra ranks find themselves flooded with publicity . . . whose hopes are raised to heaven . . . and then . . . "option not taken up" . . . it means returning to the extra ranks . . . but first hanging on until their last penny is spent in the hope of a feature role with some other company on the strength of the publicity she received . . . which rarely happens . . . why not wait a year before announcing the girl as a "find"? . . . and find out first what she has. . . .

THE "Jazzbird" is the newest Hollywood craze . . . a rubber attachment which fixes over the exhaust pipes of autos . . . and makes "bigger and better razberries" . . . actors are buying 'em to razz directors . . . directors to razz supervisors . . . supervisors to razz producers . . . and everyone to razz everything . . . a couple film people are in back of it . . . and cleaning up. . . .

ACERTAIN comedy film star . . . who headed his own company at one time . . . now finds himself faced with a suit because of his most recent production . . . a writer claiming that the story is his . . . the comedian admitting it . . . but stating that no one ever gets credit on his vehicles but himself . . . a couple of other comedians who took that attitude recently now find themselves playing vaudeville. . . .

VIRGINIA VALLI, Pauline Garon, Albert Gran, Duane Thompson, Maude Turner Gordon, Barton Hepburn . . . are among film people playing in a legitimate version of "Tarnish" at the Hollywood Music Box Theatre . . . just to prove their "talkie" abilities . . . as are other Hollywood fixtures on other plays . . . but Virginia Valli is worth noting . . . as are Pauline Garon and Duane Thompson . . . the others had legitimate experience before . . . Valli, Garon and Thompson are delightful and surprising . . . instead of spending heavy dough scouting in New York . . . executives might take a look around in Hollywood and see what is under their very noses in the line of exceptionally fine "talkie" material. . . .

THIS column . . . which you will note is retitled this week . . . is entirely too serious this week . . . really I intended to have more silliness than soberness . . . and will try to keep it so in the future . . . but after all . . . one has one's moments . . . and I am SO soft-hearted. . . .

Murnau's Latest

Among Fox productions under way is F. W. Murnau's "Our Daily Bread." Charles Farrell and Mary Duncan head the cast.

Captain Kidd

F. Hugh Herbert, who has been assigned to write the original story, "The Saturday Night Kid," was in command of a British fort in the West Indies at the ripe old age of seventeen.

Traded Jobs

Frank Tuttle and Adolphe Menjou traded jobs for a short time while the director and star were working on Paramount's new picture, "His Private Life." Menjou appeared as much at home with the directorial megaphone as did Tuttle before the camera.

In New York

Richard Pearl, the young executive who has been connected with the Burr-Hines Enterprises for four years, is in New York on a business trip.

Pipe All Hands

Reginald Denny has started work in "Clear the Deck," which Joseph Henabery is directing for Universal. Olive Hasbrouck has been selected for the feminine role.

Crook Role

Carmel Myers will enact the role of a crook in "Badges," a picture from the play by Max Marein, under direction of Lou Seiler.

From Russia

John W. Considine, Jr., announces that Lewis Milestone will make "The Shot" and "Taras Bulba," both Russian stories, for United Artists.

Glyn's Latest

John Farrow has completed the adaptation of Elinor Glyn's "Three Week Ends," and is devoting his time to "The Wolf Song," also for Paramount, in which Gary Cooper and Lupe Velez will be directed by Victor Fleming.

Below Zero

J. Grubb Alexander has completed an original story based on Amundsen's expedition to the North Pole.

Poor Screen Material, Says Montagne

THE new crop of plays on Broadway are for the major portion unpromising screen material, according to Edward J. Montagne, scenario head for Universal, who just returned to Hollywood from New York City. Montagne went to look over several of last year's hits which are still running and those of the new crop which have attracted attention. He also consulted with Jed Harris regarding "Broadway," which is now in preparation for production by Universal.

Opinions on Pictures

Lonesome

An Uninteresting Story

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

GLENN TRYON made his biggest successes in flip stories of the small-town wise-cracker with an over-abundance of ego. In this latest of Universal features in which he is starred with Barbara Kent in the featured role he is asked to do something different. There is little fault to be found with the way Tryon does his role, but the vehicle is a considerable handicap to him.

There is little in the story that can be recommended. It is a synchronized picture with some dialogue and the picture might have been better if the dialogue had been eliminated for it is entirely inconsequential and dull. Neither Tryon nor Miss Kent are given lines to read that react to their credit.

The story is very flimsy, without much incident and it drags terribly in spots. In addition it is poorly directed with many sequences running entirely too long. There is little or none of the comedy that has characterized Tryon's former pictures. He is made to do a sentimental role whose sentiment means little or nothing.

The whole thing revolves around a lonesome boy and a lonesome girl who finally get together and spend the day at Coney Island, where they enjoy all the honky-tonks and at the conclusion of the day become separated, only eventually to find that they occupy adjoining rooms in the same house and they are much in love with each other.

Drawing Power: As a talking picture, the first in which Tryon has appeared it might possibly get over, but it has little to recommend it from a story angle. Exploitation Angles: The exceptional shots of New York and of Coney Island may be worth emphasizing, otherwise it can only be exploited as a talking picture.

THEME: Story of lonesome boy and girl, who become acquainted accidentally, spend the day at Coney Island, become separated and discover that they live in adjoining rooms and that they are very much in love.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Length, 6,142 feet. Release date not scheduled. Cast: Glenn Tryon, Barbara Kent, Fay Holderness, Gustav Parthos, Eddie Phillips. Story by Mann Page. Directed by Paul Fejos. Supervised by Carl Laemmle, Jr.

The Big Hop

Fair Air Picture

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

BUCK JONES takes to the air to provide his thrills in this feature, which is a little light as a story, but which, nevertheless, holds the interest. In the end Buck gets nowhere; he winds up neither an aviator nor a cowboy, so in the end it is the audience that is up in the air. But he wins the girl anyhow and he cuts a lot of capers in doing it, so that makes fair entertainment.

The story is quite implausible if one is inclined to be at all critical. It has to do with the air derby from San Francisco to Honolulu and it has some thrilling air shots, included in which are jumps in parachutes and the crashing of the plane at sea.

Buck starts out as a failure as a ranch hand and winds up a failure as an aviator, but only because of the dire villainy of his society rival for the girl's hand. This girl, who meets Buck as he descends from a parachute jump immediately becomes interested in him and persuades her wealthy father to back Buck and his pal in the Honolulu race. The Villainous rival sees to it that the pilot pal is drugged just before the race starts, so Buck, an inexperienced pilot is compelled to handle the ship on the perilous journey. A feed pipe goes amiss a thousand miles at sea and Buck and his pal crash. They are picked up by a passing ship, but the pal is quite dead. Buck, given up for lost, returns unexpectedly, routs the villain and wins the girl.

Drawing Power: It is a picture that has a number of good thrills and of the type that will perhaps be well received in all but the largest houses. Exploitation Angles: The parachute jumps, the fatal crash at sea and the popularity of the star.

THEME: Air drama in which an unsuccessful ranch hand becomes an aviator is financed for the trans-Pacific race by the father of the girl he loves, crashes at sea, is picked up by a passing ship and returns to marry the girl.

Produced and distributed by the Buck Jones Corporation. Length 7,000 feet. Cast: Buck Jones, Jobyna Ralston, Ernest Hilliard, Charles French, Charles Clary, Duke Lee, Edward Hearne, Jack Dill. Director, James W. Horne. Author and adaptor, B. J. Mack.

"Calford in the Movies"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE first series of "Collegians" were fast, snappy numbers, but one cannot say the same about the latest, if this offering is an inkling of what its fellows on the current program contain. It is tame stuff, quite empty in collegiate capers and when it sets out to do a turn at comedy—well, the less said about it the better. Its comedy is quite pathetic.

As usual George Lewis and pretty Dorothy Gulliver are the chummy leads, and Eddie Phillips the jealous villain. Churchill Ross adds smatterings of his peculiar brand of humor and Hayden Stevenson is the confidential coach with his ever ready "Well folks."

The Calford boys and girls are engaged by a movie director to act in a production. Even as farce their efforts are pretty bad. Those who composed the plot deliberately made the goings on nonsensical and a remark let fall by one of the characters unwittingly lets the cat out of the bag. The director excuses the story on the grounds that "the audiences won't know what it's all about anyhow." Imagine a title flashed on a screen, flickering there for a minute or so and carrying so deliberate an affront to a houseful of theatregoers. That is not the proper kind of attitude to take towards any audience (if you want to hold 'em) and certainly is not genuine co-operation with the exhibitors who are trying to satisfy all those who enter their doors.

Win That Girl

Pleasant Little Picture With a Chuckle Here and There

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

EVER since Fox made "High School Hero," they've been eager to present another picture cut from the same cloth. The aforementioned piece clicked pretty well. It offered the exaggerated doings of school youngsters against fine backgrounds—and dovetailed the local color with a neat little romance. "Win That Girl" may not be quite so interesting, but it has its definite appeal—and should entertain the younger set, particularly those attending boarding, prep, high schools and colleges.

Since the football season is upon us, this one happens to unfold a yarn concerning the old pigskin. There is keen rivalry between two certain colleges—with the grid-iron feud established through a long line of graduates and undergraduates represented by two distinguished families. The feud goes back to the early days of football—with one generation after another of Browns opposing the Nortons who have matriculated at the rival college.

It develops that the Nortons back in 1905 decided to raise a eugenic fullback who might do a Ted Coy in 1927. But the youth eventually turns out to be nothing but a substitute—with a talent for drop-kicking. The finish ushers in one of those last-minute victories. It is a pleasant picture—one not to be taken too seriously—and it does spell the spirit of youth. The idea is improbable, but who cares. David Rollins and Sue Carol have the principal assignments and provide good performances. Miss Carol has a very engaging personality, but needs stronger stories than this one. The direction is capable. So is the atmosphere.

Drawing Power: Tease the title. Play up with the football season. Suitable for average houses everywhere. Exploitation Angles: Feature the Rollins-Carol combination. Use stills of Miss Carol—who has a distinct fan following. Tie up with the younger set—and athletic teams, etc.

THEME: Comedy of rivalry between two colleges—with alumni of one of the institutions determined to wipe out long years of defeat.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Length, six reels. Released, October, 1928. Cast: David Rollins, Sue Carol, Tom Elliot, Roscoe Karns, Olin Francis, Mack Fluker, Sidney Bracey, Janet MacLeod, Maxine Shelly. Director, David Butler.

"Cure or Kill"

(Pathe—One Reel)

OLD FARMER AL is seen in a good cartoon vehicle, this new Aesop Fable employing the medicine man idea with effective results. Al peddles some magic liquid to the various animals, all their ailments disappearing after they imbibe the stuff.

Paul Terry and his fellow laugh conspirators planted laughs freely in this one and the result is a clever cartoon skit. As is often the case there is more than frivolous humor in the morals of these fables, this one being a pitiful statement embodying plenty of truth.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Eagle of the Night"

(Pathe—Ten Episodes)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

PATHE now has about 70 serials to its credit, some of them good, some of them not so good. This "Eagle of the Night" is one of those which do not measure up to the standard of the usual serial play bearing the rooster trade mark. Comparison may be odious, nevertheless in reporting this new chapter play it is not possible to be forgetful of the other successes in this line that have been released by this company. Although this new serial is more up-to-date in its theme, it being a vehicle for airplanes and aviation stunts, the writer is certain that in real serial appeal—engrossing story, a rich supply of thrills, one interesting situation overlapping onto another—this chapter play is below the mark set by even the old Pearl White and Ruth Roland efforts of the dim past.

For you will find darn little that is convincingly done in this "Eagle of the Night." There is no zip or dash, and peppy sequences rarely bob up. The action is stereotyped, even sluggish. The direction of Jimmie Fulton is nothing to enthuse over, either. There's very little illusion, surprises are scarce and although Frank Clarke is used in the principal role he does not produce any thrilling stunts, at least there was nothing to speak of in the first three episodes. Judging by the first three chapters, this serial is in need of many things—a story that can hit a snappy stride, more stunts and faster action, better photography, direction that will turn in more convincing acting from the players, and a finer grade of titles. That's about all.

Besides Clarke in the leading role, the serial has Shirley Palmer in the role of the heroine, Josef Swickard as her father, Max Hawley as one of her ranchers, Earle Metcalfe as the chief villain and Roy Wilson and Jack Richardson as the minor evil doers. There is also Maurice Costello in a minor part. The story is by Paul Cruger; photography is by Jerry Fairbanks. The vehicle bears the name of H. V. Productions and was made under the personal supervision of Harriet Virginia.

The plot deals with the efforts of some unscrupulous border smugglers to steal the "magic muffler," an invention of Swickard's, which silences the motor of a plane. They capture Swickard, try to kidnap the girl and even rifle her home and set it afire in a fruitless endeavor to find the plans of the invention. In the forthcoming chapters, the heroine will undoubtedly get into more trouble, will narrowly escape the villains again and again, receiving capable assistance from Mr. Clarke. Undoubtedly the villains are doomed to failure and they will not succeed in their attempts to steal the "magic muffler."

The press book is replete with some unusually worthwhile "tips" on how to put this production over. They are worth looking over, for this is the sort of production that needs help.

"The Bargain Hunt"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

LITTLE MARY ANN JACKSON, Ruth Hiatt and Raymond McKee are involved in another Smith family scrape in this two-reeler, which coasts along unblushingly with nary a hearty laugh wrinkle until its climax when a dozen or more toddling infants put over a few laughs with their natural appeal.

It is McKee's hard luck to get into one embarrassing situation after another. So great is his propensity for getting entangled in misunderstanding with the fair sex that he is roundly slapped by indignant females on three or four occasions. Gradually wife becomes enraged with his behavior, which leads to more hot water for the tactless hubby.

Little Miss Jackson really leads in the fun-making, her natural trend for comedy finding several outlets in the proceedings. It is only now and then, however, that laughs flicker. Only when the babies are loosed by the mischievous Miss Jackson and roam and creep all over the department store does the fun flare up with any intensity.

Unfortunately, there emerges occasionally a touch of vulgarity. In choosing comedy material anything so shaded should be taboo. At the present time, however, the constructors seem to think nothing of popping up with gags that are offensive. It is not necessary to resort to humor of this type. Seeing vulgarity so prominently displayed as in many of the present-day comedies gives rise to the impression that gag men have exhausted their ability to evolve a cleaner type of fun.

"The Secret Outlaw"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS is a western featurette of dubious value. Insofar as its acting and a few shots of racing horsemen are concerned it is successful, but the plot is quite another matter, it being but the usual western bunko haphazardly arranged. Walter Fabian directing the quiet proceedings and Bob Curwood is seen as the dashing hero.

"The Secret Outlaw" is the ranch foreman, who has tried to bully the heroine into giving him her hand. Dashing Bob knocks the villain in the dust and then and there wins an enemy. The villain afterwards gets his hands on the girl's brother, smacks him senseless and rides away with his desperate crew to rob and kill. Young Bob succurs the stricken brother, learns from him the villain's intentions and rides off to stay them if he can while the brother speeds away to obtain aid from the sheriff. Dashing Bob catches up with the villains, who have by this time stolen the money. He lassos two of them and is beating up the remaining crew when the sheriff's posse arrives. The villains are shackled, the money is recovered and Bob and the sweet young heroine perform the usual kiss for the fadeout.

"The Sky Ranger"

(Educational-Aviator—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

PRESENT interest in aviation will help the sale of these very well done series of "air thrillers" from Russ Farrell through Educational release. This one has to do with the flying boys of the border patrol, whose duty it is to prevent the smuggling in of Chinks or what have you. The first reel starts out with a bang-up sequence which shows the replacement of a broken landing gear while in the air. Then, the sponsor of the patrol is kidnapped by smugglers and the search starts. Some comedy is introduced. Reed Howes, featured, shows to advantage.

"Dad's Choice"

(Paramount—Two Reels)

JUST an average comedy. You would think that a number with two such capable performers as Edward Everett Horton and Otis Harlan would deserve a fairer rating than that, but that is all one can give them here. The laughs are mighty scarce and everything boils down to mediocrity. The talents of the two players are wasted, to say the least.

In the role of Horton's sweetheart is Sharon Lynn. The comedy limps along on the plot of Sharon and Edward eloping, trying to put one over on Harlan, who is cast as the girl's father.

There's not much to it.

"The Quiet Worker"

(Educational Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

A JERRY DREW comedy, directed by Charles Lamont and produced by Jack White, which is fair enough for what it was intended—a conglomeration of mixed situations and slapstick stuff, mostly aboard an ocean liner. In the cast are also Estelle Bradley, Stanley Blystone, Betty Boyd and Eddy Featherstone—a line-up of good troupers who have done much better work than this.

"Stage Frights"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

GEORGE DAVIS, the English comedian who is quite an adept at balmy roles, churns up some more goofy antics in this latest of his vehicles. Some of the fun is good, some of it is bad and some of it is really as old as Ann. However, there can be no doubt that this comedian can portray a nut. He is a hard worker and at times he goes over with good effect.

He's planted in this one as a witless assistant to a detective, who is called to a theatre to recover some purloined jewels. In the course of the proceedings, his chief loses his watch and for a time most of the footage is taken up with the unravelment of its disappearance. The crooks, finding they can work on the fears of Davis, his chief and a timid negro, bend every effort to terrorize them. The mouldering gags of terrified negroes, quaking feet and general indications of fright are worked overtime in the attempt to net the laughs.

"Companionate Service"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

DOROTHY DEVORE is supplied with a generous batch of laughable incidents in this lively comedy which is seldom retarded from a hot pace. There is a good supporting cast in Harold Goodwin, Betty Boyd, Robert Graves, and Kit Guard. They are all okay and it is snappy stuff that they put over.

Harold thinks his dad will object to his marriage to Dorothy, so he forces her to dress and act like a maid. Of course, they are crestfallen when dad arrives, takes a violent dislike to the maid and begins looking around for Harold's wife. His plans gone astray, Harold is forced to bamboozle a neighbor to assume temporarily the role of his wife.

Dorothy detests this arrangement, and so does the neighbor's husband when he comes back unexpectedly and sees his wife in Harold's arms. The comedy finish is a fight, during which the interior of the house assumes the appearance of a wreck.

There is some strong laugh material in the scenes showing Dorothy haphazardly assembling a conglomeration of victuals, into which everything goes.

"Our World Today"

(Educational Magazine No. 1869)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

THIS is the second of a new screen magazine recently launched by Educational and is to be recommended to any theatre using short material of this nature. It is quite possible that a film buyer will exclaim: "Oh, we have shown the West Point Cadets a dozen times"—but the writer believes that these views of "America's Pride" are somewhat different from the rest. The same goes for the Aquarium shots. Fish have always been an often-used and interesting subject for the magazines, but when a lady fish-doctor is shown plying her trade, it becomes something different again. What appears to be an original is Nature's Own Gas Station in Jackson County, Wyoming. This gusher turns out real auto essence.

"Pirates Beware"

(Educational Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

ALL the acrobatic ability of Lupino Lane's is given full play in this better than average two-reeler from Educational.

The pirate story contains an amusing twist—that of an affair of the heart between the diminutive Lane and Black Betty (Betty Boyd), the latter a swashbuckling lady-pirate who falls desperately in love with Nip (Lane) and kidnaps him for her mate aboard the ship. The first mate and others aboard the packet have other ideas. Wallace Lupino is also in the cast. A well arranged press sheet has been issued on this one.

CLEARING HOUSE FOR

BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

Increased Revenue With Midnight Shows

Increasing revenue as well as emphasizing some particular picture by starting it off with a midnight performance has been successfully demonstrated by Alfred Gottesman in two of his theatres recently when he started off "The Singing Fool" with such performances. The packed houses that attended gave ample evidence of how the idea was liked by the movie fans in each of the cities.

This idea, while not particularly recommended for smaller towns, can certainly be made worth while in the larger towns. Selecting the proper picture to be singled out for a midnight show and surrounding it with the kind of publicity and advertising goes a long way to build up the interest and make it a success. It's different, and if handled right should give your customers something to talk about.

Program Editorials Good Showmanship

We are reproducing the wording of an original editorial published in the Program of the Roger Sherman Theatre in New Haven and written by Wilbur A. Moore the managing director.

Bitter and Sweet

LIKE most other businesses, the theatre also has its ups and its downs.

Today we are delighted with the fact that the producer has made for us a winning picture, we are happy that our whole program blends in showmanship fashion and we are glad that it is just the kind of a bill that the patronage of our house enjoys most. This is our sweet day. It is one of those days that we are sitting up and taking notice.

But to our disappointment there comes the day when the big picture did not turn out as big as we expected, the program does not knit together as we planned and the whole show is out of focus and do what we will our patrons do not enjoy themselves. This is our bitter day, we are down in the mouth.

But we must take the bitter with the sweet and like it.

But what about you, our patrons?
Here is the answer.

When we have a bitter day we are going to ask you to bear with us. We won't have many because we are pretty careful in our selections. And when we have a sweet day we are going to rejoice with you in the fact.

No matter how great the picture may be we are going to fight to keep it at popular prices, because at some time or other you have paid the price for something not so good, and it is unfair to tax you more when you are lucky enough to have picked a winner.

Just bear in mind that the theatre manager

Notice to Members

THE Club will gladly publish short articles on the subject of Sound Pictures and their effect on present theatre conditions. Opinions are solicited from members located throughout the country as well as foreign countries.

feels just as bad as you do when things are not up to the grade, and just as delighted when everything is rosy.

Our aim is: Sweet Days—Everything on the Up and Up and All's Rosy.

Utilizing the program for this and similar purposes can be called good showmanship in any theatre. This particular editorial could be and should be used in every theatre because it sort of helps put the patrons in better spirits if they see a show a little under the usual par of your house. We heartily recommend it to all our members and any others who might be on the lookout for up-to-the-minute ideas. Try it.

A Campaign on "The King of Kings"

We have been watching our protegee, Edwin Lughton, who is now managing the Capitol Theatre, in Middletown, Conn. And at this time we find that he has more than come up to our expectations in planning his campaign on the Pathe special "King of Kings." Besides covering his outdoor and newspaper campaign from every angle, he tied up with every school in and around the town for special shows on this much discussed picture. In looking over his plans we find that he did not neglect a single chance to capitalize on the desire of the school and church authorities to have their charges see the production, and several special shows will be run in addition to extra matinees. This picture offers great possibilities for such tie-ups and to every member who has bought it for an early showing we suggest that they write to Lughton and let him tell you just how he went about this arrangement.

Selling Sound to the Public

Once more our friend Jack O'Connell of the Vita-Temple Theatre out in Toledo, Ohio, steps forward with something pertaining to that ever important subject of talking pictures. This time it is to show us just how he is combating the invasion of other talking plants in his opposition houses, but not letting the public forget that Vita-Temple is still on the job.

The 24-sheet reproduced here is one of the group that was posted in conspicuous places in and around Toledo. The proper salesmanship that must be employed in selling the public on this new phase of the show business is ever important and any further suggestions will receive our utmost attention and will be played up on the CLUB pages.

be broadcasted to the whole wide world. And just such a bit of news has come to our attention.

The Central Theatre, located in the heart of Los Angeles, California, closed the theatre during the observance of the recent Jewish holidays even though it resulted in a large loss to the owners. But they felt that it was consistent with their own ideas and ideals and did not hesitate in so doing. We cannot recall any parallel to match this broadminded action in all our experience in the theatre business, and it gives us great pleasure to come right out and say so. True, many theatre owners located in sections patronized by Jewish people, rent their theatres for religious services, but in so doing they are generally paid for the rental and rarely lose by the transaction.

We therefore take our hats off to J. E. Schwartzbine, the manager, and everyone else who had anything to do with this action. They are to be congratulated.

Replying to the letter of Melvin Penson regarding Ralph Cokain's address, we suggest that he, or anyone else interested, write to Ralph care of the Royal-Grand Theatre, Marion, Indiana.

Requests to the CLUB service department for various information should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope in order to insure prompt attention. Due to the large number of such requests we feel that this little aid should be given us.

About the Marquee and Other Signs you had them relamped and the letters of your attraction signs touched up or painted over? Here is an important part of your

Once in a while we come across something different in the line of news that we feel should house but a part that is often overlooked if you are busy on the inside. Some managers have a funny idea that if they are busy on the inside they need not worry about the outside. Aside from the healthy angle of fresh air, we believe it a darned good plan to step out doors and take a few deep breaths, and then look over the front of your theatres. We know some mighty fine theatres, on the inside, but not so good on the outside, and for no good reason at all. Don't neglect that part of your theatre that greets your patron the first thing. And while talking about the front, carry your inspection to the box office (if yours is in front) the frames and stone work, and while you are at it, every other part of the front, lobby and foyers. Don't treat these portions of the building as step-children. They all go to make up the well-run theatre.

Airplanes and the Motion Picture

part in theatre exploitation as time goes on. This has been brought about by the establishment of airports in every live town and city. I recall from my recent mid-western trip, any number of towns preparing a landing field and the organization of these airports with the Chamber of Commerce working behind the project. We believe that live managers can capitalize on this angle if they would only take the trouble to get behind it and follow it through. (Now that I've taken up golf, I'm beginning to use the expressions??). Just this type of manager in the class we would put William L. Hendricks in. He is the directing genius of the Capitol and Olympic Theatres in Steubenville, Ohio. You may recall what we had to say about him after we made a personal visit there last summer.

Seeking something new and novel in his town, for the purpose of advertising "Lights of New York," Hendricks hit upon the idea of a tie-up with the local aviation

It would seem, from reports coming into the CLUB offices, that airplanes are playing a larger field and by proper handling worked out an "AIR CIRCUS." Needless to say, much publicity resulted from this idea. During the stunts through which the planes went, they dropped thousands of heralds into the crowds and there were some crowds when they flew low. The set-up of the announcement at which Hendricks used combines attractiveness as well as tact. You will note that he does not feature his attraction at all, and the theatre name is a very inconspicuous part of it. He started out to sell the Air Circus and that is exactly what he succeeded in doing. The fact that the theatre was mixed up in the whole proceedings, required no mind reader in his town to figure out.

Airports, in their desire to stimulate interest in their towns and surrounding communities, as well as to attract customers for short flights, will gladly co-operate on such tie-ups if approached properly. Think this over and try it out.

"Novelty" Takes Queer Form But Works

The public demand for novelty, particularly in stage shows at the presentation houses, has the "master of ceremony" at many of these theatres at their wit's end to supply the want.

One of the queer stunts evolved for a stage act came to light in Regina, Sask., at the Capitol Theatre, where Mike Goodman, master of ceremonies, staged a "backwards week."

The wording in a number of advertisements was run backwards, these announcing that the Capitol orchestra would play backwards for a change. For this he had the orchestra seated on the stage with their backs to the audience. Mr. Goodman also run across a popular song that sounded fairly good when played and sun backwards and this was featured as a novelty.

Luggage Shop in Novel Tie-Up for "Excess Baggage"

Manager Guy A. Kenimer arranged a splendid tie-up with a luggage shop to give William Haines in "Excess Baggage" added publicity when that picture played the Florida Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla.

The luggage shop, which happens to be located in the heart of the business district, placed a trunk on the sidewalk in front of their place. A very attractive sign on the trunk read, "Guess the weight of this trunk and receive free passes to the Florida theatre to see William Haines in 'Excess Baggage' with Josephine Dunn and Ricardo Cortez."

Key City Reports

New York City

LAST week's big noise remains this week's big noise so let us record right here that Warner's "Singing Fool" with Al Jolson played to over $42,000 in seventeen shows at the Winter Garden. A report early in the current week, from Warners, states that the advance sale of Jolson's latest reached the important total of $55,000 while another, later, from another source, carries the astounding figures of $92,000, said to be a record for advance sales. People are raving about the show, standing room is being sold and even Bascom and McBride, holdouts on movie ticket traffic, are reported in the field for tickets. Even though it was reported a heavy rent was necessary to secure the Winter Garden, at this rate it looks like a most prosperous season for the lessees.

Outside of the above it was a normal week along the street with most houses getting a good break. Cool weather prevailed.

The Paramount did an excellent week with "Beggars of Life" (Par), Beery's pulling power and the worth of the picture being responsible. Some interesting figures are furnished by Paramount regarding week-end business at the big Public houses. The previous week, it is claimed that "Docks of New York" broke week-end house records and now comes word that the current week's offering, "The Fleet's In" (Par), Clara Bow's latest, got $4,000 more than "Docks." That's a great start and this little Bow lady can be counted upon to get her share of trade in this city and elsewhere. The Roxy did not do so well, compared with performances the past couple of months, with a Fox feature comedy "Plastered in Paris." The calibre of this one is in contrast to recent offerings at the Roxy and in these cases attendance generally receives a proportionate fall.

The Capital had "Excess Baggage" (M-G-M) and registered a very fair week. This house will soon have its sound apparatus working and will probably start off with "Dancing Daughters," a picture that has been going strong in other key cities. The Rialto is still showing "The Patriot" (Par) and got by with a bit below average week's returns. This one will probably make it another week or so and then depart. The Rivoli with "Two Lovers" (U. A.) made a very fair return but is scheduled to give way soon for "Wedding March" (Par). The Strand with a hold over of "The Lion and the Mouse" (W. B.) had no cause for complaint. There is talk of building a new and larger Strand but nothing official is out yet. This report has circulated around Broadway for some time, as also the report that Paramount was to build a house twice the size of the Paramount on the site of the Criterion and New York theatres. Both reports are believed to be the correct dope but confirmation cannot be obtained at present.

Universal opened the Colony again with "Lonesome" (U) and sound. Ben Bernie, the wise-cracking leader and his orchestra augmented the picture attraction and the combination has gotten away to a good start.

Sound pictures continue to dominate the higher-priced houses; in fact, there isn't any change from last week's report. The Astor with "White Shadows" is still going along at a smart clip and the Central with "Lilac Time" is running along at the same gait. Both strong attractions. Paramount's veteran "Wings" still shows no sign of weakening at the Criterion. Columbia's "Submarines," distinctive both as a picture which has made good at the Embassy and for the fact that it is one of the few silent films playing at higher prices, will probably stay out the month. Fox's two sound pictures, "Air Circus" at the Gaiety and "Mother Knows Best" at the Globe had fair returns for the past week. "The Terror" (W. B.) still goes along strongly at Warners. The Cameo held "Q Ships" for another week to average business.

Los Angeles

"MOTHER KNOWS BEST," at the Carthay Circle, slated for an extended run, opened to complete sellout and has continued doing capacity throughout the week.

At Loew's State "Our Dancing Daughters" did very well, especially at performances at which Charles Murray made personal appearances.

Business on "Wings" at the Criterion was good and at the Metropolitan "The Mating Call" proved that Thomas Meighan's drawing power is still box office value.

"Revenge," starring Dolores Del Rio, succeeded "The Battle of the Sexes" at United Artists, which enjoyed a profitable run. And at the Biltmore, "The Godless Girl" will conclude a none too profitable extended engagement on Saturday.

"White Shadows in the South Seas" is falling off some and advertising to the effect that a new picture is coming, indicates that the run is about to conclude.

"State Street Sadie" at Warner Brothers Theatre in Hollywood is in its last capacity week, but is moving out to accommodate the coming of "The Singing Fool."

Weather conditions have been favorable and business in general is reported above average.

Salt Lake City

SOME highly satisfactory reports were given out last week by the Salt Lake first run moving picture theatres with a noted improvement being manifest at practically every house throughout this section since the beginning of the fall season.

The Victory Theatre has continued to lead in attendance due to the fact that the second week of "Wings" has broken all house records at this theatre, with many having been turned away.

The Gem Theatre also did a record breaking business with "The King of Kings," which has caused a continuous lineup in front of the theatre since its opening.

The Pantages Theatre did well with its offering of "Excess Baggage" in connection with the Pantages vaudeville.

The Paramount Empress Theatre has undergone a change of policy, inaugurating short dramatic presentations in connection with the first run pictures. Last week's offering consisted of Ralph Cloninger and his company in "The Prince of Love," which was well received as the opening production by a large audience, and also the feature picture, "The Night Watch."

The second run houses have also done well. "The Vanishing Pioneer" was well received at the Rialto, and Lon Chaney in "The Big City" and "The Peace Deputy" were offered at the State.

Philadelphia

BUSINESS generally in the downtown motion picture theatres was good. Three new houses, the Met, seating 3,500; the Commodore, a 1,500 seater, and the Sedgwick, seating 1,800, have opened within the past three weeks.

The Stanley with "Forgotten Faces" on the screen, supplemented by Leonidoff's Personality Girls, featuring Velos and Yolanda, and Edward Lankow, Metropolitan Opera basso, had an excellent week.

The Stanley Company's Met has played to capacity business at every performance since its opening on September 22nd, with "State Street Sadie" on the screen and a varied surrounding bill entitled "A Garden Party," with Catherine Littlefield and her ballet and Joe Lannin's Metropolitan Stage Band.

"Mother Machree" for the first time at popular prices shared honors with Benny Davis' "Broadway Revue" and a cast of 25 night club entertainers at the Fox with very satisfactory box office receipts.

The Karlton presented "The Patriot," said to be Emil Jannings' greatest role, which scored a great success and was very favorably commented on by the press.

This was the last week for "Fazil" at the Fox-Locust and also for "Lilac Time" at the Aldine. Both of these attractions have held up well.

"Heart to Heart" at the Arcadia played to average business.

"The River Woman" with Lionel Barrymore and Jacqueline Logan and a colorful revue, "Venetian Nights," drew good crowds to the Carman.

The Forum with "Lady Be Good" and a complete stage show had a good week.

Pittsburgh

BUSINESS was great at Loew's Penn, where Emil Jannings in "The Patriot" was the screen attraction. The Penn used Vitaphone for the first time with this one. The production scored a tremendous hit and everybody in town was talking about it.

The Stanley theatre also had a good week with the sound version of "The Whip." The film proved to be a real thriller and went over well with the audiences. Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield constituted the stage attraction.

At Loew's Aldine "Four Sons" held up well for the second and last week of its showing at this house.

The Davis had "Vamping Venus" and six acts of Keith vaudeville. The film proved to be an average feature comedy. Business was fair. The Liberty also had the same screen fare in conjunction with one vaudeville act. Business was fair.

The Grand had Thomas Meighan's "The Mating Call." This is a crackerjack film, and with the exception of "The Racket" the best Meighan has had for a couple of years. An added attraction which went over well was Ufa's "The Lost Expedition."

Johnny Hines in "Chinatown Charlie" brought average crowds to the Olympic. A fairly amusing feature production.

The Regent had a good week with Richard Dix in "Warming Up," with sound accompaniment. This one is good entertainment.

The Alhambra did average with "The Cardboard Lover."

The Cameraphone had a better-than-average week with "Tempest."

Albany

ALBANY exhibitors were all smiles last week as they watched the crowds pour into their houses with the result that the week was one of the best of the early fall. The Mark Strand theatre used "The Tempest" and filled the house day after day, in fact the crowds some nights became so great that they required united efforts to keep a lane sufficiently free. The picture proved one of the best business getters of recent weeks. The Mark Ritz in Albany also had the crowds standing every night last week with "Four Walls." Aside from the feature, however, the program of entertainment was mediocre. The Leland, in Albany, found good business in its week's run of "A Certain Young Man," but while the house was filled each night, the crowds were noticeably under some of the bigger productions that have played recently at this theatre.

Good business was reported at the Clinton Square theatre in Albany with its program of double runs, including "The Desert Bride" and "The Matinee Idol." Proctor's Grand used "Perfect Crime" along with its program of vaudeville. The smaller downtown houses report business as being up to standard.

In the neighborhood houses in Albany, business is good at the present time and appears to be picking up each week.

In Troy, "The Lion and the Mouse" appeared to give good satisfaction at the Griswold theatre, if one is to judge by the crowds. The Troy used "The Mysterious Lady" for the first half of the week and this went over quite well. The last of the week found "Women They Talk About" as the attraction and this played to what was termed as comfortable business. The American found "The Divine Sinner" a fairly good business getter, while the Lincoln played to excellent business with "The Docks of New York."

Neighborhood houses in Troy report business during the week as being only fair. From a weather standpoint, last week was all that could be desired, the days being cool and snappy and of a sort that sent the people to the theatres in their quest for entertainment.

Baltimore

COOOL weather, combined with rain on some days and sunshine on others, had a tendency to boost business a good deal here during the week beginning Monday, September 24.

The best results from the co-operative weather was seen at Loew's Century, where excellent business was done throughout the week with "Excess Baggage." William Haines is a prime favorite with Baltimoreans.

Following closely upon the good attendance at the Century was the attendance at Warners' Metropolitan, where "The Terror" entered its second week. Business was very good all week.

At Loew's Stanley "Two Lovers," co-starring Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman, proved a very good patron puller and that sound and musical synchronized picture was generally liked by the public. The surprise of the week was the very good business done by the foreign-made production "The Kreutzer Sonata," at the Little Theatre of 250 seats, where it was presented by the Motion Picture Guild. The attendance became stronger as the week waned. "Plastered in Paris," offered at the New Theatre as a sound and musical synchronized production started off with fair business and extra newspaper ads were taken on Wednesday and Thursday, which helped business, which wound up very good. "The River Pirate" proved a very good patron puller during its second week at the Rivoli.

"Court Martial," co-starring Betty Compson and Jack Holt, with a number of scenes taken in natural colors, was the feature film attraction at the Keith-Albee Hippodrome with five acts of Keith-Albee family time vaudeville on the bill. That week proved to the management that business is gradually picking up. The week started good and wound up very good.

"The Michigan Kid" was the feature film attraction at the Keith-Albee New Garden, where five acts of Keith-Albee high class vaudeville are shown. Business was fair throughout the week with the headline attraction being Koran.

Another surprise came in the business done by "The Cameraman" offered at Loew's Valencia, with music furnished by the non-synchronous device. This picture started fair and wound up good on Saturday.

Foresees Huge Audience for Radio Pictures

ONE hundred thousand persons will be receiving motion pictures by radio this winter was the prediction made at Richmond, Ind., by C. Francis Jenkins, of Washington, inventor.

Mr. Jenkins has been experimenting on apparatus for the receiving of pictures by radio for a number of years. He said the declaration of experts that apparatus of this kind could not be built for less than $20,000, spurred him to study the problem in his laboratories in Washington. He said he had a plan whereby such apparatus could be built cheaply, and that 100,000 persons would be enjoying their use by Christmas.

At the present time, he said, 25 amateurs are receiving the movies which are sent out three times a week from his laboratory station 3XK. They are receiving them dependably as far west as Denver, he said. Specially prepared motion pictures are used at present, but the completion of new stations will permit the sending of all movies.

Minneapolis

THE boxoffice honors for the week in Minneapolis went to "Wings," which did a whale of a business during its second week at the Strand Theatre and had to be held over for a third week. It has been months since any picture has had punch enough to show three straight weeks at any theatre in Minneapolis. Two weeks is about as long as any of them last in this town, yet here is "Wings" playing its third straight week, and this in spite of the fact that it was roadshowed here last winter at the Metropolitan Theatre.

"Four Sons" at the State was very highly praised and did a very nice business, yet not quite enough to warrant a second week, apparently. This was something of a surprise, as a good many persons thought that this highly touted film would be good for at least a fortnight. At the Minnesota the all-talking mystery thriller, "The Terror," proved a popular attraction, with the Publix Unit show, "Seeing Things," rounding out a generally good program.

The Hennepin-Orpheum, which recently contracted for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer output, showed its first M-G-M film, "Excess Baggage," and found it to be a very good drawing card. Pantages had "Red Lips" and exploited it cleverly, advertising Buddy Rogers as the star of "Wings," going great guns at the Strand. The Granada Theatre, Minneapolis' new atmospheric theatre which is in a busy outlying district, opened its doors in the middle of the week with "Glorious Betsy" and packed them in. This theatre will make it a policy to show the sound pictures immediately after their down town showing.

Chicago

GETTING away to an exceptionally good week-end business the Chicago theatres generally enjoyed a better business during the week than for sometime past. The majority of exhibitors attribute improved conditions, not only to the ideal weather, but to the release of better pictures, much complaint of the quality of pictures having been heard for months past.

Practically all the large theatres, both loop and neighborhood, are now using sound features, short subjects and news reels, and the novelty is interesting to the public.

The Chicago, last week, had as its screen offering "The Night Watch," a big stage show, "Ocean Blues," Spitalny's orchestral feature, "Living Composers," the program bringing excellent attendance. Emil Jannings in "The Patriot" continued to go over big at the Roosevelt, the picture having been given exceptionally fine press reviews by Chicago critics. The Oriental with "Win That Girl" on the screen and Benny Kreuger and his gang in "Creations in Jazz" had a satisfactory week and with the return of Paul Ash on Saturday, the house did a capacity business, "Water Front" being the new screen feature.

"Wings" went into its fifth week at McVickers and is still going strong.

"Oh Kay," Colleen Moore's feature, and Roy D'Arcy's stage offering "Arabian Nights," plus Vitaphone and Movietone, had a good week at the Capitol, while Avalon patrons turned out in force to "The Lights of New York," the first all-talking picture offered at this house.

The sound photoplay, "The River Pirate," was the feature at both the Marbro and Granada Theatres, Jimmy Savo appearing in person and Benny Meroff's "Strike Up the Band" at the Marbro, and Julian Eltinge in Charles Kaley's show at the Granada, both theatres enjoyed a good business.

"State Street Sadie" pulled well at the Uptown Theatre, where Louis Kosloff and his orchestra headed the stage show. The Tivoli had a good week with "The Fleet's In."

The Paradise offered "Excess Baggage" and Mark Fisher and his band on the stage, attendance at this new house continuing to be satisfactory.

Ottawa

OTTAWA, the Canadian capital, saw an interesting experiment during the week of September 24 in the presentation of "King of Kings" at the Little Theatre, seating 490 persons. This was the first "picture show" at the tiny playhouse and the engagement got away to a slow start despite extensive newspaper, street and pulpit advertising. Business improved, however, with the result that the film was held.

The crowd gave fair attention to "Forbidden Hours," a pompous romance of the costume type, at the Regent Theatre. Ramon Novarro and Renee Adoree drew a little better than average with this one.

Billie Dove in "The Night Watch" brought brisk business to the Centre Theatre.

"The Port of Missing Girls" did not create any tremendous excitement at B. F. Keith's Theatre, despite its problem advertising theme. Attendance was in keeping with the season of the year.

Fair success was enjoyed by "The White Sister" for its return engagement at the Imperial Theatre. This "revival" registered steady patronage.

"The Lovelorn," with Sally O'Neil, attracted the flappers to the Rex Theatre but the juveniles and males were out in force for "Spoilers of the West" during the last half. The Columbia was busy all week with "What Happened to Father," first half, and "The Canyon of Adventure" for the final three days.

Portland, Ore.

BOX OFFICE returns at the first run houses demonstrated that with even an other theatre and with stellar film productions at the first run houses, there is plenty of business for all provided the offering have the pulling power and results demonstrated that they had.

"Two Lovers," opened to nice business at the new United Artists, which continued throughout the week. The house was originally opened by Mayor George Baker.

At the eleventh hour The Broadway decided to continue another week with "Wings," which continued to run extra performances and the S. R. O. sign was put out at each evening performance. The Talking News Weekly brought out Rabbi Wise and Amee McPherson.

"State Street Sadie" continued to draw well up to the last minute and kept two cashiers busy in the box office. It was replaced at the end of the week by "Women They Talk About" and many fans welcomed the return of Irene Rich.

Harry Langdon, in person gave an impromptu and laughable skit at The Portland in conjunction with Fanchon & Marco's "Dream Song" idea. Don Wilkins introduced also Johnny Dunn, mandolinist, Zolle & Hurling, Bo Peep Karlin and the nimble Sunshine Beauties. On the screen, Wray and Cooper in "The First Kiss," drew fairly well.

Two stars who always bring good business to whatever houses they play here, are Bebe Daniels and James Hall, who this week came to the Columbia in "Fifty-Fifty Girl," and registered one hundred per cent with the audiences and at the box office.

"The King of Kings" opened to a capacity house and will doubtless go over the week on account of the interest in this religious offering.

Manager Akin at the Capital Theatre reports good business with "Isle of Forgotten Women."

Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS movie houses had a normal downtown business last week. The increased attendance brought about by the return to Central Standard time was offset generally by the bad weather and the beginning of school.

Business picked up considerably for neighborhood houses as result of dropping daylight saving time which was adopted last May over the protest of theatre owners.

Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall in "Waterfront," and Charlie Davis' stage band at the Indiana drew good business.

"The Terror" with May McAvoy and Louise Fazenda, had a big week at the Apollo and was held the second week. The house was "sold out" practically every day.

Emil Jannings in "The Patriot" did good business at the Circle but not up to expectations. Box office receipts were said to be slightly under the previous week with "Lilac Time" as the attraction.

Buster Keaton in "The Cameraman" at the Palace drew normal patronage.

Harrisburg, Pa.

SPLENDID weather conditions most of the week, return of summer vacationists and showing of feature pictures which were generally regarded as of exceptional calibre, combined to bring quite satisfactory box office results at most of the Harrisburg theatres.

Perhaps the most popular film offering of the week was "Our Dancing Daughters," featuring Joan Crawford. This picture, which featured the program at Loew's Regent, had a strong appeal for both masculine and feminine patrons. Miss Crawford has become a prime favorite in Harrisburg. At the Colonial, Billie Dove, in "The Night Watch," proved a brilliant success both artistically and financially, and the newspaper criticisms were most flattering. Wallace Beery, starring in "Beggars of Life" provided dramatic thrills for the Victoria audiences, with a fair degree of patronage. Some persons thought the play a bit too lugubrious. The State theatre had as its screen attraction the last half of the week, "Modern Mothers," which went across well in coordination with the vaudeville part of the program. The National put on a Western thriller, in "Wild West Romance." In fact Harrisburg was well supplied with Westerns, the Royal showing Zane Grey's "The Open Range," and the Capitol presenting "Texas Steer." The Grand presented Fred Thompson in "Jesse James." It is quite evident that, particularly in neighborhood theatres, the popularity of the Western thriller has not waned in Harrisburg.

The Rialto offered Clara Bow in "Ladies of the Mob," which had been shown with much success earlier in the year in a downtown first run house. The Russell gave a double feature program consisting of Tim McCoy in "War Paint" and Belle Bennett in "The Sporting Age."

Kansas City

AGAIN a good lineup of pictures at first run houses of Kansas City was rewarded with a brisk weekly attendance. At the Mainstreet, "Waterfront," starring Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, played to filled houses all week.

"Our Dancing Daughters" proved to be a real lure at Loew's Midland, attracting an unusually large matinee business daily, the greater percentage of the crowds being women. The nightly attendance saw a large attendance among the younger generations.

The Newman, which reopened two weeks ago with a return engagement of "Wings," a road show attraction, used almost one-half page of newspaper advertising in exploitation of the second week's run of the picture, which drew fairly well, although not running into any bulky profit financially. "Four Sons" at the Globe played to an average business, while Bebe Daniels in "Take Me Home" drew unusually well at the Uptown theatre.

"The River Woman," starring John Barrymore, attracted full houses all week at the Pantages. Aside from the Newman's increase in newspaper advertising, nothing was done in the way of unusual exploitation by any of the other theatres.

Oklahoma City

VACATIONS are about over for the majority, the hot weather is behind us, and an additional supply of superfilm attractions attendance is showing a marked increase at practically all houses.

Governor Al Smith's speech on 20th drew large attendance, but still the theatres did a good business, and the Oklahoma State Fair at Oklahoma City, Sept. 22-29, will also draw some business away from the theatres. "The Fleet's In" helped give the Criterion theatre big business, but the National Players showing a delightful comedy play, "The Best People" pleased a large patronage and the National Players more than made good, and have been engaged by Manager Pat McGee for an indefinite period of time. At the Liberty Theatre, "Four Sons" held forth, and the picture enjoyed very good business.

The Capitol, presenting "Wings," with sound effect (second week) continues to pack "em" in and to pleased large patronage.

"Waterfront" with Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, did an excellent business at the Empress.

"Name the Woman," followed by "College Days" enjoyed very good business at the Victoria.

Atlanta

AFTER weeks of riding high, the Howard theatre slipped back badly last week and the reasons were obvious. With "Beggars of Life," in which Wallace Beery and Louise Brooks are featured and who are prime favorites in Atlanta, and Bernardo de Pace, a favorite stage star in this city at the head of the presentations bill, the management saw fit to ballyhoo a "Tak-a-Chance Week." Other theatres advertised their wares out in the open, and Atlanta picturegoers refused to "Tak-a-Chance." It was a sad set-back for the Howard.

Keith's Georgia enjoyed only a moderately good week with Fred Thomson in "Kit Carson." Patrons did not rave about the picture; in fact, their response was very mild. So was the box office.

Buster Keaton in "The Cameraman" proved an excellent draw at Loew's Capitol. Business at that house opened moderately but the attendance built up as the week advanced.

"Hit of the Show" fell below expectations at the Metropolitan on the opening but business improved during the week. With an absolutely unknown star it is not surprising that patrons had to be won over. But they did capitulate to Joe Brown, The Photophone synchronization came in for a goodly share of favorable comment.

"Fazil" at the Rialto was highly commended by critics for its artistry, but it was not as popular at the box office as some other Fox Movietone productions.

The Tudor split the week with two successful westerns: Fred Thomson in "Sunset Legion" and Ken Maynard in "Gun Gospel."

Loew's Grand divided the week with second runs of "Glorious Betsy" and "Street Angel," both synchronized. The management reports satisfactory box office results.

Tampa

NOTHING shown in Tampa this week had the drawing quality to pull better than average business. Receipts were normal in some houses, while others report business slightly off. The Victory continues to attract very good business with the talkies. "Fazil" was the synchronized feature. Business up to the average.

The Tampa, with "Beggars of Life" as the feature of the first half, and "Craig's Wife" the last, registered an "off" week. Both pictures seemed to please, but failed to develop a draw and receipts ran a little under the average of the house.

"Heart Trouble" went over weak at the Strand and gave that house a bad start. "Win That Girl" pulled nicely, and brightened things up. "Kit Carson" closed the week to average takings.

The Franklin, second runs, had a normal Sunday with "A Certain Young Man" but Monday was off. "The Son of a Shiek" and "Ladies of the Mob" were other features used and they did nicely, with the Bow picture showing up very good.

Des Moines

THE Radio Show affected business last week at the Des Moines theatres although they all did a good week. "The Tempest" at the Des Moines started out big but did not hold up so well for the whole week. At the Capitol, "Her Cardboard Lover" with Marion Davies did very well with the added attraction of the new stage band director who is a guest from the Omaha theatres. At the Strand two pictures did well, "Silver Flame" with Irene Rich perhaps having the shade over "Beau Broadway" with Aileen Pringle and Lew Cody. At Fort Dodge, Iowa "Street Angel" played for its first post-Des Moines showing and did a big week at the Plaza, reports manager H. W. Schultz.

Reports in general over the state are that business is good and picking up.

Cleveland

THIS was a gala week at the downtown first run theatres. Big business was reported throughout, with two records broken. Big pictures, good weather, continued interest in "talkies" and sound effects, all combined to bring the tired business man and his wife and family downtown to see the shows.

"Street Angel" did record business at Keith's Palace. While it did not chalk up any new attendance record at the theatre—a record held by a personal appearance of Tom Mix and Tony—it created a new standard for a motion picture.

"Lights of New York," playing its second downtown engagement within two weeks, broke the records at the Cameo. Interest in this first all-talking picture is keen, and comment generally is favorable. Interest in the novelty is giving way to real appreciation.

"White Shadows in the South Sea," did so well during this, its second week, at the Stillman that it is being held over for a third week.

"Two Lovers jammed the Allen theatre both day and night, appealing to that vast majority which always reacts favorably to beauty.

"The Fleets In" pleased all Clara Bow fans, during its run at the State, but didn't stand up very strong on its own merits. Business was good because Clara Bow has a large local following.

Keith's East 105th St. split the week with the balance in favor of the last half when Eugene O'Brien appeared in person in a sketch. The film attraction was "Half a Bride."

"The Red Mark" shown the first half of the week, was very well reviewed, and moderately well supported by the public.

"Excess Baggage" and "The Cameraman" both drew good attendance last week at the Park.

Birmingham

BUSINESS took an upward slant in Birmingham the past week. The Ritz, with Keith vaudeville and Fox's "Win That Girl," with Sue Carol, probably copped the honors, closely trailed by the Alabama, with its "Take-a-Chance" Week, featuring nine units of surprise, including "Just Married" (Paramount), with Ruth Taylor. The Strand showed a nice profit on Warners' "The Desired Woman," a talker, with Irene Rich and William Collier, Jr., and four Vitaphone shorts and Fox Movietone News. The Trianon, with Liberty-Columbia's "Scarlet Lady," had fair business. On the whole, it was the most satisfactory week local theatres have experienced in several months.

San Francisco

IN spite of the fact that San Francisco celebrated a special Jewish holiday, two exceptionally hot days, and ushered in the famous San Francisco Opera, some of whose singers come over especially from several sections of Europe each year, each night is attended by thousands, the first run motion picture theatres, generally speaking, did very well; in fact, much better than contemplated. A circus was also in the city.

"Docks of New York," with the Publix Revue, drew well at the Granada Theatre, and Loew's Warfield was crowded all week with "While the City Sleeps," and the Fanchon & Marco Idea. The St. Francis Theatre was very well filled all week with "Tempest." "Wings" drew fairly well at the California Theatre, but not so well as contemplated.

The Columbia Theatre reported excellent business the second week with "Simba," attracting both children and adults. It was shown at advanced prices for two weeks. The Pantages drew well with "Uncle Tom's Cabin," that could be both heard and seen, together with vaudeville acts. However, the house was not as well filled as it was thought it would be. It is thought the reason for this was that the theatre is a little far up the street. The El Capitan did well all week with "The River Woman." The Union Square Theatre reported a good week with "Beyond London" and "Into No Man's Land," shown together with vaudeville acts and comedies.

In the residential districts good business was reported by the Coliseum Theatre with the picture "United States Smith," although its "variety ideas" were not well thought of. The Alexandria Theatre had a very good week with "Happiness Ahead" and "The Student Prince" drew many to the Majestic Theatre all week.

Cincinnati

ALTHOUGH the legitimate season is now in full sway in Cincinnati, two stock companies are playing, and a suburban house has installed sound equipment, the downtown houses are maintaining their usual quota of business.

The Albee had 'em coming strong from the very first opening. Eugene O'Brien, a favorite in this city, appearing in person, together with a well-balanced stage bill and Billie Dove in "The Night Watch," seemed to be red meat for the fans, who were exceptionally liberal with their patronage.

"State Street Sadie," with sound at the Capitol, although not drawing very favorable notices from the local press, nevertheless did a nice business for the week.

The Lyric, with "Our Dancing Daughters," did exceptionally well. The picture was well liked.

Keith's showed "Her Cardboard Lover," and did very well with it, although the business at this house was not quite up to previous weeks. The picture was not rated the highest by many.

"A Certain Young Man," at the Strand, had a very satisfactory week, which, however, could have been somewhat better, although the management has no particular kick coming on the box office check-up on the week.

"Circus Rookies" regaled patrons at the Family for the first three days, followed by "The Sky Ranger" for the last half. Business satisfactory.

Neighborhood houses report decided improvement in business for the week.

Detroit

THE new Fox theatre, with its huge dedication bill, took the cream of the business for the week. "Street Angel" proved an appropriate vehicle for the opening. Nearly all performances drew capacity houses.

"Our Dancing Daughters," M-G-M's sizzling special, continues to do great things at the Adams, where it was transferred from the Capitol to take care of the demand. "The Night Watch," First National, with Billie Dove as the attraction, made the week well above the average for the Capitol.

"Lilac Time," First National's aviation feature at the Madison starring Colleen Moore, suffered a relapse in its sixth and final week and the going was mediocre. "Oh Kay," with the same star at the Capitol, had a more substantial response.

Its proximity to the new Fox threw a blanket over the State, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin," a Universal sound feature, did not come up to expectations.

"Two Lovers," at the United Artists, brought only a fair return to the box office in its second week.

"Simba," the animal picture continues to fill the Shubert Lafayette at a steady pace. The Little theatre, Detroit's 600 seat house, did a surprising business with "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," run for a second week.

Seattle

BUSINESS was just hovering around the average mark in most of the downtown first run houses last week, with the exception of John Hamrick's two "sound" houses, which packed the customers in day and night. At his Music Box theatre, "The Terror" played its third week to exceptionally big business, and Barrymore's "Tempest" at the Blue Mouse theatre opened a two-week run to capacity houses at every performance. The usual Vitaphone and Movietone shorts were well received, but the features did the business at both houses.

The Seattle theatre bill was a disappointment. The stage show was featured, inasmuch as it brought back Eddie Peabody in Fanchon-Marco's "Banjoy Idea" as a farewell appearance before his opening at the Paramount theatre in New York in October. The act was a distinctly mediocre one, and Peabody failed to register with his tiresome routine as a "headliner." Seattle will always remember him as the likeable little master of ceremonies at the Fifth Avenue theatre last year, and his present type of entertainment doesn't "get over." On the screen was "The River Pirate." As a whole, the bill was not good, and business was not up to expectations.

At the Fifth Avenue Theatre the audiences showed their desire for "romance" films by patronizing "Fazil" to an extent in excess of several previous pictures of far greater worth. Business was quite good, despite fair criticisms, and the week was a successful one. Hermie King and his band again scored.

The Columbia Theatre fared only moderately well with "Way of the Strong." The same may be said of "Rose Marie" at the Coliseum Theatre, which suffered because the stage show has not played this city. "Lingerie" at the Embassy was an average three-day attraction.

The two vaudeville houses both played to average business only. William Desmond was one of the featured attractions at the Orpheum in a weak playlet, and "Love Over Night" was featured on the screen. It was better than the average film at this house. "The Port of Missing Girls" was not much of a box office puller at Pantages.

Milwaukee

THE bigger the attractions in Milwaukee's downtown theatres, the bigger the crowds, and each succeeding week seems to bring out larger crowds to the theatres. This last week has proven one of the best of the fall season thus far. The weather was ideal for show business, cool, crisp and clear. The pictures were all well exploited and the resulting business was more than satisfactory.

"The Michigan Kid" played at the Alhambra to very good houses. The Wisconsin's offering was "Warming Up" and exceedingly well received. This is the first "sound" picture to be shown at the Wisconsin and was preceded by extensive advertising. "Street Angel" is finishing its run at the Strand this week, completing a most successful stay. Its popularity continued unabated in its final week. "The Terror" held over for a second week played to good houses at the Garden. "The Water Hole" at the Merrill did fair business. "Two Lovers" received a good share of patronage at the Majestic. The Orpheum played to well filled houses at every performance; "Out of the Ruins" was the photoplay featured. The Riverside had very good patronage throughout the week; its picture feature was "Stocks and Blondes."

Business in the neighborhood houses was a good deal more brisk than it was last week. "Fashion Madness" at the Milwaukee drew very well. "The Hawk's Nest" at the Colonial brought in excellent patronage. The Egyptian featured "The Racket."

Mystery, thrills and chills are graphically portrayed as dramatic elements of "The Terror" in the newspaper advertisements reproduced above. The displays shown were important features for campaigns on this picture at the following first run theatres: Capitol, St. Paul; Grand Central, St. Louis; State, New Orleans; Music Box, Seattle; Eckel, Syracuse.

Philadelphia

THE Tower Theatre, 69th and Market streets, Philadelphia, the latest and most pretentious link in the fast-growing Freihofer-Stamper chain, was opened to the public on Monday evening, October
1st. The Tower has a seating capacity of 3,600 and has the most complete lighting equipment ever installed in any theatre. Among its unique features is a concert pianist in the foyer to entertain those waiting for seats. The theatre is equipped with Vitaphone and Movietone.

Harry T. Jordan, for a quarter of a century Philadelphia representative of the B. F. Keith interests, who resigned following the FBO
Keith merger, has returned from a several months' trip abroad and will probably associate himself with some picture venture in Philadelphia.

The Metropolitan Opera House, Broad and Poplar streets, formerly the home of grand opera in Philadelphia, on which the Stanley Company of America has taken a ten years' lease, has been formally opened to the public with pictures and presentations as the policy. The name has been changed to the Met and George M. Young, formerly manager of Keith's Theatre in this city, has been placed in charge.

The Uptown Theatre, Broad and Susquehanna avenue, is fast nearing completion and will be opened very shortly, taking the place of the Bluebird, operated directly across the street by Nate Goldman.

The Grand Opera House, after being closed since early in May, has reopened and resumed its policy of five acts of vaudeville and a feature motion picture. Joseph C.
Donaherty, who was for some years manager of the Grand, but who, two years ago, was made resident manager of Keith's Theatre and was later let out following the merger of the Keith interests with FBO, has been returned to his old post by the Stanley Company and the Nixon-Nirdlinger interests.

Baltimore

THE Avalon Theatre has been taken over from Arthur B.
Price by Louis Garman, who also operates the Pimlico Theatre and is vice-president of the M. P. T. O. of Maryland. The Avalon is in the vicinity of the Pimlico.

The Capitol Theatre, Alexandria,
Va., operated now by the Theatres Corporation of America, was reopened recently after having been entirely remodeled.

Harry Sommerville, formerly manager of playhouses in New York and a number of other cities, has been appointed manager of the Mosque Theatre, Richmond, Va.

Harry Silver has been appointed manager of the Liberty Theatre,
Washington, D. C.

The Orpheum Theatre, Newport News, Va., has been reopened after having been remodeled and with a Han-A-Phone installed. This is a first-run picture house for colored folk.

Two more neighborhood theatres here, the Grand, Highlandtown, and the Arcade, Hamilton, have had sound mechanism installed.
Both are in the Frank H. Durkee chain.

J. Henderson, for some years door supervisor of the Keith-Albee
Hippodrome here, has resigned.

The thirty-eighth week of continuous service as Master of Ceremonies at the Loew's Century here was recently celebrated by Ted Claire.

The Palace Theatre, West Fayette street here, the burlesque and movie house which gives a continuous performance, under the management of William Proctor, reopened to the public October 1.

In order to help the Fair Tax Association of Baltimore fight to have the new assessments on downtown properties removed many of the theatre managers and owners have joined that association.

There has been a raise in the assessments on theatre properties in the area designated of from 60 to 80 per cent, it is claimed.

New York and New Jersey

A NEW theatre, the Roxe, opened its doors for the first time to the populace of Irvington,
New Jersey, on September 25, under the auspices of Morton M.
Bratter, who is running the house in association with Lewis Goldfarb and Abraham Blum. The Roxe is an atmospheric old English house, strictly modern in construction and seating 1250. The stage can accommodate vaudeville. Features of the house are a new Furlitzer and Simplex machines, with sound attachments.

Mr. Bratter, who started his career in the film business 15 years ago, holds the post of general manager of the Bratter and Pollock theatres. He will personally supervise the Roxe. Sam S. Clark will be the resident manager.

Export and Import Film Co.,
Inc., have moved from 729 Seventh avenue, New York, to the Tecla building, 398 Fifth avenue. They were at 729 for 13 years.

What will undoubtedly be the largest neighborhood house ever, Loew's new Concourse Theatre, at 181st street, is assuming shape, four steam shovels being already engaged in excavation work. This house will, when completed, seat
5,000, it is said, a record seating capacity for any neighborhood house.

The Manhattan Theatre, located at 116th street and Eighth avenue, is now celebrating anniversary week.

The Golden Blue Theatre, New York, suffered a fire last Friday, which completely destroyed the projection booth. This house, run by Harry, Henry and Sam Such-man, was necessarily closed but will operate again after alterations.

The Ritz Theatre, 180th street and Boston Road, will reopen on Friday, October 5th, it is reported.

When it comes to theatre rivalry, it is doubtful whether there exists a more competitive area than New York City. One company's plans to erect a house are nearly always offset by an announcement from a rival company that they, too, are going to build in the same section.

At the present time, Proctor's has built a fine new house at 58th street, near Third avenue, which is to open some time this winter. The house is a large one, having a seating capacity of 3,000. This house is located nearby the spot selected for the new Roxv Theatre, for which preparatory construction work has begun, the Palm Gardens, originally occupying the site, having been torn down.

Walter Greene, general manager of the National Theatre Supply
week, returning to New York on Thursday. He leaves almost immediately for Buffalo, Chicago and points west.

Oscar Oldknow, district manager for the South and West for National Theatre Supply Co., is now in New York, having come to welcome his father, who returned from Europe last Tuesday.

The Manhattan Studio, 134th

Let Racon Performance Boost Box Office Returns

Theatres and Auditoriums equipped with Racon Exponential Air-Column Horns and Dynamic Units for Exponential Horns are quick to note a decided increase in patronage and popular preference. Box Office Returns afford ample evidence of appreciation.

The quality of Racon Performance brings patrons back. You gain in profits as well as prestige. Racon Exponential Air-Column Horns make the rendition of both vocal and instrumental selections as artistic as the original music, vitally real, melodious and clear. No distortion, no accessory noises, no blasting or acoustical interference.

Such an acoustical achievement is only made possible by the Processes and Materials Patented with which every Racon Exponential Horn is made; providing absolutely vibrationless, non-porous and one-piece construction, regardless of size. All Racon Horns, from the smallest to the largest having a bell of 6 feet square, have true tone value and perfect amplification power.

¶ Filmdom has very few authentic production geniuses. Erich von Stroheim belongs in the select company that you can count on the fingers of one hand. Producer of masterpieces that make money. ¶ In "The Wedding March" he has done it again! The two years since his "Merry Widow" he has devoted to the creation of this, the greatest of all von Stroheim pictures. Torrents of money, effort and box office value have been poured into "The Wedding March." ¶ Results show! Reports already received from pre-release openings brand it without question one of the mightiest money-makers of the year! Reviewers and the public rave about the dazzling spectacle of this flaming romance of old Vienna. The brilliant von Stroheim touches. The breath-taking scenes in Technicolor. The inspired acting of von Stroheim and beautiful Fay Wray. ¶ Erich von Stroheim, we pin another medal on you for "The Wedding March"! Silent or with its magnificent musical score and sound effects, it is your greatest achievement! Worthy to stand beside "Wings" and "The Patriot" and the other history-making productions that make this Paramount's Greatest Year!

"The Wedding March" joins Paramount's army of hits!

Latest news from the box-office fronts:

"WINGS" Add Minneapolis, Salt Lake City,

Oklahoma City, and Portland to long list of records smashed!

"THE FLEET'S IN!" Clara Bow hit

From Booth Tarkington's famous story

THE public demands variety, originality and super-excellence of production. The exhibitor demands a complete, diversified program to supply this crying need. With an array of product unprecedented in showmanship quality, in scope and in infinite variety Pathe presents the one complete program that fulfills every demand of the box office.

SEVEN BIG FEATURES, headed by "KING OF KINGS," are clicking to new box office records throughout the country. Eleven other features completed are all set to crash through to new records.

"KING OF KINGS," leading the victorious phalanx of Pathe, has shattered all existing records wherever played.

PATHE SHORT SUBJECTS, which form the essential unit of every well-balanced program are again setting the pace for the industry.

MACK SENNETT COMEDIES are out-Sennetting all previous Sennetts and are scoring box office bulls-eyes with deadly regularity.

THE SMITTY SERIES, with the notable personalities appearing—the first of which stars the one-and-only Jack Dempsey, and the second the inimitable Lloyd Hamilton—fill a niche all their own in any program.

PATHE PRODUCT is attuned to meet the demands of advanced showmen of today for a COMPLETE PROGRAM—one that FULFILLS EVERY DEMAND OF THE BOX OFFICE.

Complete program demand of the B.O.

PATHE REVIEW, Terry Ramsaye's screen cocktail; Grantland Rice's SPORTLIGHTS; the Van Beuren Enterprises' AESOP'S FABLES and TOPICS OF THE DAY are short subjects that add spice to the movie melange.

PATHE NEWS maintains its undisputed supremacy in the news reel field. "First on the scene—first on the screen", is the backbone of every program.

PATHE SERIALS and WESTERNS round out Pathe's Complete Showman's Program—diversified, comprehensive and quality-plus.

Sound Developments

PATHE is keeping pace with sound and dialogue developments. ELEVEN FEATURES and a considerable array of Short Subjects are being synchronized by the R.C.A. Photophone process. "KING OF KINGS" is the first big picture to be presented in synchronized version. "THE GODLESS GIRL" will have a full synchronization. "CAPTAIN SWAGGER" and "ANNAPOLIS" are synchronized with music and sound effects. SEVEN OTHER FEATURES are being synchronized with music and sound as well as dialogue.

PATHE SOUND NEWS is already a fact. AESOP'S FABLES, the first animated cartoon in sound, has already been released and SPORTLIGHTS are now in process of synchronization.

Editorial Highlights

Plenty of Real News; Likewise, Rumors

By William A. Johnston

THE film trade in New York is a hotbed of reports, rumors, and what not. . . .

You can hear almost anything you like on the subject of mergers and consolidations, realignments, shifts and shake-ups. . . . Most of it is plain hot air. . . . But the big developments ought to be, it seems, satisfying enough for anybody's interest, without troubling about the impossibilities and the improbabilities. . . . For example, we now know definitely that the Radio Corporation of America is directly in the industry. . . . Through their purchase of FBO. . . . Some big plans are in the making. . . . Of which, we shall doubtless hear more later. . . . But, for the moment, it develops that RCA will go extensively into the theatre field, into production, into distribution. . . . The purchase of K-A-O, by the way, has not happened, and there seems to be considerable doubt as to whether it ever will. . . . Still, you never can tell. . . . Much of the story we print this week about the RCA deal is exclusive.

The Warner-Stanley-Vitaphone-First National deal is officially announced. . . . First National will go right along, we are informed. . . . As one of our Coast staff correspondents told last week, First National gets a big advantage in the production of talkies. . . . Through the expert aid of Warner via Vitaphone and in other ways. . . . Further, let it be remembered that the Warner exchequer is being enriched through the royalties from Western Electric, based on licenses granted to other big companies. . . . In return for the Warner pioneer work with Vitaphone. . . . Sitting pretty is no name for it. . . . Some authorities place this royalty as high as thirty-seven and a half per cent on installations. . . .

These two deals ought to be big enough news for anybody in a single week. . . . But, we are convinced, there is more—much more—to come. . . .

At Universal, there is a marked realignment of executives. . . . Beno Rubel and E. H. Goldstein retire. . . . Lou Metzger becomes general manager and Morton Van Praag sales manager. . . . Whether further changes will happen, is not indicated as we write this. . . .

We call attention to the great variety of exclusive news from Hollywood that is now a feature in this publication. . . . This week, we learn that Actors' Equity is polling its members on their attitude toward the talkies. . . . The short subject producers have their overhead problem with sound. . . . Agents for players, writers and directors threaten a war on some of the studios. . . . And much other news, live, crisp, pertinent. . . .

Also, we print, for the first time in a trade publication, the contrast, shown from an actual script, between talkie stuff and silent. . . . And hear that it takes much less footage to talk than to be silent.

The other day, in the finely appointed RCA Photophone projection room, we heard and saw Tiffany-Stahl's "The Toilers." . . . A good picture, enhanced by sound effects, sensibly employed. . . . Box-office product, sound or silent. . . .

There seems to be some confusion about Pathe. . . . It is our understanding that Pathe is not included in the RCA-FBO deal, but will go right along as is.

Script Showing Difference Between Silent and Dialogue Film

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 8.—In response to many requests from directors, writers and technical men, in addition to interested exhibitors, MOTION PICTURE NEWS reproduces herewith actual script pages showing the difference between treatments for silent versions of motion pictures and those containing dialogue. They are reproduced through the courtesy of Paramount, being part of the scripts on "Interference." The silent version was directed by Lothar Mendez and the talking version by Roy Pomeroy. Evelyn Brent plays "Deborah" and William Powell the role of "Philip Voaze."

One interesting phase is the additional latitude given the director for dramatic direction. The silent form goes into detail as to just what facial expressions or business are required of the player. The dialogue version touches lightly on this, leaving practically all of it to the judgment of the director.

Note the similarity of titles and action. The actual difference comes in the photographing. In the silent version all action is conveyed by pantomime. The dialogue treatment has all pantomime subdued, leaving most expressions to be registered vocally. An example is shown in revealing that "Voaze" is drunk.

The amount of business required in the silent version as against the talking one is displayed in the fact that the synchronized "Interference" runs 300 feet less than the silent version. The popular impression is that a talking picture requires more footage.

Interior Deborah's Living Room—Medium Shot: Deborah is pacing nervously when she hears the bell. Feeling that it must be either the reporter or Marlay, she smiles triumphantly, crosses to the door quickly and opens it—revealing Philip, who stands swaying in the doorway.

Close Shot: Of Deborah and Philip as they face each other through the doorway. Deborah can hardly believe her eyes as she sees him. She looks at him—unbelieving—stands dazed—unable to say anything for a moment. Philip makes a little gesture with his hand, saying, "Well, here I am!" Deborah gazes at him wide-eyed—speaks his name in a sort of hush: "Philip!" Philip, quite satisfied with the impression his entrance has made on her, smiles, and with a little bow of his head, indicates, "May I come in?" Deborah moves closer to him as she draws him into the room. She is eager now, joyous. Philip's steps are a bit unsteady.

Medium Shot: Deborah brings Philip down near her desk, talking happily—now almost beside herself with joy at seeing him again—crooning over him like a mother over her child. She takes his hat, starts to help him out of his coat—and, as she is pulling the coat off, Philip says with a little smile, still a bit out of breath:

Title 17: "Celebrating an early funeral! Going to snuff out, Marlay said!" Deborah looks at him quickly as she hears this, drops his coat on a chair near the desk, then comes to him and says eagerly:

Title 18: "Then you did see him?"

In and Out of Town

BERT GLENNON, director on the FBO lot, has left Hollywood and is due to arrive in New York this coming Sunday. He will act as screen director for "Stepping High," FBO's first all-talkie. Also arriving in New York during the week was Gene Markey, who will collaborate with Mr. Glennon on this production.

MURRAY W. GARSSON, president of the Buck Jones Corporation, returned last week after an extended stay in Europe. While in London he closed a contract with Michael Balcon, president of Gainsborough Productions, for the distribution of the Jones vehicles.

ARTHUR A. LEE, president of Amer-Anglo Corporation and vice-president of the Gaumont-British Corporation of Canada, Ltd., has returned on the Berengaria from a three weeks' visit to London.

HARRY SCOTT, short subjects sales manager of Pathe, is on a tour of the exchanges, making Detroit his first stop. His itinerary includes Chicago, St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Dallas and Memphis.

ARTHUR HORNBLow, Jr., production executive for Samuel Goldwyn, arrived in New York this week to confer with Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld on the vocal, sound and orchestral effects for "The Awakening."

PAULINE FREDERICK arrives in New York this week from Hollywood, where she recently finished the leading role in "On Trial" for the Warner Bros. She is starring temporarily in a stage play.

WILLIAM HAINES spent a few days in Manhattan last week and then left for Virginia, where he will visit his mother, later returning with her to California.

"Noah's Ark" Premiere at Chinese Theatre

"Noah's Ark," the Warner Bros. special, starring Dolores Costello with George O'Brien in the leading male role, will enjoy its world premiere at Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Los Angeles, on the evening of November 1.

A brilliant opening is planned for it.

Jeritza Negotiating for Opera Talkie, Report

RCA Enters Industry; Gets FBO and Will Produce in East

Going Into Production at Early Date on Its Own; Will Have Theatres From Coast to Coast; Big Plans in Prospect

THE Radio Corporation of America is to enter the production field in the East in both feature length pictures and short subjects. This production will be entirely independent of any done by FBO, which has been acquired by the Radio Corporation. It is also reported that RCA is acquiring the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Circuit, but this may not materialize.

Negotiations are now under way for a studio in New York, but there is a hitch in the proceedings temporarily because of the fact that five companies are in negotiation for the same studios. RCA, however, is said to have the inside track and expects to have the papers signed within the next three or four weeks. Production arrangements will then be rushed to a conclusion and features and shorts will be placed in production with as little delay as possible.

Through FBO, features and shorts will also be made by the Radio Corporation both on the Coast and at Sound Studios, Inc., in New York. The latter plant was recently organized by Joseph P. Kennedy and is under the direction of Bob Kane.

The product of these plants will be distributed through the FBO organization which will doubtless be expanded to take care of a wider scope of business than it has ever before handled, for RCA is said to be going into the production end of the industry on a large scale.

Extensive Theatre Chain

The Radio Corporation, whether or not the deal for K-A-O is eventually consummated, is planning an extensive string of theatres of its own that will extend from coast to coast. The deal for K-A-O has by no means reached a conclusive stage yet and it is intimated that there is still some doubt regarding it. The deal for FBO, from all accounts, has been concluded. It is said to be likely that a hitch in the proceedings may result in the deal for the Keith-Albee-Orpheum circuit being abandoned altogether. The story of the latter deal, it is said, leaked out from a source outside the ranks of the Radio Corporation and that it is not improbable that nothing will come of it.

If the K-A-O deal is concluded, it is said that Joseph P. Kennedy will retire from both offices he holds with the companies. He is chairman of the board of directors of K-A-O and president of FBO. It is also said that if these results materialize, Kennedy will not retire from the motion picture industry, but that he will be installed at the head of the Pathe organization. Radio corporation officials, it is said, are not interested in the purchase of Pathe, despite rumors to the contrary.

On top of all these reports is another that the Radio Corporation is involved in a larger deal than that involving the K-A-O circuit. It is now in process of consummation and is expected to be completed within

Agents of 500 Players, Writers, Directors, Threaten War Against Studios

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 9.—War is threatened against Fox and Warner Brothers by the business representatives of nearly five hundred players, writers and directors as the result of the alleged refusal of both studios to recognize the agents in offering positions to artists, scenarists and directors.

It is known that at least twenty leading agents having contracts with players, writers and directors for business representation are holding secret meetings to form a protective association through which to launch reprisals.

The most important feature of the proposed defense against the alleged boycott of agents by Warner and Fox, as reported by those attending the meetings, will be a demand to their clients to absolutely ignore all calls received direct from either of these studios or other studios where the same policy toward business representatives is adopted; also to refuse any offers of work not made through the respective agents.

The penalty for accepting employment direct by any writer, player or director whose agent is a party to the association agreement, will be, it is reported, the refusal by any other agent members to represent them. Leading business representatives contend, with considerable bitterness, that the alleged action of Warner and Fox is the forerunner of similar intentions by other members of the producers' association and that, in effect, it is being done as a test to determine just how successfully the studios can ignore the agents.

The immediate concern of the agents leading in the movement is the number of clients they can depend upon to refuse employment offered direct by the studios. If the clients support the agents there will be a very interesting situation created. Almost five hundred important players, writers and directors would have to refuse work on the Fox and Warner lots while these studios refuse to recognize the agents, thereby creating a market for new screen faces and lesser known writers and directors.

It is noted that practically all the writers, directors and players imported here for dialogue pictures have been signed direct by the studios, with no agents negotiating contracts. On the other hand, studios claim so many misrepresentations have been made by agents on behalf of clients in the past that it is useless to deal with them.

the next few weeks. Whether it is a producing, distribution or theatre deal has not been divulged, nor will it be, it is said, until every final arrangement is concluded and the papers signed.

Little Theatre Movement

Among the projects being considered by the Radio Corporation, in addition to acquiring theatres from coast to coast is one to start a "little theatre" movement that will be carried into exclusive residential sections and communities. The plan suggested is to build theatres having seating capacities of from about 150 to 400 seats and to charge an admission of $1.50 or even $2 for all pictures shown, so that the houses may be exclusive to residents of such communities.

Many other innovations are planned by the company, which intends to conduct its operations along various lines. Already there has been an exchange of professors arranged by RCA between Columbia University and Cambridge University of England. Much production along educational lines is planned and eventually television will be in full operation within the homes, though that is a project which is said to be considerably in the future.

The order for equipment recently signed by the K-A-O circuit with RCA is said to run close to $10,000,000 and it is also said

Fralick Denies He Will Quit Business; Charges Whispering Campaign

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 9.—Reports that Freddie Fralick, one of the best known artists' representatives here and one of the publishers of the Standard Casting Directory, plans to sell his business and publishing interests are emphatically denied by Fralick.

The rumor has been widely circulated in the last few days by individuals whom Fralick is endeavoring to identify on the theory that their purpose is ulterior. This particular whispering activity is creating considerable comment since Fralick's clientele includes some of the best known players here, among them Lewis Stone, Ernest Torrence, Lloyd Hughes, Louis Fazenda, Doris Kenyon, Tully Marshall and others.

Committee Ratifies The Standard Contract

Arbitration Financing Plan Agreed Upon Does Not Include Exhibitor Organizations

AT a meeting in New York City on Oct. 4th and 5th, the Contract Committee of the Motion Picture Trade Practice Conference ratified the Standard Exhibition Contract as drawn at the Chicago meeting, Feb. 21, 1928, agreed upon a plan to finance the operations of Boards of Arbitration and reached a conclusion that financing of national and local exhibitor organizations should not be linked with the financing of arbitration boards.

The agreement made in Chicago was that if prior to June 1, 1928, a plan to finance operations of the Boards of Arbitration, national and all local exhibitor organizations had not been agreed upon, the Contract

Committee would again meet to make whatever amendments, eliminations from, or additions to the contract deemed necessary.

A communication from the Contract Committee does not contain any hint of a plan under consideration for the financing of exhibitor organizations. The paper is dated New York City, Oct. 5, and is signed by Felix F. Feist, Jos. I. Schnitzer, Ned. E. Depinet, R. R. Biechele, Nathan Yamins, B. N. Berinstein, H. M. Richey, secretary, and Gabriel L. Hess, secretary. It is attested to by R. H. Cochrane and R. F. Woodhull, chairmen.

Fitzgerald Obtains Site Near K. C. for Studio

James A. Fitzgerald, producer and director, announced this week that he had obtained an option on forty acres of land eleven miles north of Kansas City as a site for a studio. Imperial Productions, Inc., with a capital of $500,000 is forming with William M. Pizor, of New York, as president. Mr. Fitzgerald said. Articles of incorporation will be filed in Jefferson City, Mo., state capital, in a few days, it was said. A series of fourteen pictures is planned as the opening work of the studio, which was no stock selling plan, Mr. Fitzgerald announced. The studio will be completed by January 27, according to present plans.

Changes in Ownership of Ohio Circuit

A division of theatres operated by Variety Amusement Company, Ohio, has followed a change of personnel of the organization. Isaac and Joseph Silverman have sold their interest in Variety Amusement Company and the Midwest Properties Company to S. H. Stecher, Meyer Fine and Abe Kramer with whom they had been associated. They later purchased the out-of-town houses owned by the company and formed the Strand Theatre Company of Akron under which they are being operated. Silverman Brothers are maintaining headquarters in the Strand theatre building, Akron. The houses they have acquired by this deal are the Palace, Lorain; Ohio, Mansfield; Strand, Akron; and Alhambra, Canton. Messrs. Stecher, Fine and Kramer have kept the Cleveland houses and continue to operate them as the Variety Amusement Company chain, with headquarters in the Union Bldg., Cleveland.

In the reorganization the following officers were elected: Meyer Fine, president; S. H. Stecher, vice-president; Abe Kramer, secretary and treasurer. They control thirteen houses in Cleveland; namely: Variety, Shaw-Hayden, Oriental, Moreland, Cedar-Lee, Kinsman, Imperial, New Broadway, Hilliard Square, Union Square, Detroit, Homestead, and the new Up-Town at St. Clair Ave. and East 107th St., which will be completed Thanksgiving.

Paramount Newsreelman Joins Byrd Expedition

Departing on a journey that will take him away from civilization for two years, Willard VanderVeer, Paramount News cameraman, this week bade farewell to his wife, son and friends before entraining for Buffalo where he joined Commander Byrd. At the station he was also seen off by Emanuel Cohen, editor of Paramount News, and many members of the newsreel staff. A short time previous to his departure, Mr. VanderVeer was tendered a large reception at the Paramount News Laboratory. All members of the executive staff were present to wish him luck and his fellow cameramen presented him with a wrist watch.

The Byrd party will, upon arriving at Los Angeles, leave for the whaler Larsen on which the run to New Zealand will be made. There, four vessels of the expedition will meet and VanderVeer will rejoin Rucker, the other Paramount News cameraman, who departed last August on the ice breaker, City of New York.

Bandit Escapes With $6,400 from Chicago Theatre

A lone robber entered the basement offices of the Chicago Theatre at ten o'clock on Sunday night, and while four thousand patrons were enjoying the performance in the big auditorium, herded six employees of the theatre in an office and escaped with $6,400. The theatre men in the office at the time were M. F. Concannon, manager; H. Bishop, his assistant; John Brown, superintendent; E. Levin, assistant manager and Baba Cobb, treasurer.

A second robbery was staged at the Bel-park Theatre at Cicero and Belmont Avenues, where two men forced Manager Louis Weil and his wife into the projection room and escaped with $2,300. It was two hours before Mr. and Mrs. Weil were able to force the door and notify the police.

Marks Brothers to Build 2 Theatres in Chicago

Marks Brothers will give Balaban and Katz and other rivals more opposition in the Chicago section, where a hot theatre skirmish is now in progress. The firm plans to construct two large theatres, one to be in the loop and the other to be a neighborhood house.

The loop theatre, says Louis L. Marks, president of the company, will be Chicago's largest theatre. A report that the site is at State and Adams Streets was not confirmed.

Large Attendance for Toronto Convention

MORE than 400 personal invitations have been sent out by the Ontario Division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to exhibitors and exchange managers in Eastern Canada to attend the annual convention of the M.P.T.O. at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, October 16, 17 and 18. Many replies were received and Laura Elston of Toronto, convention secretary, expressed the belief that more than 200 moving picture men of Ontario and Quebec would attend. It is probable that 1,000 persons, including the ladies, will gather in Toronto for the convention.

Prominent figures at the convention will include R. F. Woodhull, president; M. J. O'Toole, secretary; C. J. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Film Boards of Trade; John Eberson, authority on atmospheric theatre effects; Col. John A. Cooper, Toronto, president of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada, representing Will Hays; John C. Brady of Toronto, president of the Ontario M.P.T.O.; N. L. Nathanson, Toronto, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp.; Hon. J. T. Monteith, representing the Ontario Government, and Mayor Sam McBride of Toronto.

Warner — First Nat'l. — Stanley Merger Announced

Each Organization to Retain Personnel Intact, Says Announcement; Circuits Sell Stock for Cash to Warner

OFFICIAL announcement was made October 9 of the merger of Warner Brothers, Vitaphone Corp., Stanley and First National. The announcement, which spoke of the deal as a two hundred million dollar combination, was made by H. M. Warner and Irving D. Rossheim, in a joint statement.

Contracts covering the combination, which involves companies whose annual gross is said to exceed $100,000,000, have been signed and are subject only to formal ratification by stock holders.

Contracts covering the combination, which involves companies whose annual gross is said to exceed $100,000,000, have been signed and are subject only to formal ratification by stock holders.

The merger was effected under auspices of Goldman, Sachs & Co., Warner bankers, who will be represented on the Board by Waddill Catchings.

The announcement specifically said that the various companies would retain their organization and personnel intact and would continue to function under the guidance of the executives who have brought them to their present outstanding position in the industry.

The announcement continued: "The Stanley Co., which has a chain of theatres blanketing the most important cities in the East, will be assured of a continuous supply of Vitaphone Talking Pictures from Warner Bros. and from First National Pictures.

"Stanley Co. has an annual purchasing power of $10,000,000 for film rentals which is regarded as being of considerable value to Warner Bros. in the rental of their pictures to other theatre circuits controlled by rival producer-distributor-exhibitor organizations.

"First National will go into the production of talking pictures on an extensive scale aided by the facilities and equipment of Warner Bros., whose pioneer work for the past two and a half years with Vitaphone has been largely responsible for the success of talking pictures to date. The reciprocal exchange of stars, studios, and technical facilities between Warner Bros. and First National is expected materially to increase the artistic values of the output of each company.

"Theatre circuits, controlled by the stock holders of First National, who have sold their stock for cash to Warner Bros., will in addition receive franchises from Warner Bros., Vitaphone and First National for periods of from ten to twenty-five years. This assures these companies of an outlet for their combined product in key centers of Illinois, through the Balaban and Katz circuit; Missouri, through Skouras Bros.; Michigan, through Kunsky Theatres; Minnesota and the Dakotas, through Finkelstein and Ruben; Nebraska and Iowa, through A. H. Blank; and the major portion of the South through Saenger Enterprises.

"In addition to the new revenues accruing to Warner Bros. from these theatre circuits and from the terms of their deal with Stanley and First National, its income will be further enhanced by royalties received through the Western Electric Company. These royalties are based upon licenses granted by Western Electric to Paramount Famous Lasky, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists, Fox Films, Universal Pictures, Columbia Pictures, Christy comedies and Hal Roach Comedies, for the use of Western Electric apparatus of which Vitaphone is the outstanding medium, in the success of Talking Pictures.

"The new Board of Directors of Warner Bros. will consist of H. M. Warner, Major Albert Warner and J. L. Warner; Henry A. Rudkin, Irving D. Rossheim, Simon Fabian, Moe Mark, Morris Wolf and Waddill Catchings.

"The merger terms, as outlined in a letter mailed to stock holders of the Stanley Co., provide that each 100 shares of stock of that company will be exchangeable for 80 shares of convertible preferred stock of Warner Bros., 8 shares of Warner Bros. Common stock, and $1,150, in cash. The Warner Bros. preferred stock, entitled to a cumulative dividend of $2.20 a share annually to Sept. 1, 1930 and thereafter to a cumulative dividend of $3.85 a share, will be convertible into common stock of the company up to Sept. 1, 1930, in the ratio of 55/125th share of common for each share of preferred. The first dividend to be paid will be for the six month period ending February 28, 1929.

"The letter to stock holders of the Stanley Co. calls for deposit of the stock with the New York Trust Company prior to October 25, 1928, by stock holders desiring to make the exchange. Action on the deal will be taken by the Warner Bros. stock holders at their annual meeting.

Await Dialogue Decision

Producers Anxious to Settle Controversies Over Censors' Rights to Rule on Talking Sequences

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 7.—Producers of talking pictures are anxiously awaiting the outcome of controversies now existing as to whether censorship boards can rule on dialogue sequences in motion pictures. Dialogue writers, naturally, are vitally interested as they feel their hands are tied in the writing of spoken lines and point to the scope given legitimate theatre playwrights in the handling of such situations.

Should censorship boards secure the right to pass on dialogue, motion picture producers stand to lose millions in retakes. Fixing scenes in a silent version to meet with the demands of censor bodies is in most cases a simple matter. A title can be either rewritten or eliminated, or a scene cut out and a title substituted to explain the action. Such methods are not possible for films synchronized with talk. It means going back to the studio, being remade and the cast in the scene recalled to do the action over. In many cases members of the cast are not available when needed for such retakes, which means holding up release of the production in censored territory.

Were it not for hundreds of conflicts by various censorship bodies in ruling on films in the past, producers would have no worry in regard to their attitude on dialogue. It is the knowledge that a sequence will be considered perfectly innocent in 47 states and be barred in one because of opinions of individuals comprising that board that creates hesitation. For the action of that one censor body necessitates the remaking of the scenes objected to at the cost of many thousands of dollars in order to release the picture in that particular territory. In such cases, however, producers can have recourse to the Federal courts and bring suit to recover. Meanwhile each day the picture is held back from release ties up so much more money.

Dialogue writers complain that it is decidedly unfair to allow all freedom to legitimate theatre writers and to handcuff those for the screen. If they must follow dictates of censor bodies, they claim the dialogue will be unnatural, uninteresting and generally amateurish. This will ruin the production. Inasmuch as the popular vogue is for underworld, back-stage and night-life stories, a wee bit of freedom in expression is required by dialogue authors. Otherwise, characters of waiters, gangsters, hoofers, truckmen, longshoremen, laborers, et al will have to be endowed with "a touch of lavender."

M. P. T. O. A. To Discuss Sound Other Outstanding Subjects at Toronto Gathering Will Be Legislative Situations and Labor

LEGISLATIVE situations, Sound Pictures and Labor will be the three outstanding subjects for consideration at the Ninth Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America which opens next Tuesday, October 16, in Toronto.

"Congress re-opens in December to conclude the business of the present session. The Brookhart Bill, Sunday Closing measures and suggestions of National Censorship still hang fire in Washington. It is understood that an effort will be made to force conclusions in the Brookhart Measure. Senator Brookhart has decided on certain changes. Opinion is somewhat divided on the issue and unless something unusual occurs the measure will not pass this session," says the announcement from M.P.T.O.A. National headquarters.

"Court procedures now under way may clear the atmosphere considerably and take up many of the situations included in the Brookhart measure. The same legal conditions which surround the court action when applied to the Iowa Senator's bill strongly question its constitutionality. It is likely that as Congressional leaders are advised of these matters at new hearings it will be found best to test one division of the laws judicially, before adding more of a like character.

"Then the bigger legislative situation hedges about the meeting of the lawmaking bodies in forty-three states next winter and spring. The mind of the average legislator is very prolific of new tax and regulatory ideas. Every big or growing business is always subject to attack in these directions.

"At the Toronto Convention the legislative situation will be definitely classified. Cooperation will be asked from every section of the industry. The Motion Picture Theatre is now giving so much extra service to Nation, State and City that its case in legislative halls can always be presented in a favorable way.

Film Board Answers Questions on Article 21. Standard Contract

A LETTER from Gabriel L. Hess, general attorney to the Film Boards of Trade, to Louis Nizer, secretary of the New York Film Board of Trade, sets forth the answers to questions concerning Article Twenty-first of the Standard Exhibition Contract which deals with the proper filing of a notice prior to the cancellation of a film deemed to show in a given locality because of racial or religious prejudice.

Under the provisions of Article Twenty-first, the letter states, the exhibitor must put his question to the distributor in writing in a form recommended by the Film Board of Trade and considerable stress is made upon what constitutes "a reasonable length of time" before the exhibition date of the picture involved. The exhibitor must also file notice of his claim with the Secretary of the Board of Arbitration and request a hearing so as to enable the Board of Arbitration to make its determination prior to the play date of the picture.

"No phase of the Sound Picture situation will be left untouched. Four of the best informed men in the business will handle that. Architect John Eberson of Chicago will discuss its acoustic elements in his talk on building theatres for service and profit. Fred Desberg of Cleveland the General Manager of the Loew Theatres in the middle west, will give the chain theatre version. M. A. Lightman, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas will tell about the "Main Street" or smaller theatre standpoint and Rudolph Miehl, Assistant Superintendent of Projection for the Publix Theatres, will tell of the mechanical, installation and operation elements.

"Speakers will dwell on the practical divisions of the Sound Picture problem, its present and future, cost of operation and maintenance and possible picture supply.

"The Labor situation will be definitely handled. The equity of the present arrangements between Theatre Owners and Unions of Theatre employees will be given complete consideration. Arrangements will be made to bring about more neutral and satisfactory situations. There will be no skimming of the surface in this matter. It will be gone into in a thorough manner."

President George W. Harvey, of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers will address the convention on the never and ever-changing elements of Exploitation. The Music Tax situation will be handled by Col. John A. Cooper of Toronto and others.

The Banquet which will be held at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on the evening of Wednesday, October 17th will be a brilliant affair. Among the listed speakers are William Phillips, United States Minister to Canada, James Malcolm, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce and Carl Milliken, twice Governor of Maine.

President R. F. Woodhull will represent the National organization at the Banquet and a Canadian exhibitor and others will also respond.

Metzger Gen'l. Manager of "U" Beno Rubel and E. H. Goldstein Resign; Van Praag Becomes Sales Chief, Laemmle Announces IMPORTANT executive changes were announced this week by Carl Laemmle, President of Universal.

Beno Rubel, who has been associated with Universal in an advisory capacity and acting as Mr. Laemmle's assistant, resigned to take a long rest.

E. H. Goldstein, Treasurer of the Company, also resigned after seventeen years' association with Universal.

Following the Rubel and Goldstein resignations, Mr. Laemmle announced the appointment of Lou B. Metzger, at present general sales manager, as general manager of the concern. Morton Van Praag, heretofore Western sales manager, is promoted to the post vacated by Mr. Metzger.

The announcement said that Mr. Goldstein "has been perfecting plans entirely out of the industry, which he will announce later." The matter of selection of a treasurer to succeed him will be taken up at the next meeting of the Board of Directors.

Mr. Laemmle, the announcement said, has decided to consolidate a number of duties which heretofore had come under various heads, in the title and duty of General Manager, which Mr. Metzger now becomes. He has been with Universal ten years, in every capacity in the exchange system, right up to the handling of the whole sales organization.

"He will enter upon his new duties with a thorough knowledge of both angles of the business—the production and distribution ends," the announcement continues. "Mr. Laemmle has the utmost confidence that he will be able to consolidate them as they have never been consolidated before."

Mr. Van Praag, new general sales manager, has had a rapid rise in the Universal exchange system, starting with the Washington exchange through the Big U and into the general sales organization. His successor as Western sales manager has not yet been named.

Herschel Stuart Is Made General Manager of Poli Chain

HERSCHEL STUART has been appointed general manager of the Poli Circuit of theatres in New England, according to announcement made by Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres, and Winfield Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of the Fox Film Corporation. Stuart's headquarters will be in New Haven, Conn. Acquisition of the Poli chain by the Fox Film Corporation was announced a few weeks ago. Stuart has been in charge of West Coast's Seattle division.

The promotion of Stuart comes after a long period of service for West Coast Theatres and many years of hard experience in the exhibiting end of the motion picture industry. He started his theatrical career in Dallas, Texas, as manager of the Old Mill Theatre. He was later made general manager of the Halsey Circuit in Texas. When Famous bought the circuit, Stuart was placed by Harold B. Franklin, then in charge of Famous Players chain, in St. Louis, where he remained for several years. When Franklin assumed the presidency of West Coast he placed Stuart in charge of the Seattle division.

Demand Censor Appeal

Toronto Exchange Men Present "Ultimatum" in Urging Support from Government

PROTESTS regarding censorship conditions in Ontario were carried to Hon. J. D. Monteith, Provincial Secretary, Toronto, on October 4, when a deputation representing every film exchange in Ontario waited upon him to draw attention to grievances and to offer concrete suggestions on several matters of importance.

The delegation, which consulted with Hon. Dr. Monteith behind closed doors for two hours, presented an "ultimatum" calling upon the Ontario Government to establish a film court of appeal entirely separate from the present Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors and to appoint a Judge of the County Bench as chairman of that court with supervising power over all moving picture matters in Ontario.

The film exchange managers also asked for the speedy appointment of two moving picture censors to fill vacancies, one of which occurred practically three years ago in the death of Major A. S. Hamilton, chairman of the Ontario Board. The managers also requested the appointment of a permanent chairman of the censor board without further delay, the successor to Major Hamilton having never been named.

Further, the film distributors declared that Ontario censorship was unduly severe, particularly in recent months, and asked for more reasonable treatment on the part of the present board. A demand was also made for a substantial reduction in the annual Provincial license fees for film exchanges and for a lowering of the censorship fees, which were considered unduly high.

It was pointed out that the present system of appeals was not satisfactory because the Ontario Board of Censors merely became an appeal board for a reconsideration of its own decision when a complaint was duly registered by a film renting company. A higher court was desired so that all appeals from censorship rulings would result in entirely fresh consideration of a case.

Matters were not facilitated with two vacancies on the Board of Censors, the second one of which had occurred early last summer in the death of J. M. O'Brien. Regulations called for a board of five members.

Walsh Injured, Cummings To Direct "Cabelleros"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, October 9.—Irving Cummings has taken over the direction of "The Cabelleros," following an accident to Raoul Walsh when a jack rabbit jumped through the windshield of Walsh's car. The accident may result in Walsh's losing the sight of one eye.

Warner Baxter will play the role Walsh was doing in addition to directing.

Prizes Awarded in First National Drives

Under the terms of the First National sales drive contests and of the Ken Maynard contest, prizes totaling $2,200 have been awarded the managers and employees of the winning branches.

Of the $1,500 offered by Joseph M. Schenck, producer of "Camille," a prize of $500 was awarded to both the Memphis and New Jersey exchanges, with prizes of $250 each to the Washington and Salt Lake City branches. Fifty per cent of the money went to the branch manager and the remaining 50 per cent to the employees.

The $750 offered by Charles R. Rogers, producer of the Maynard westerns, was divided between the Washington exchange and the Pittsburgh branch, the Washington office winning $500 and the Pittsburgh branch $250. The same 50-50 split prevailed at the latter two offices, too.

Pathe Offering 8 Shorts on October 21

Eight featurettes are being offered on October 21 as the Pathe schedule of short subjects for the week.

A Mack Sennett comedy, "Smith's Catalina Rowboat Race," starts off the list of releases and is followed by "Snatched Into Space," chapter two of "Eagle of the Night"; "The Defensive Line," a Football Sense subject; "Big Game," one of the Aesop cartoons; Pathe Review No. 43; Topics of the Day No. 43; and issues Nos. 88 and 89 of the Pathe News.

In the Smith Family comedy are Ruth Hiatt, Raymond McKee and Mary Ann Jackson; they were directed by Phil Whitman. In addition to "Modernisms," the weekly Review offers "Climbers," "Useless Inventions" and "Sunbury."

Several New Firms Given Charters at Albany

Companies incorporating in the motion picture business in New York State at Albany, during the past week, included the following: Kinephone, Inc., capitalization not stated, Seymour B. Quel, Molly Zelenko and Elsie Blythe, New York City; Guignol Studios, Inc., $20,000, Anton Grubman, New York; Max Kaplan, Pt. First National Sound Stages Progressing Pouring of concrete has been finished on one of the big new "sound" stages at First National Studios, and the walls of the second are rising rapidly. The first unit is expected to be ready for use within a few weeks.

"Submarine" Will Be Road-showed

"SUBMARINE," the Columbia feature, now playing the Embassy in New York, will be road-showed by the company in Philadelphia and Baltimore. It will open at the Erlanger in Philadelphia and the Ford in Baltimore on October 8, both engagements being limited and at $2 top. Preparations are now under way for the openings, which will be followed by two performances per day for the remainder of the run.

M-G-M Newsreelman on Graf-Zeppelin

ONE of the members of the Atlantic hop of the German airship, the Graf Zeppelin, which is enroute on a trial flight over the Atlantic from Germany, is Robert Hartman, of the Hearst News Service, which produces the M-G-M News. He is the only cameraman aboard the huge air liner on its long flight, it is said.

The cameraman has been at Friedrichshafen for the last four weeks making advance shots of the dirigible and flying in it on its preliminary flights. A recent issue of the M-G-M News contained some of his pictures.

Griffith to Establish a Talkie Precedent

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 9.—The answer to the oft-made query, "what happens to the foreign actor in talking pictures?" comes with the decision today to make D. W. Griffith's "The Love Song" a hundred per cent dialogue.

The principals who will have to talk and thus make the first dialect dialogue are Jetta Goudal, whose accent has never been definitely established nor her nationality, though both have been exploited as French; Lupe Velez, who has a strong Mexican accent; Alberti Conti with an Hungarian accent, and Henri Armetti, who is an Italian. No doubles will be used, it is claimed.

Wells Root has been borrowed from Paramount to write the dialogue. It is also definitely established that D. W. Griffith himself will talk and act in the next production regardless of what the story is.

Death Overtakes Beban Following Injury

George Beban, noted stage and film star, passed away early this week, at the California Lutheran Hospital in Los Angeles. Death came as a result of injuries sustained in his fall from a horse at a ranch in California, on September 29th.

Mr. Beban was 55 years old. He was a native of San Francisco, and made his first stage appearance there at the age of eight. He was afterwards with Weber & Fields, and other leading theatrical enterprises. Before becoming a vaudeville star ten years ago, he went into pictures, and appeared in the screen version of "The Sign of the Rose," and many others. His last picture was "The Loves of Ricardo." He was famed for his Italian characterizations. Mr. Beban is survived by an eleven year old son, George, a brother, Lewis, and a sister, Mrs. Matt Smith, of New York. His wife, who was Edith Ethel MacBride, died last December.

Larry Semon Dies As Pneumonia Victim

Larry Semon, famed as a screen comedian, passed away on a ranch near Victorville, California, last Monday a victim of double pneumonia following a breakdown of several months ago. Deceased, formerly a newspaper cartoonist has been prominent as a film comedian for a number of years. He has played for such companies as Vitagraph, Chadwick, Educational and in the state right field. He scored heavily in "The Wizard of Oz" and did some of his best work in short comedies for Educational.

Semon amassed quite a fortune in the film industry, but lost most of it when he undertook the production end of the game. His wife, Dorothy Dwan, who played opposite him in many of his comedies, and his mother, Mrs. Nancy Smith, were with him at the time of his death.

West Coast Welcomes Clearance Action

Harold B. Franklin Sees Government Hearing as Move That Will Settle Vexatious Problem

"THE motion picture industry is distinctly satisfied and pleased that the United States Government has brought to the fore for definite settlement, a question that has vexed the industry for many years," Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres, said in a statement, commenting upon the government's recent information.

The government's information named many of the most prominent motion picture theatre owners, motion picture producers and distributors, including among others as defendant, West Coast Theatres, the largest chain of motion picture theatres west of the Mississippi River.

Mr. Franklin's statement follows in part:

"We are all quite pleased that the government is bringing this action on clearance, a question which has been vexing the entire motion picture industry ever since the day when there were no more than two theatres in any one city. The most constructive and responsible minds in our industry are agreed that without clearance, there can be no picture industry.

"Clearance, to be brief, means protection for the theatre which plays pictures first-run, against subsequent showings, and provides that the subsequent showings are not permitted to play the picture until a certain amount of time after the first showing. It goes on down the line and those which play the picture second run, have a protection against the third-run and so on.

"The earlier showings pay greatly increased rentals for that privilege, ranging from five times as much for each picture to one hundred times as much.

"The men who have made the picture industry what it is and who have kept it there, know that without this clearance there could be no motion picture industry on the scale which exists now, because it is through this clearance that theatres can become increasingly large and beautiful, and so enable producers to receive rentals large enough to make and continue to make big, fine, and necessarily expensive motion pictures.

"Clearance is also a protection for the public, because it is through the encouragement of the larger and finer theatres that the public can enjoy the great de-luxe picture houses which have not only set and maintained the high standards of motion picture exhibition, but are able to continually better them.

"We do not hesitate to say that without clearance or protection as between first-run and subsequent showings, the whole industry would have to be organized on a very much smaller scale.

"That the matter of protection and clearance is a custom and tradition of the show business ever since its inception, no one can deny. Its soundness has never been questioned nor its propriety, and therefore, we welcome this suit of the government because we feel that only through its agency can the question be settled once and for all."

New Type of "Heavy" Has Succeeded Villain of Former Years

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

A NEW generation and type of "heavy" has succeeded the blood-and-thunder villain of former years in motion pictures. Practically every well-known screen actor whose name was formerly associated with heavy types exclusively, is now playing comedy or sympathetic characters. The cause is simply the different forms of treatment used in motion picture stories at the present time as compared to the more theatrical methods employed by scenarists and directors some years ago. Characters have been naturalized and made more human.

Hence motion pictures have found that even a villain, of the deepest dye, can have likeable traits. The standard best-known heavies of five and ten years ago in motion pictures were Wallace Beery, Ernest Torrence, Tully Marshall, Warner Oland, Alan Hale, Victor McLaglen, Lew Cody, Donald Crisp and Lon Chaney.

Paramount discovered Beery had comedy possibilities in "Old Ironsides." Now he is being featured as a character man. George Bancroft, also a heavy through the major portion of his screen career, is also proving that character actors are worth more to the box-office. Lew Cody found his forte in light comedy. Lon Chaney still heads the list of attractions as a character artist. Others who have more recently come from the field of being menaces to the more appreciative ones of comedy or character are William Powell, Sam De Grasse, Stuart Holmes and Louis Wolheim.

Noah Beery seems the only one upholding the traditions of old-fashioned villainy. He also succumbs to the lure of character parts between reels comprised of snarls and sneers.

Fox Reported Acquiring Schine Circuit of Eighty Theatres

FOX has acquired or is about to acquire the controlling interest in Schine Theatrical Enterprises, according to information received this week by Motion Picture News. The Schine Circuit, one of the most important in the industry, comprises eighty houses located in New York State and Ohio.

It is pointed out that the reported Fox purchase is in line with the recent rapid expansion of that company in the theatre field. The Schine acquisition if true would mean that Fox is branching out into the smaller cities and towns, in addition to his theatre activities in key cities and the neighborhoods of greater New York.

Universal holds 25 per cent interest in the Schine Circuit. This interest, it is reported, will remain as it is. The actual operation of the circuit will, according to report, continue under the Schine auspices.

An interesting angle of the situation is that Fox, by the reported deal, will become a partner with Eastman, as Eastman is an associate of the Schines in the Regorson Corporation, controlling four Rochester theatres.

Theatres Aid In Relief

Swell Red Cross Fund Materially for West Indies-Florida Hurricane Sufferers

MOTION picture theatres in various parts of the United States continue to rally splendidly to the support of the West Indies-Florida flood sufferers. Benefit performances are still being held and a tidy sum will be realized when all reports are in.

At a joint meeting of W. Z. Spearman, President of the M.P.T.O. of Oklahoma, R. M. Clark, President of the Oklahoma City Film Board of Trade, and D. I. Johnston, Chairman of the Red Cross in Oklahoma City, it was decided the M.P.T.O. of Oklahoma would cooperate in raising funds for the sufferers, by setting aside Thursday, Friday and Saturday, October 11-12-13th as special days in which the theatres of the State are to do their part in this drive.

Instead of holding special shows, as has been done heretofore, efforts to raise funds were to be made by soliciting contributions by the way of collections at each evening performance on those dates.

Abe Finberg, manager of the Gayety Theatre, Louisville, gave fifty per cent of the Thursday matinee receipts to the Hurricane Relief Fund of the American Red Cross.

"Singing Fool" Scores

Jolson Film Makes Remarkable Showing at Warner Theatre in Hollywood at Pop. Prices

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 9.—"The Singing Fool" grossed slightly over $8,100 for its first day at the Warner Theatre in Hollywood. This figure was made on a price scale topped at 50 cents for matinees and 65 and 75 for the evening. The 75 cent is for loges. Five performances are given daily. The Warners handed Hollywood a great surprise and further topic for discussion with their policy of opening the feature on a continuous performance basis at popular prices. It had been expected, in view of the $11 opening in New York for the Al Jolson vehicle, that

He said all theatres on the Mutual Circuits were doing this.

The Riverside Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., managed by John Thomas, put on a splendid benefit show Sunday for the storm sufferers. Returns were large and all funds were turned over to the Red Cross.

Reports from the film exchanges in Jacksonville are that the only theatres which were closed or badly damaged by the recent storm that have reopened are the Glades at Moorhaven, the Lyric at Stuart, the Grand, a colored house, at West Palm Beach and the Park at Okeechobee.

Approximately $500 was added to the fund when the Publix Florida Theatre at Daytona Beach staged a benefit show last Saturday morning. The occasion was doubly interesting from the fact that the performance was the first all-Vitaphone show presented in Daytona Beach.

The Aladdin Theatre, Denver, Harry Huffman's beautiful uptown house, took the initial step in assisting the Red Cross in the Florida relief fund, swelling the Denver fund by many hundreds of dollars, in the showing of a midnight performance Saturday, Sept. 29th.

at least a top of $5 and a formal opening would be held.

The popular-priced opening is another bit of testimony to Warner cleverness. A formal opening undoubtedly would have grossed several thousand dollars more. The house seats 2,800. However, by the time expenses for such an opening were deducted, among them items of invitations, printed reserved tickets, extra exploitation paper, arc-lights and electricians to handle them, the net would have been considerably less than made under continuous show opening.

The psychological reaction of the public in comparing the charge to them of 50 and 65 for general admission as against the $2 run in New York also is considered of considerable value to the Warners in building up local good-will. This point comparing prices, has been stressed in an advance trailer shown in the theatre.

8 Shorts on Educational's Line-up for November

Eight short subjects in addition to the eight usual Kinograms releases are being offered by Educational as the November schedule of releases.

The subjects include: "The Skywayman," second release of the Russ Farrell series, starring Reed Howes, two reels; "The Quiet Worker," starring Jerry Drew, two reels; "Hold That Monkey," featuring Monty Collins, with Kit Guard in support, two reels; and Dorothy Devore new two-reel vehicle, as yet untitled.

"Hay Wire," with Gene Stone and Billy Dale, and "Bumping Along," co-starring Gene Stone and Marshall Ruth, both two-reelers; "A Patchwork of Pictures," a new Hodge-Podge reel, and the third issue of Our World Today.

Fejos Flies to N. Y. to Launch "Broadway"

Dr. Paul Fejos, Universal director whose latest picture is "Lonesome," arrived in New York this week from Los Angeles, flying half of the route. He will start production for Universal on "Broadway" and will photograph a number of scenes along the Broadway district.

Glenn Tryon, who is to play the foremost role in "Broadway," is now in New York and he will work in many of the scenes to be made in the east. Arthur and Ray Cosins will assist Fejos. Hal Mohr will be cameraman.

Frances Agnew in N. Y.; May Write in London

Frances Agnew, scenarist and author is now in New York City for a few days. Her year's contract with the Fox coast studio having expired, Miss Agnew came on to New York following the recent death of her mother in Hollywood.

While in town, Miss Agnew is seeing the new plays and looking into the talkies. She is considering an offer to go to London to write a script for a British company before returning to the West Coast.

While in the city she is stopping at the Hotel Manger.

that it will take fully one year to make the installations. K-A-O, it is said, is to be given preference over all other orders, but contracts signed for equipment by others will be filled as readily as possible and will not be held up for the completion of the K-A-O order. It is said, however, that RCA is quite independent in the matter of making theatre installations at present and will not guarantee installations for any set time. According to a story told by the head of a theatre chain operating close to 200 houses, he was ready to place his order for the entire chain providing he could have his first installation by the first of the year, but RCA is said to have refused to promise him even a single installation before 1929.

In the Future-Television

According to a story going the rounds, and which may be responsible to a certain extent for RCA going into the production field, the motion picture producers are having considerable difficulty in operating the sound equipment and cameras being provided for talking pictures and they are constantly calling upon RCA and Western Electric for expert assistance. RCA, it is said, will, with its large staff of expert technicians, give instructions to an additional large staff that may be shortly invading the picture industry and bring about a general improvement in the quality of pictures made.

With reference to the rapid advancement

Fairbanks Will Talk in "Iron Mask"

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS will talk in his next United Artist Picture, "The Iron Mask."

Not only will his voice be heard but Mr. Fairbanks will employ a novel method, that of the direct monologue or soliloquy, rather than of dialogue with other characters.

In a speech at the beginning of his picture Fairbanks will voice the spirit of the play.

Because of the broad sweep of the romantic drama in "The Iron Mask" it is explained that the narrow confines of simple dialogue between characters have been found too binding; in his combination of the forms of stage and silent drama, Fairbanks believes he has found a method that will not only retain all the pageantry and tempo of the film but that will augment it with a new force and dramatic intensity.

Talkies in Infancy "Crying Out Loud", Declares Ramsaye

WHILE motion pictures are referred to as the infant industry, they were able to talk the day they were born, according to Terry Ramsaye, Editor-in-Chief of Eastern production for Pathe, in an address before the convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers held at Lake Placid, New York, last week.

"The noise business is really the father of the picture racket," said Ramsaye. "It seems that in 1887 Edison attempted to devise, as he states in his notes, 'an instrument which should do for the eye what the phonograph does for the ear, and that by combination of the two, all motion and sound could be recorded and reproduced simultaneously.' Obviously the sound pictures, which are just upsetting all the technology and causing many realignments in the screen industry are but the modern version of that little machine of 1889, Edison's kinetograph, the peep-show for both eye and ear. The movies are still in their infancy, as the critics say, however, because only today do I hear them crying out loud."

made in the matter of television and the transmission of facsimile pictures it is pointed out that the facsimile or still pictures are now transmitted by radio to the lengths that radio extends, in a matter of 37 seconds. Slower progress is being made with the transmission of moving pictures, but even they are progressing at such a rate as to warrant the belief that homes will be equipped with these reproduction devices in the comparatively near future almost as extensively as they are today with telephones.

Vidor Sees New Developments Just Ahead in Talkies

KING VIDOR, M-G-M director, who is now in New York selecting colored actors for his new story of negro life, "Hallelujah," was a featured speaker in Collier's Radio Hour, over station WJZ, Sunday evening, Oct. 7. Introduced by John Kennedy, editor of Collier's, Mr. Vidor made the following remarks about sound pictures:

"First of all, sound pictures at present represent a novelty, and there is no definite basis by which we can judge their future possibilities. The few all-talking films which have been made so far have given very little indication of what the future holds. There are all kinds of new developments and improvements just around the corner.

"I do believe, however, that motion pictures have always had a special charm and entertainment value because of the fact that they have represented drama in terms of motion rather than dialogue.

"On the other hand, there are some types of stories which one may find it very difficult to present in terms of action and 'silent drama.' Mystery and courtroom stories, for examples, have qualities differing greatly from character studies, and in many cases it might be wise to produce stories of this type with the addition of partial or complete dialogue. It is a matter of good judgment, and of determining which stories are best adapted to each medium. I think that from now on there may always be a certain percentage—say 15 or 20 per cent—of films which utilize dialogue to enhance their dramatic appeal.

"Sound effects and synchronized scores are another matter. Here there is no interference whatever with the old method of relating a screen story in terms of action, suggestion, and pantomime, and in most cases, I am sure, the special score adds to the appeal of the picture."

Pomeroy Gives Colleen Moore Voice Test

Roy J. Pomeroy, director of sound at the Lasky Studio, has made a talkie test of Colleen Moore, First National star. During the past three months Pomeroy tested the voices of more film stars than any one else in the industry. In addition to the tests of practically every Paramount star and player, Pomeroy has recorded the voices of Mary Pickford, Harold Lloyd, Norma Shearer, Lupe Velez and Colleen Moore.

Lip Reader to Detect "Shocks", New Gag of Censor Board

VIRGINIA censors are in somewhat of a quandary regarding censorship of sound pictures. Not only are they showing great care with the silent drama and the talkie, but they have now engaged the services of a lip reader to detect any "shock" in the speech of the characters that is not audible.

In a bi-weekly bulletin sent out by the Virginia Division of M. P. Censorship assistance is asked of the exhibitors along regulatory lines. Playhouses using sound are requested to place the censor seal in the box with the print where the inspector may see it on demand, and under no circumstances to insert the seal in the film as this causes very material damage to sound.

Broadway Legitimate Stars Are Still Scarce in Hollywood

TALKING motion pictures have not yet cut much into the ranks of the Broadway legitimate stage despite predictions made at the close of last season that stars and leading players would leave the stage flat and flock to Hollywood. Predictions were made freely some months ago that this would be a lean season for the legit along Broadway and that there would be fewer houses open early in October than at any time in many years.

Leo Morrison, well known Broadway agent is just back from the studios on the coast, and while he still thinks that the talkies will eventually get a large number of the legitimate players, the exodus from Broadway has not yet started. He says the producers for the most part are endeavoring to get along with their picture favorites by instructing them in the art of the talkies.

There have been quite a few prominent players already signed for pictures and a number of stage directors and writers have taken up their abode in Hollywood, but not nearly as many as were anticipated.

In discussing the coast situation Mr. Morrison said:

"They are considerably at sea out there yet regarding these talkies and they hardly know yet just what developments will be regarding players. I think they will get along as best they can with as many as possible of their screen players for the present, but they are already being handicapped for a lack of talent in the talking pictures and it is only a question of a short time before they will be turning to Broadway for a lot of assistance in the way of talent.

"Up to the present there have been about ten directors imported from Broadway to Hollywood, among them being Robert Milton, Willard Mack, Charles Judell, Eugene Walters, Ben Holmes and Don Gallagher. The last three, with Mack are also writers. Among the authors are, Harlan Thompson, Eddie Burke, Tom Barry, Eddie Josephs, Arthur Caesar and Harry Delf. Delf went out primarily to write, but will also do some directing.

"Aside from vaudeville talent, which is being used almost exclusively in the short subjects, there have been few additions to the ranks of players from the legitimate stage and musical comedy. Ruth Chatterton, Sylvia Field, Cliff Dempsey, Clark and McCullough and Helen Twelvetree are among the best known.

"I look for some radical changes in the near future because they are very shy of ingenues who can talk, juveniles and some of the other types so necessary to the talkies. They seem only to have an abundance of heavies. Many of the people who have been prominent in pictures, of course, will continue in the talkies because they are fully competent to read lines.

"But they are feeling a scarcity of talent that is going to run production costs up unless it is rectified. I know of one company that was almost completely idle for three weeks while they took tests by the score trying to land a suitable juvenile. In the end they had to wire to New York for help.

"I doubt if there will be any trouble at all from Equity with regard to contracts. As far as I could hear the producers were most fair in their treatment of players they brought on from Broadway. The bigger stars, of course, were given contracts of from three months up with an option on renewal and all salaries start immediately upon arrival of the player on the coast. All of the players are guaranteed from six weeks work up and they have been paying them whether they worked or not. I know of a couple of players who were idle for a month and their salaries went on just the same."

Fraser Returns to Coast; Lloyd Talkie in Work

After a stay of three weeks in New York, William R. Fraser, general manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation, has returned to Hollywood where he will soon see the bespectacled comedian's new vehicle swing into work. While in the East, he conferred with eastern officials of the Lloyd company and Paramount distribution officials. Following the plan inaugurated last year, letters will be sent to exhibitors, newspapermen and the Paramount distribution forces asking for title suggestions for the picture which will be released early next year.

Lloyd's new vehicle will be a talking production and will have a Chinatown background. A few initial scenes have already been filmed. The comedian is now utilizing in the making of his talking picture the years of experience he had on the stage. A new leading lady is being sought at the present time and the choice is expected to be made within a few days. At the time the new Lloyd production is released, it is estimated by the Electrical Research Products Company that approximately 800 theatres will be equipped for the reproduction of sound.

"Half an Hour" Will Be All-Dialogue Picture

"Half an Hour," the James M. Barrie play, will soon enter production as an all-dialogue picture at the Paramount West Coast studios. The cast includes a noted list of stage and screen players, among whom are the following: Ruth Chatterton, H. R. Warner, Robert Edeson, Ethel Wales, Wilfrid Noy and Joyce Marie Coad. The feature will be directed by William C. De Mille, who is busy now preparing the continuity.

Minneapolis Hears First RCA Photophone

Exhibitors of the Northwest last week were given their first taste of "RCA Photophone" when a private preview was staged by Manager Art Huot of the local FBO exchange. The run was made at the Egyptian Theatre, Minneapolis, to a very limited audience, as a test first showing. Reports were quite favorable.

EVERYBODY NECESSARY FOR THE TALKING PICTURE

Dialogue for Film, But Not For Chaplin

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S "City Lights" will be fully synchronized and there will be sequences in dialogue. Mr. Chaplin will not permit his tramp character to talk; he will depend wholly upon pantomime. "City Lights" goes into production within a week. Mr. Chaplin took six months to write his story, and dialogue employed in the talking sequences will be written by him, also. Because of the careful preparation of the story it is not anticipated that production will occupy as many weeks as have former Chaplin films. Chaplin hopes to finish camera work in eight weeks.

"City Lights" is an original story of the boulevards and of night life, high and low. It will be released through United Artists, about the first of the year.

New Vitaphone Features Go Before Cameras

Warner Bros. have a number of new Vitaphone pictures in production at their studio in Hollywood at this time. A trio of these were put before the cameras this week, chief among them being the first Vitaphone operetta, "The Desert Song," which Roy Del Ruth is directing with Carlotta King and John Boles in the leads. Another is "Kid Gloves" featuring Conrad Nagel and Lois Wilson, directed by Ray Enright. The third is "Frozen River" of which Rin-Tin-Tin is the star.

Cameras are also focussed on Dolores Costello in "Madonna of Avenue A," Audrey Ferris in "The Little Wildcat," Monte Blue in "The Greyhound Limited" and Texas Guinan in "Queen of the Night Clubs."

"The Scoop" As Prologue for "Gang War"

While the Hollywood Studios of F B O Pictures Corporation are making talking sequences for "Gang War," work on "The Scoop," a talking prologue for this production, is rapidly nearing completion at the Sound Studios, Inc., in New York.

"The Scoop" from the pen of Edgar Allan Woolf, is being directed by David Hartford and Mr. Woolf. It can be played as a prologue to "Gang War," or booked independently as a talking short subject.

Nazimova Signed by Ed Small for Talkie

Nazimova, stage and screen actress, has been engaged by Ed Small to appear in a talking picture that will be based on Edgar Allan Woolf's stage play, "India." Production is to start just as soon as the Russian star has completed her engagement with Eve LeGallienne's Civic Repertory Theatre.

Lloyd to Direct "Weary River," Barthelmess' Next

Richard Barthelmess will be directed by Frank Lloyd in his next First National feature, "Weary River," by Courtney Ryley Cooper. The director will start his new assignment as soon as he has finished "Adoration."

Asher, Small, Rogers Join With Gotham in Bristolphone Deal

A NEW corporation has been organized to distribute and service installations of the Bristolphone disc synchronizing device and to produce features and short subjects synchronized with Bristolphone: Asher, Small and Rogers have joined forces with Sam Sax and Budd Rogers, of Gotham Photoplays Corp., in the launching of the new organization. They are forming the Gotham Bristolphone Photoplays Corporation, which will distribute pictures under two brands, a series of Asher, Small and Rogers productions and a series of Gotham productions.

This corporation will be a substantial one in the independent field. Asher, Small and Rogers have in the past been responsible for such pictures as "McFadden's Flats," "Cohens and Kellys," "Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath," "Shepherd of the Hills," "Classified," and others.

Gotham, under the guidance of Budd Rogers and Sam Sax have been consistently forging to the front for several years and only recently acquired rights to Bristolphone. "Times Square," which has just been completed with dialogue and sound effects, will be the initial offering in the firm's new program, with release set for November 1. Alice Day and Arthur Lubin are starred. Herman Heller furnished the synchronized score under production supervision of Harold Shumate.

The coming together of these producers means an expansion program commensurate with the wider scope that the production and distribution of sound and dialogue pictures brings to the combination.

Sound stages of the Gotham company are nearing completion on the coast and at Waterbury, Conn. There will be two such stages at each place and both feature length pictures and short subjects will be turned out with all rapidity and care in time for release dates specified on the program.

Christies Extend Program of Paramount Releases

UPON his return to the coast from New York, Charles H. Christie announced the closing of contracts with Paramount whereby the latter will release thirty-two additional short talking pictures to be made by the Christie Company. These are aside from the regular program of two-reel comedies already announced as the current schedule of the 1928-29 releases.

The new groups are not to be made a part of the present season of general releases but will be pre-released during the current playing season to those theatres that have installed Western Electric sound equipment. In addition to being made as talkies, they will also be made in silent form.

Prominent in the new pictures will be a series of one-act plays, the rights to which are being acquired from well known authors, after an extensive search of the market. It is said they will be a distinct departure from the type of short features that have previously been produced by Christies and others who have specialized in two-reel comedies.

Another feature of the coming talkie shorts to be done by the Christies will be from the Octavus Roy Cohen colored stories enacted by Negro characters. The Cohen stories were recently acquired by Christies and some of them are now being put into talking picture form.

While production is going forward on the new program of Christie all-talking pictures, there will be no let down in the filming of the regular series of current comedies, including the "Confessions of a Chorus Girl," the Billy Dooley, Bobby Vernon and Sandy McDuff Comedies, approximately half of which have been produced.

Victor Will Record Synchronized Productions for Hal Roach

VICTOR Talking Machine Company will assume full charge and responsibility for the creation of appropriate musical scores and the recording of all synchronized productions of the Hal Roach Studios, under an arrangement just completed.

Announcement to this effect was made by W. E. Shumaker, President of the Victor Company. In commenting on the subject, Mr. Shumaker said: "The art and technique of Victor's sound recording laboratories will be added to the skill and creative ability displayed in the productions of the Hal Roach Studios as a result of a contract just executed. It is a pleasure to announce this further step in the progress being made to bring the technique and experience of our organization, resulting from years of activity in the business of recording and reproducing sound to the side of the art of recording and reproducing action by photography."

Anticipating the completion of negotiations, several members of the Roach organization are already in Camden conferring with the Victor staff and Victor engineers are en route to study requirements on the Coast.

:: "The Check-Up" ::

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who consider it "Fair"; the third, the number who consider it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who consider it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Sound Picture Reviews

By CHESTER J. SMITH

The Ol' Gray Hoss

THIS Our Gang comedy, done with sound effects, is a considerable improvement over the silent version despite the fact that the sound evidently was injected into the picture hurriedly and not to the best advantage. There is nothing in the way of dialogue, but the cheers of the gang, the beating of the old gray horse's hoofs and other incidental effects materially enliven the picture. It seems evident from this one that the Our Gang comedies of the future will be even more popular with sound than they were in the silent version.

Van and Schenck

These popular entertainers of the vaudeville stage and the night clubs give an exceptionally entertaining performance in a number of selections on Movietone. They are real artists in the rendition of numbers and they are among the few that have been seen that are just about as effective in sound pictures as they are in person. Their song numbers are well gagged with patter and apparently go over just as well on the screen as on the stage. Their act at the Capitol was better received than any that has been seen on the screen.

Sharp Tools

This is a typical Willard Mack creation, a crook and detective story of highly melodramatic type in which Ethel Grey Terry is the star on Vitaphone. She is the female detective, who, with her brother, wins the way into the crook gang's confidence and becomes a member of the gang. When it comes to a division of the loot in the biggest job they turn, she and her brother cover them and turn them over to headquarters, thus avenging the murder of their father at the hands of the leader of the gang. In the supporting roles to Miss Terry are William Davidson, Edwin Sturgis and Carl Gerard. The picture was directed by Bryan Foy and is of the type that seems to be popular in the talking shorts.

Banjomaniac

Eddie Peabody gives a jazzy Vitaphone performance on his banjo, as well as on several other stringed instruments. He is assisted by Jimmy Maisel and their numbers are well chosen. In addition to being a star as a musician, Peabody has plenty of personality and his song numbers go over as well as those on the banjo. The act is one that undoubtedly will be popular.

"Stepping High" Under Way in East Soon

With the arrival of Bert Glennon, film director, from Hollywood, preparations for the filming of F B O's first all-talking motion picture "Stepping High" are proceeding rapidly. Mr. Glennon and Gene Markey, author of the production, are working on the scenario and the dialogue of the play, and it is expected that shooting will start at the Sound Studios, Inc., within the next week.

Robert Kane, president of Sound Studios, Inc., is assembling a cast of legitimate players, and screen and talking tests are being made daily. The cast will be announced in a few days.

Newman Reopens With Sound Policy a Big Draw

The re-opening of the Newman Theatre, second largest downtown first run house in Kansas City, was a novelty in one respect. Prior to its closing for re-decoration and wiring for sound pictures, the Newman's attendance had gradually been dying away until the theatre, which used to be Kansas City's finest, resembled only the ghost of the former downtown center it had been under the management of Frank Newman. When Loew's Midland—Kansas City's largest house—opened about one year ago and the Newman became under Loew management, Kansas City's theatre patrons flocked to the Midland and passed by the Newman, which is two blocks from the Midland.

Recently the Newman reverted to Publix ownership and was closed for improvements. Then came the widely advertised re-opening. For the first time in one year the Newman had packed houses for afternoon and night shows. Again the Newman looks like the Newman of old, although the physical changes made in the house are small. Several acts of Vitaphone vaudeville and first run sound pictures will be the new policy.

Gloria Swanson Will Sing in "Queen Kelly"

Gloria Swanson will sing a song in "Queen Kelly," forthcoming United Artists production which Erich von Stroheim will direct, and which will have dialogue sequences. Miss Swanson revealed this week that she had had her first voice test last February when "Sadie Thompson" was playing on Broadway. The actress departed from New York for the coast on Friday, October 12, in order to begin work on October 22. The RCA Photophone method is to be employed.

After "Queen Kelly," Miss Swanson will make "Clothes," by Lucy Stone Terrill, as her second talking picture.

Warners "Home Towners" Next for N. Y.

Warner Bros. will offer their third 100 per cent all-talking picture to the public when George M. Cohan's "The Home Towners" opens at the Warner Bros. Theatre on Broadway, Tuesday evening, October 23rd. "The Home Towners" constitutes the first comedy presented by Warner Bros. as an all-talking picture.

Richard Bennett and Doris Kenyon head its cast with other roles filled by Robert McWade, Gladys Brockwell, Robert Edeson, John Miljan, Stanley Taylor, James Mack, Vera Lewis and Patricia Caron.

Sound Fade-Out Latest Griffith Effect

D. W. Griffith, who gave to silent films the close-up and fade-out, now contributes to sound pictures the sound dissolve and the sound fade-out. These effects will be presented in "The Love Song," in which William Boyd, Jetta Goudal and Lupe Velez appear.

In the sound fade-out the voice rises to its normal pitch and then fades out as the scene dims and dissolves into another. Lupe Velez, it is announced, will sing seven times during the length of the picture.

Will Protest Skouras Protection Claims at Toronto Meeting

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois through their president, Fred Wehrenberg of St. Louis, during the past week sent letters of protest to all of the motion picture exchanges in St. Louis against the protection claims presented by the St. Louis Amusement Company, controlled by Skouras Brothers and Harry Koplar.

The St. Louis Amusement Company owns about 27 neighborhood and suburban theatres in St. Louis and vicinity and has demanded from 14 to 35 days protection against rival theatres in their territory. The company has the largest string of theatres in St. Louis.

High Cost of Music for Short Subjects

May Use Phonograph for Synchronizing, Says One Producer

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 8.—Unless a definite adjustment is made for fees paid musicians employed to synchronize pictures, one short subject producer intends to secure a complete stock of phonograph records and use a Panatrope with which to score his pictures. The producer, who requested that his name be kept confidential, states that the amounts added to the negative cost of short subjects is entirely too much in ratio to the rentals which can be charged for such films.

While the present system of charging by reels may seem fair to those making the charge, he claims that in practice it reacts against the maker of short subjects. A feature length film producer can easily afford to pay more for one reel than a short subject maker. He points out that the average five to seven reel feature made by any of the major companies cost from $150,000 anywhere up to $500,000. In the cases of specials, the total runs between $500,000 to over $1,000,000. This would make one reel of a five reel come to a low average of $25,000 per reel. Only in very rare cases do two reel comedies run to a total of $50,000. The average two reeler of the better grade generally totals from $15,000 to $30,000 at most. In other words, one reel of a short subject is generally one-half the cost of one reel for a feature. Hence his argument that the ratio of assessment is unfair.

Musicians fees are added to this. They must be employed at $10 an hour for a minimum of three hours, or $30 per man.

Gilbert Will Not Renew Contract with M-G-M

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

JOHN GILBERT will not renew with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on the expiration of his contract this coming Spring, he announced when he returned to Hollywood last week. Beyond this statement, Gilbert would give no further information regarding his future plans. Two companies are rumored favored in negotiations with the star, one being First National and the other United Artists. Reports are that Joseph P. Kennedy opened negotiations with Gilbert on his visit here when Kennedy was in charge of First National.

There also are allegations that some producers have been compelled to hire a minimum of 27 men to comprise a synchronizing orchestra. This means $310 for musicians only which must be added to the negative cost.

This particular producer's solution is the use of the amplified phonograph. And, unless readjustments are made, he intends to do so.

Blowing Up Ships and Costs

Three hundred cases of dynamite were used by Herbert Brenon to blow up a 250 foot schooner for scenes in "The Rescue," a Samuel Goldwyn production starring Ronald Colman. The scene will be less than 200 feet of film.

Adding a Voice

The silent version of "The Carnation Kid" starring Douglas MacLean has been completed by Christie. Dialog sequences are now being made on the Christie sound stages in the Metropolitan Studios. E. Mason Hopper is directing both sound and synchronized versions.

Paramount's Clip Sheet

Arch Reeve, director of publicity for Paramount's West Coast studios, has discarded the weekly mimeograph letter in favor of a printed clipsheet which is broadcast to all editors instead. Each story is in regular newspaper style, with a variety of headlines being used.

Greetings From Harry

Harry Wilson made formal announcement of his new affiliation as publicity director for United Artists last week. Harry invited his "pals," who numbered into ciphers, to a gathering at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Laemmle Novelties Completed

The last one reeler in the series of "Laemmle Novelties" was completed at Universal last week under the title of "Fantasie." There are 13 in the series, all the ideas of Sam B. Jacobson, who also supervised them.

Thomson Returning

Fred Thomson has changed his mind in regard to retiring from motion pictures and is now seeking a new releasing medium.

Sue Carol Back

Sue Carol returned to Hollywood this week following several months abroad as the feminine lead in "Chasing Through Europe."

Educational Heads Return

E. H. Allen, general manager for Educational Studios, and Jack White, comedy producer for the same firm, are back in Hollywood. They have been East for the past month.

New One For Bow

F. Hugh Herbert and Sam Mintz are collaborating on an original story for Clara Bow. Both writers are under contract to Paramount.

"The Dummy" As Talkie

"The Dummy" by Harriett Ford and Harvey O'Higgins, which played the legitimate field in 1915, will be produced as a 100 per cent talking picture by Paramount. Wells Root is doing the adaptation and Robert Milton will make it as his first directorial effort.

Blaine With Pathe

Sally Blaine has been placed under a long term optional contract by Pathe. The intention is to build her up for featured parts.

Denny in Seattle

Reginald Denny and his entire company are in Seattle, Washington, where exterior scenes for "Clear the Deck," are being filmed under direction of Joseph Henabery.

Lines or Lions All the Same to Him

AFTER several days of harangue, a producer and well known screen comedienne closed a contract which called for her services in an all-talking picture. Both heaved sighs of relief, for the bargaining had been long and bitter.

"Well now," she said, "what about the lines?"

"Don't worry," he replied, "they'll be okay and everything will be fine."

"Yes, but you must realize that this is a new venture for me and I'm rather worried about the lines. The sooner we know about them the better."

"Please don't worry. If necessary we'll use a double for you with the lions!"

Equity Sends Talkie Ballot to Members

Action Is Preliminary to Body's New Drive for Motion Picture Players

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 8.—A preliminary action to a new drive for motion picture members by the Actors' Equity Association, a ballot was mailed to all Equity members in Hollywood regarding talking pictures. This ballot asked members to vote on three questions, which in order were:

- "1. Are you in favor of Equity contracts for Equity members in speaking parts in talking pictures? Yes ... No ...
- "2. Are you in favor of the Council passing a resolution prohibiting members from acting in speaking parts in talking pictures unless ALL SPEAKING PARTS are filled by Equity members? Yes ... No ...
- "3. Are you in favor of an Equity contract covering speaking parts in talking pictures? Yes ... No ..."

Equity is now in a better position to secure a strong foothold on the motion picture acting branch than ever before. This is with the number of legitimate actors, already members of Equity, who are being signed for motion pictures containing talk sequences.

No action is contemplated regarding a contract for talking pictures by Equity until full returns of the ballot are in. Should a greater majority answer "yes" to the three questions contained in the ballot, the Equity council in New York will draft a special contract covering the three queries and submit it to members for approval. With this secured, it will be submitted to motion picture producers and suggestions from them requested.

Equity's best spot to secure members in the past was during the period motion picture producers asked all actors to take a cut in salary. This opportunity was lost and Equity feels that they will not let this new one slip through their fingers. They point to conditions in the legitimate field as the answer to some film producers' objections that Equity would not be a beneficial aid in the making of pictures. Particularly at the present, claim members, would the organization be invaluable to producers engaged in making talking pictures. Equity officials state that they have no desire to enforce the so-called "closed shop" in motion pictures. If producers have stars who are not members of Equity, they do not require that this star be compelled to join. What they do ask, however, is that the supporting members be allied with Equity. In this way they promise film producers the same protection against any contractual breaches on the part of actors or displays of temperament affecting production, which they have given producers in the legitimate field.

for Pathe, has joined the Fox scenario staff.

Featured

Russell Simpson has been assigned a featured role in "Noisy Neighbors," which Chuck Reisner will direct for Pathe.

Words of Praise

Clara Beranger's screen adaptation of "Craig's Wife," is "flawless," according to a telegram received by William Siström, of Pathe, from Rosalie Stewart who produced George Kelley's play on the New York stage.

Frank Lloyd

Frank Lloyd is to direct Richard Barthelmess' next First National starring vehicle, "Weary River," which is to be a talking picture.

Engages the Hattons

Ed Cline has engaged Frederick and Fanny Hatton, authors of many successful stage successes, to title "Applesauce," his latest picture for Tiffany-Stahl in which Sally O'Neill and Roland Drew are to be co-featured. It is likely that before Cline's piece reaches the preview houses the title will be changed to "Broadway Fever."

From Silent to Sound

"The Barker" and "The Divine Woman," both of which were completed by First National, go into production again next week for dialog recording. Originally they were intended as purely silent productions with the possible addition of sound effect. Milton Sills, Dorothy Mackaill and Betty Compson will do most of the talking sequences in "The Barker." Corinne Griffith, H. B. Warner and Victor Varconi will be heard in "The Divine Woman."

Some More of "It"

Billie Dove will be "IT-ified" in her next starring vehicle, since Elinor Glyn is responsible for its authorship. "The Man and the Moment" is the title of the story which is to be a George Fitzmaurice production for First National.

Richman Vehicle Shifted

Irving Berlin's story has been temporarily tabled by United Artists for Harry Richman's entry into feature talking pictures.

Out in Idaho

Marie Prevost, who has been making interior scenes for "The Exodus of the New World," at Salt Lake City, has left with Ben Lyon, Ray Johnston, director, and the rest of the cast for location shots on Snake River, near Twin Falls, Idaho.

Busy on "Calamity"

Fred Newmeyer, who recently signed to direct "Calamity," as a super-feature sound picture for Fox, will devote the next three weeks to supervising the preparation of the story which is being prepared by a staff of writers under Luther Reed's guidance.

Joins "Collegians"

The latest addition to Universal's list of contract players is pretty Peggy Howard, who will make her first appearance in "The Collegians."

Will Adapt Negro Picture

Richard Schayer, scenarist, who has worked on no less than ten productions in the past year, has been assigned to adapt King Vidor's forthcoming picture of negro life, as yet untitled, for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Good News

When John Farrow got back from Taos, New Mexico, where with Victor Fleming, who will direct the yarn, he had been picking locations for "The Wolf Song," he learned that Paramount had bought the screen rights to his first novel, "Haunting Melody," which is a story of modern Spain, and will be done in sound.

Erle C. Kenton Assigned

Erle C. Kenton has been assigned to megaphone Columbia's "Nothing to Wear," with Jacqueline Logan, Theodor Von Eltz, Bryant Washburn and Jane Winton.

F B O's Program Complete by Xmas

William Le Baron, vice-president of F B O Pictures Corporation in charge of production, announces that the F B O 1928-29 program will be 100 per cent completed by Christmas. Preparations are now underway for the launching of nine films in the next two months.

First Air Derby

The distinction of staging the first motion picture air derby goes to Harry J. Brown, with Charles R. Rogers in the "Russ Farrell Aviation Series," starring Reed Howes, and released by Educational.

Rupert Julian

Rupert Julian has been assigned to direct Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's first mystery thriller with sound effects.

"Nize Baby" All Off

Further developments in the postponement of "Nize Baby" at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have resulted in the Milt Gross story being called off indefinitely.

John Loder Assigned

Captain John Loder, the romantic young British actor discovered by Jesse L. Lasky during his recent European trip, has been assigned to his first role under his Paramount contract. Loder will appear in "Half an Hour," the James M. Barrie play, which will enter production in a few days as an all talking picture under the direction of William C. deMille.

CLEARING HOUSE FOR

BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

Sound Pictures and the Small Town

As the number of installations of sound plans increases, so does the necessity of educating the average small town theatre in the proper methods of selling this type of entertainment to their patrons. The very evident need for such education has been amply demonstrated by the many small town theatres where talking plants have grown "stale" by reason of improper advertising and selling to their public. This was also caused by lack of synchronized pictures but chiefly because of the former condition.

Perhaps the best known and tried method of selling a sound plant is via the sound plant itself. This I found in many successful theatres to be the case. Practically every recent installation as well as old ones, now have the microphone attachment in the manager's office and this sensibly used, places a mighty good wedge in the hands of the theatre exhibitor. Announcements of coming attractions, or of any interesting topic will receive undivided attention from the audience. Putting effects into pictures or short subjects not synchronized can also be accomplished through this medium, and in conjunction with the non-synchronized attachment will make any ordinary picture a sound picture.

If You're Using Sound Sell it

I have had my eye on about a dozen sound theatres during the past two months and have been watching them carefully from every possible angle so as to analyze the different possibilities that might benefit those theatres just getting ready to start their own or who are trying to revive interest in sound pictures. One of the things that I noted was that the successful sound house is the one where sound is the chief item that they are selling on their program. To these successful theatres, everything else comes after sound, and no one can deny that sound is the item that is packing these theatres to the door night after night and shattering records as time goes on. On the other hand, if you look into the theatres where sound plants are not packing them in, you will almost always find that the sound pictures are being used as fillers or are not being played up over everything else. I can recall, from my recent mid-western trip for the NEWS, theatres in Ohio and Indiana where exhibitors told me that sound meant nothing to their patrons any more. They were wrong, absolutely wrong, as any live showman can

NOTICE

THE Managers' Round Table Club has selected certain members from different localities throughout the country for the purpose of getting their views and opinions regarding SOUND pictures. YOU may be one of the members we wrote to.

Everyone is awaiting with interest the letters and articles that these exhibitors will send in and we are certain that they will contain valuable "dope" on sound pictures and their effect on the average theatre.

WATCH FOR THEM. C.E.L.

tell them. What they should have said was that sound does not mean anything to THEM, not their patrons. They have themselves grown dormant on their expensive plants and did not know how to wake it up again.

Whether your theatre has just had sound installed, whether it is going to have an early installation or whether you have had it for any length of time does not matter. This article, based upon actual observation and fact, can be applied to all of you.

"Sound" Methods of Exploitation

Build up your public's interest by, first: the use of your sound plant in the theatre, if it is already in. Second: By placing a loud speaker over your entrance and marquee and broadcasting through your microphone, third; by publication of a well-laid-out booklet or herald dealing with the subject of sound without letting them into any secrets or telling them any more than is enough to attract their attention and interest. Fourth: through proper outdoor advertising whereby "Sound" is the chief item on the posters. After these methods have been utilized, the rest is up to you to keep their interest keyed up after they get into your theatre by presenting your sound shows in a good showmanlike manner and making use of every trick that the sound plant places at your disposal. Don't lay down on the job. You have an expensive outfit; you have, no doubt, bought expensive pictures to run with it, so economy in selling it to the public is penny wise pound foolish tactics.

Underbaked or Overbaked

I picked up the following some time ago but cannot recall who wrote it: "It is just as harmful to take the loaf of bread out of the oven half baked as it is to let it stay in too long and be overdone."

So before you can up and ask me what bread has to do with theatres I'll hustle to tell you why I've started this little story with that quotation.

How many times have you started a great exploitation and advertising campaign and then let up on it too soon, or curtailed the entire campaign before it was completed? Then again, how often have you started on advertising some great big picture and kept at it until you had actually overdone it? One is just as bad as the other if viewed from the angle of good showmanship.

In planning an advertising campaign of any kind, every possible point should be carefully watched and covered but with always the thought in mind that you must be careful to go through with it and at the same time not to plug it until it becomes tiresome. Take any average town or city which boasts of one or two good newspapers and you will most generally find that a short (week to ten days) but snappy, well-thought out plan will stir up all the interest that you require to put over a picture. Trying to work up such interest by a series of teaser ads two or three weeks ahead, then the actual campaign following is apt to dull the interest that you have created in what you are selling.

Value of the Mailing List

Quite a few months ago we stressed the value and importance of the mailing list especially in the smaller town and city. We are tempted to bring this subject up again because we really believe it is of great importance. During the past few months I have had the opportunity of observing many theatres and one of the things that I particularly noticed is that the average successful theatre has a large and well-developed mailing list. I never miss the chance to draw the manager into a discussion on this subject because I always want to feel that the suggestion incorporated in these pages actually contain some value and are based upon methods successfully used in other theatres.

Find room for a small writing desk in your lobby, your promenade, your ladies room (not the men's room because the boys will use it for a poker or in fact anywhere that is convenient and will attract attention. Place request cards, pencils or ink and if possible station an usher close by. Push this idea for all it's worth and build up a mailing list that will carry with it the conviction that when you send out an announcement, you have reached the greatest portion of your patrons or theatre-going public. Keep plugging it on your programs, because I'll assume that you do have a weekly program, most every "real" theatre has. Use a trailer on the screen. Just keep calling attention to it all the time and every letter received from a patron, regardless of the subject written about, should mean another address for the list.

But "kill" the dead wood and keep it alive with new names.

Children Matinees as Business Builders

We are now in that time of the year when Saturday matinee business can be increased by several hundred dollars in addition to sending home about a thousand youngsters to rave to mama and papa about the great show that he had seen.

There are many ways of building up this idea and if properly handled you can consistently keep it coming all season. One way that this was done was called to my attention recently by Charlie Maxfield, manager of the Colonial Theatre in Hartford, Conn. He found, after he came into the theatre, that the average number of kids they played to on a Saturday afternoon was about two hundred. Now "Max" knew from experience in Norwich (just as I also knew) that this number was quite insufficient for so large a house as the Colonial, so he advertised a FREE matinee one Saturday and that's what was meant. The kids believed him as well with the result that his eighteen hundred seats were taxed to their utmost to take care of the youngsters. He gave them a corking show with every element of entertainment that kids crave and then with a few well-chosen words from the stage he told them that the Colonial would continue to give such shows every Saturday afternoon. He talked about the great serial that he had started, and then he waited a week to see if his "stunt" bore fruit. Well, the only difference between the two Saturdays was the fact that on the second day they all paid. And from word just received from "Max" they are still packing the kids in and this is now the fifth week.

Where these youngsters spent their previous Saturday afternoon is a puzzle, but he started them coming, gave them what they wanted and they still come. This one afternoon's business has been increased almost two hundred dollars over the previous business. And just picture those eighteen hundred kids going home as your own advertising agents. It's a great stunt and a fine idea. Get wise to yourself boys. It's getting on in the season. Make hay, Make hay.

Music and the Love Theme

Those "little" angels on showmanship that come to our attention once in a while are always the most appealing because so very often it's the little things that count. (Sounds like a song). But facts are facts and here's a little one that can help make your house just a little different from the ordinary.

The great majority of pictures have love themes selected by the music cue sheet, or specially written for that particular picture. These live themes, or specialty songs are most always "catchy" in tune and wherever such is the case we offer the following suggestion: From the very first time you flash the trailer on the picture have your orchestra, organ or record (if you only use sound) play that number. Keep at it and when you start the run of the picture itself, don't neglect to have it played at screening and properly played up wherever it is called for on the cue sheet. I know of theatres where a trailer always announces the name of the theme song, both before and after the feature showing and I consider it darned good business. If your music counts for anything at all then you must recall many patrons asking the name of some number that your orchestra played. Ask your local music store to always feature the sheet music and records of the current theme number just as they are now doing with Al Jolson's "Sonny Boy" number from "The Singing Fool," "Ramona" was also a song tie-up that swept the country, but these instances are allowed to go by without any effort to capitalize on the tie-up and plugging of the songs features. If your house orchestra can't make these numbers stand out then we suggest you drop them and put in a phonograph.

On Small Town Vaudeville

I have received several letters touching on the subject of vaudeville. Having played vaudeville in almost every theatre with which I was identified gives me the right to say that I believe I understand what small town vaudeville should be as applied to the average town. We like to stick to averages since there are exceptions to every rule. But on the whole you will find that we select examples that well fit most theatres.

Our idea of a good vaudeville bill in most theatres outside of the big cities would be a four or five act show containing the conventional assortment of acts and closing with the so-called, flash. No doubt every manager reviews his vaudeville show at the first matinee and can judge it on its merits, but the smaller the town the more careful a man must be as to what is said upon his stage. I have found times when the slightest reference to "smut," or religion or in fact any subject, would bring down an avalanche of criticism.

Censorship Outside the Big City

Back in Middletown last season there was a minister from a nearby town who made it a point to witness the opening vaudeville bill every Thursday afternoon and as soon as he reached home he would call me on the phone and tell what part of each act he objected to. Then I had another worthy minister who wrote a review of the show each week and sent it to me by messenger immediately after the first matinee. He generally finished up by taking a crack at me for permitting such and such an act to show so much flesh, or for saying something that really no one else could find fault with. Only once in the entire season do I recall that he wrote to tell me that my show was perfect and fit for every mother, father and family. And I was so stunned that I lost a full day's time in reproducing it in the local papers.

It's not such a hard problem, just exercise some good common sense and if something don't sound right you can always talk it over with the artist on the bill and they are sure to co-operate with you. At any rate, they had better. But aside from all that keep your shows clean and don't give anyone the chance to say that you don't censor objectionable material on your vaudeville bill.

Application Blanks Must Be Filled Out Before Membership Cards Are Issued Serial Club Members

ILLUSTRATED above are the application blank and membership ticket which play an important part in a profitable Saturday matinee business builder used by Manager Vogel Gettier, of the Capitol theatre, in Grand Island. Gettier has made his showings of the serial "Tarzan the Mighty," a popular attraction with the youngsters of his city by means of a club idea in which the serial and the Capitol's organist, "Walt" Heald, are the features.

The application blank must be filled out before a membership card is issued and the inducement to obtain a card is the fact that the holder thereof is admitted at half price at the matinee presentation of the first episode of the serial. Several angles of exploitation are thus introduced. The theatre obtains a live mailing list and has in its files such information as the birthday date of a considerable number of children in the town—information which many theatres employ to good effect by sending birthday greetings to its patrons.

"Sound" Letters to Clergy and Libraries Exploit "King"

CAMPAIGNS for "The King of Kings" at the regular motion picture theatres are following the lead of the exploitation which featured its Two-day showings on Broadway and other cities in at least two particulars. These are the angles opened up for library cooperation through a novelization of the film and the means taken to bring the picture to the notice of clergymen and church societies.

An especially vigorous campaign publicizing "The King of Kings" in its New Jersey premiere at the Stanley theatre in Jersey City was conducted by Harold E. Murphy, exploiter for Stanley-Fabian.

Murphy started his advance in the newspapers with the usual announcements of coming attractions, increasing his space gradually to three columns, topping and ending his ads with "The King of Kings" title and the heavy display line "with sound accompaniment."

For newspaper "readers" he used special sound stories by the Pathe Publicity and Advertising Department and found that the Jersey City and other North Jersey newspapers consider this type of story worthy of a generous amount of space.

To bring the attraction to the attention of the clergy of Hudson County, Murphy issued invitations to 450 other clergy and various religious organizations to attend a special morning showing of the picture. After this, a follow-up letter was sent to the clergy thanking them for their interest.

Unusual cooperation was extended by the editor of the church page of the Hudson Dispatch with a special announcement of the coming of "The King of Kings" carried in the large announcement box topping the page.

The Women's Clubs of Hudson County evidenced interest in the educational aspects of the picture and secured information from the Stanley which was presented by a speaker before the joint meeting of the organizations held at the Y.M.C.A. in Jersey City.

The tie-up possibilities on the novelization of "The King of Kings," published by Grosset and Dunlap, was utilized to the utmost by the Stanley exploiter. Effective window and book department displays were secured in Jersey City, Hoboken and Union City.

A special book mark was prepared for a tie-up with the libraries, 10,000 being distributed in Jersey City—5,000 in Union City and 5,000 in Hoboken.

20 Window Displays Result of Tie-up with Agent

The highlights of the campaign to exploit the showing of the talking feature, "Women They Talk About" at the Kirby Theatre, Houston, was the wholesale arrangement of 20 window displays in prominently located drug stores. These window displays were arranged by the representative of Kolynos representative with beaver board art panels, carrying the following copy:

"Women They Talk About are usually women in the world's eye. They all use Kolynos Dental Cream. See the talking feature Women They Talk About at the Kirby Theatre, September 8-14."

Showmanship

IN a bulletin sent to managers in his division, J. J. Franklin, Los Angeles Division Manager of West Coast Theatres, Inc., calls attention to the waste of electricity through lack of care and proper managerial supervision, which is one of the more common failings in management nearly everywhere. "After a careful survey of ten theatres," the writer declares, "I found that an average of sixty lights were burning at each theatre, from half an hour to five hours per day, before the house opened, after it closed and during show hours when the lights were not needed." It is more than reasonable to assume that this is at least the average condition in theatres everywhere, because it is hardly likely that the West Coast managers, who individually in experience and ability are if anything above the average, would fall below the average in this one particular. We venture the opinion that a great deal of money can be saved if managers will institute a check on this matter of light wastage. In the following paragraph are some of the points stressed in J. J. Franklin's bulletin:

IN several theatres as many as ten lights were burning where only two were necessary. In some theatres the entire border of stage lights were being used while cleaning. It was also found that when changing the marquee and upright signs and inspecting signs for lights out, the entire circuit was turned on for fully thirty minutes. Ordinarily the work would take not more than a few minutes. Stage managers, janitors and assistants must be held responsible for stage lights, dressing room lights, toilet room, marquee, lobby lights, etc., that are being used during non-show hours, and those in charge of changing marquee and sign lights must be instructed to check on the lights that are out and that this should be done quickly and the juice then turned off. It is not necessary for a few hundred to a few thousand lights to be burning while one or two bulbs are being changed.

A NOVELTY herald which attracted attention because the words "Season Pass" were displayed in big type was one of the most successful publicity items used in a campaign for "Lilac Time" by Manager Louis E. Ramon of the Manos Theatre, Greensburg, Pa. The "Season Pass" line was merely part of a sentence about "Lilac Time," the full statement printed on the throw-a-way cards being "Don't let the Season Pass without seeing the world's greatest sound picture." 10,000 of these cards were circulated in Greensburg.

THE "moustache contest" is a new one on this department, which unblushingly admits to never having heard of it before the receipt of a report on a campaign for "Four Walls" at the Granada Theatre in South Bend. Since it was an essay contest, and, therefore, sanitary so far as the postal rules are concerned, we can tell about it here. The idea was simple enough. Manager McDaniel with the assistance of the M-G-M exploiter sold the essay contest idea to the South Bend Tribune. It was started by some publicity giving the ideas of various movie stars as to whether the ideal lover was one with or without a moustache. To settle the local opinion in the matter the Tribune offered a cash prize and twenty-five pairs of tickets to the theatre as awards for the best essays.

R. R. Lists "Wings" as Attraction in Circular for Rail Excursion

THE showing of "Wings" at the Rialto Theatre in Omaha was listed as one of the attractions offered by a visit to that city in circulars issued by two major railroads running excursions over the week-end. This publicity was arranged by Manager John D. Howard of the Rialto.

In addition to its inclusion among the attractions of Omaha as set forth in the excursion circulars, "Wings" was advertised in 100 window cards and 3,000 dodgers in railroad stations within a radius of 75 miles of the city.

Seven hundred cards reading "Success, Tested and Proved—the epic of the air—the spirit of progress—now showing at the Rialto Theatre and you too as an employee in an all important utility service organization are a powerful factor in another mighty stride of progress—Natural Gas!" were placed in payroll envelopes of the Nebraska Power Co.

Three thousand other cards bearing similar copy were placed in the pay envelopes of four other companies prior to the opening of "Wings" at the Publix Rialto.

The lobby was given an advance display consisting of three airplane motors, eight propellers, flags, lobby cards and transom cards. A huge aeroplane cut-out was placed over the entrance to the theatre.

Robot Displays Ad Cards Only When Spectator Approaches

A "ROBOT" which did not waste any energy on lobby salesmanship by working while not observed, proved a highly effective exploitation medium for the showing of "The Water Hole" at the Florida theatre in St. Petersburg.

The display was rigged up by the theatre electrician under the supervision of Roy L. Smart. It consisted of a marionette operated by an electric motor, which in turn employed radio principles in starting and stopping. A magnetic field in which a human body or any similar conductor of electricity was the means of starting the robot at his work of displaying ad cards selling the show when some one stood in front of him—within about 12 inches of the front of the table—and would stop automatically when the person moved away from the magnetic field.

The dummy worked behind a desk or table, his action consisting of lifting cards, measuring about 11 x 14, into view of the spectator. There were 14 cards in the series, all advertising "The Water Hole."

The table was placed on four insulators to show that there was no wire connected other than that which operated the motor to which was a lamp attached, illuminating when a person stood in the magnetic field. Back of the draperies in front was a sheet of copper wire screen which was the background for the magnetic field.

The device was placed in the small front lobby of a closed hotel in the heart of town. Cut-outs, stills and title of picture surrounded the display while poster cards on either side of the display read, "Is He Real? Stand on red spot in front of the Magic Man and he will show you messages. When you leave, he stops. $2.50 for best answers in not more than 25 words on the topic What Makes Him Go?"

Fire Engine Salvaged from Junk Heap Now Ballyhoo

Although a fire engine has no connection with "Warming Up," it did, however, prove useful in advertising the picture at the Publix Noble Theatre, Anniston, Ala.

Manager T. Y. Walker visited a junk yard where there recently had arrived an old discarded fire engine from a nearby town.

Procuring the fire engine, Walker had his doorman and ushers polish and shine it up. Then he rented a team of white mules and hired a driver.

The driver and one of the ushers wore firemen's helmets as they rode through the various streets on the opening day of picture.

Coal tar and kindling made enough smoke to make the ballyhoo an attention getter. And to make sure no one would miss seeing it, an automobile exhaust whistle was attached to the engine and was made to blow by means of an air pump operated by the usher riding in the rear.

A 10-foot banner placed across the top of the engine read, "Warming Up" with Richard Dix—Noble Today—Also Paramount News showing scenes of Porto Rico Hurricane."

Netoco Managers Assigned to New Positions

Mr. James R. Somes, long affiliated with some of the best known theatres in the country, and for the last few months manager of the Netoco Crown Theatre, New London, Conn., has resigned because of ill health. He is expected to spend the Winter in Florida.

His position at the Crown will be filled by Mr. Kenneth Forkey, who comes from the Netoco Regent Theatre, Norfolk Downs. Mr. Forkey goes to the Crown with a wealth of experience and the confidence of his employers. His position at the Regent will be filled by Mr. James Wall, for years a showman in all branches of the business, and who leaves the Netoco Gem Theatre, East Boston, in the very capable hands of Mr. Herbert Johnson. All these houses are under Netoco management, and the faithful services of the above men have merited them their promotions.

Kansas City Ballroom Aids Midland Theatre Drive

A dance hall tie-up was used to exploit "Our Dancing Daughters," when this film played the Midland Theatre in Kansas City, Mo. Manager Maloney, aided by an M-G-M exploiter, arranged this tie-up with the Torreon Dance Palace for an "Our Dancing Daughters" dancing contest, they allowed the theatre to place a girl on the inside and distribute heralds to all those attending, this girl also distributed Camel cigarettes at the same time. The Pla-Mor Dance Palace also allowed the theatre to place a girl on the inside and distribute heralds to all those attending.

Express Co. Ties-In With "Excess Baggage" Drive

"Excess Baggage" received strong advertising support when that picture played the Hennepin-Orpheum theatre in Kansas City, Mo. Heavy billing and clever newspaper advertising were features of the campaign. The leading stunt exploitation was arranged through a tie-up with the American Express Co., which furnished a truck used to ballyhoo the picture. The truck was loaded with baggage and carried banners advertising the picture.

"Native Dress" Contest Popular Feature

A NATIVE dress competition has been staged by Manager Thomas Forhan at the Capitol Theatre, Welland, Ontario, with the result that he obtained much new patronage. The contest started off with a Hungarian native costume display for which suitable prizes were awarded, the Hungarian beauties being presented two nights. Then followed Italian and other national costume events, concluding with a Canadian dress feature. The number of foreign dresses in Welland surprised everybody.

Key City Reports

New York City

GOOD theatre-attending weather and strong attractions made it another profitable week for most all of the Broadway houses the past seven days. Taking the size of the house into consideration it appears that the Paramount is stealing the honors enjoyed by the Roxy during August and September. The big Publix has been going strong of late while the Roxy, unable to keep up steady run of specials, noticeably falls off on attendance when weaker shows are brought in; this, in the face of excellent Rothafel stage shows. At the Paramount, even though Paul Ash has returned to his native heath, this house is managing not only to survive his absence but is going stronger than ever.

Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In" (Par) was the attraction that kept the Paramount going at top speed and whether or not this picture was up to the standard of some other Bow vehicles, the little red-haired lady is quite enough in herself to draw a big gate here or elsewhere.

The Capitol held "Excess Baggage" (M-G-M) for a second week and did about as well as for the first week's showing. Fair business for both weeks. During the present writing the Capitol is sharing in the lime light of records, which have been broken in recent weeks along the street. "Our Dancing Daughters," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's first sound offering at this house, is the cause of the upheaval and Major Boxes announces that sixty thousand crowded this house over the week-end, shattering all previous house week-end records. And the show is steadily building up a big waiting line. This is not at all surprising in view of the fact that "Dancing Daughters" has been cleaning up in all key cities outside of New York.

"Win That Girl" (Fox) gave the Roxy about the same showing made the previous week by "Plastered in Paris." Attendance at neither one being in keeping with marks made at this house with other pictures. The Strand was also a little off on a second week's showing of "The Lion and the Mouse" (W. B.), but the average for the two weeks is O. K. for this house.

Both current offerings at the Rialto and Rivoli will depart on Oct. 12th to let in two new productions. Jannings' "The Patriot" has made an excellent two months run and seems destined to repeat in the larger cities where a Jannings-entente can be drawn upon. "Two Lovers" (U. A.) started in its three weeks' stay at a fair pace and then petered out a bit towards the end. The Rialto will bring in "The Battle of the Sexes" and Von Stroheim's long heralded "Wedding March" will open at the Rivoli.

The Colony has "Lonesome" (U) and Ben Bernie and his band, the combination netting this house far better returns than it saw last season. It will be remembered that U closed this theatre for the Summer months.

Including Paramount's "Wings" at the Criterion there are seven out of eight specials in town which have either sound effects, synchronized score or dialogue and singing, and adding four other sound pictures among pop houses to this, sound pictures appear to dominate the situation—and in all probability will continue to do so if the present trend is any indication of the future.

The Astor with M-G-M's "White Shadows" is still way up in the running and First National's "Lilac Time" is also still making excellent returns at the Central. Nothing official has come from Paramount as to when its veteran "Wings" is to leave the Criterion, where it has gone a couple of months past the year mark. Fox's "Four Devils" has replaced "Air Circus" at the Gaiety and has started off well. Another Fox picture "Mother Knows Best" has not made much of a showing at the Globe. "Mother Machree" is in the Roxy at present and both "Air Circus" and "Mother Knows Best" are expected to soon follow.

The Winter Garden is packing them in with Jolson's "Singing Fool" (W. B.) and Warner's Theatre is still going strong with "The Terror" (W. B.). The Embassy with "Submarine" (Columbia) apparently the only silent picture among the higher priced houses, is still demonstrating that a good silent can make a strong run.

Minneapolis

"WINGS" did such a fine business during its third week at the Strand that it was held over for a fourth week. Finkelshten & Ruben pointed in an advertisement that the picture had broken all box office records. "The Gold Rush" once stayed at the Strand four weeks, but "Wings" has done more business in three weeks than the Chaplin film did in three. Its showing is all the more remarkable because it was shown for two weeks last winter as a road-show at the Metropolitan.

The Hennepin-Orpheum found Joan Crawford in "Our Dancing Daughters" to be a first rate attraction and "The River Pirate" did a fair business at the Minnesota, and "State Street Sadie" pulled about the average crowds at the State.

Pantages had the Reginald Denny film, "The Night Bird," and found it a good program picture. "Lights of New York" came into the Grand, a second run loop house, and cleaned up. Formerly it showed for two weeks at the State. Fred Thomson in "Kit Carson" made an ordinary showing during half a week at the Lyric.

The Granada, the new neighborhood house, did a fine business with "The Street Angel," while the other outlying houses—Lagoon, Loring, Arion, Lyndale, American and Rialto—reported business fair to good with such films as "The Perfect Crime," "Honeymoon Hate," "Forbidden Hours" and "His Tiger Lady."

Los Angeles

THE outstanding box-office attraction last week in Los Angeles was "Mother Knows Best," playing at the Carhay Circle Theatre. Reports show that this picture probably held the lead for the week. All other pictures however closed the week with average receipts.

"White Shadows in the South Seas," playing at Graumans' Chinese, turned in a week of good business.

"The Show Girl," playing at the Hill-street, met with audience favor and better than average business. This theatre plays vaudeville also, but the feature was the high spot of the program. "The Godless Girl" closed, following a fair run.

"The Singing Fool" takes the place of "State Street Sadie" at Warner's Hollywood Theatre. "Sadie" played to average business. Better than average is reported for "Revenge," playing at United Artists Theatre. Loew's State, where "Me Gangster" is playing, reports satisfactory business. "Dry Martini" at the Metropolitan ran up average receipts.

Cleveland

THE downtown houses are playing to big crowds. All of the downtown houses are doing well. All of the sound pictures are drawing immense audiences. Interest in talking pictures is growing apace, indicating that they are pleasing on their own merits and not alone on the strength of novelty. On the other hand, the neighborhood houses are just plodding along. There is no chance of any of them getting sound equipment until after January 1st, if then.

"White Shadows in the South Seas," just completed its run of three weeks at the Stillman, where it was very well received. The unusual settings, and the beautiful musical score combined to make this picture particularly appealing.

"The Terror" played to big business at the Allen. The second all-talking picture, greatly improved in technique, attracted large audiences, and the play itself increased its prestige.

"While the City Sleeps," Lon Chaney's first talking picture, packed the State Theatre all week. A tense underworld tale, made highly exciting by sound effects and conversation. Good entertainment.

"The Perfect Crime" opened big at Keith's Palace, and continued to build every day. This unusual mystery play had a strong audience appeal.

"Stocks and Blondes," comedy drama of the lighter type of entertainment, was well received at Keith's East 105th Street the first half of the week, and "Love Over Nine," brought the week to a successful issue.

The Park split the week with first run neighborhood engagements of "The Tempest," which was well patronized and favorably commented upon, and, "Oh Kay," Colleen Moore's light comedy, which drew large crowds.

The Cameo had a big week with the second downtown run of "The Lights of New York."

Pittsburgh

LOEW'S PENN where business is always good, did even bigger than usual with "Our Dancing Daughters." Long lines of patrons stood on the pavement in front of the theatre at almost every performance. Publix stage presentation was entitled "High Hat," and proved better than average entertainment.

The Stanley enjoyed a nice week's business with "The King of Kings," with sound accompaniment. The production came in for much praise from fans and press alike.

Loew's Aldine offered "Fazil" with sound accompaniment. Drew good crowds but the film made little impression on the fans.

The Davis and Liberty had "Hot News," and did but average business.

The Cameraphone had "The Cameraman." Business increased each day proving that this funfilm was getting the much-to-be-desired word-of-mouth advertising.

At the Regent "State Street Sadie" with "talkie" accompaniment got good business. The impression here seemed to be that the "talkie" sequences put this one over.

The Grand, a first run house (owned by Stanley) played "Wings" after it had been previously shown at the Stanley. Business was very good.

"Danger Street" was mildly received at the Alhambra.

The Olympic played to average business with "Midnight Madness."

Atlanta

LOEW'S Capitol came through with flying colors last week, leading all other houses by a wide margin and bringing up a big profit week with "Our Dancing Daughters." The presentation of this M-G-M synchronized picture inaugurated sound pictures at the Capitol where, henceforth, they will strengthen the pictures and vaudeville program.

At Keith's Georgia, the only other combination pictures-and-vaudeville theatre in Atlanta, George Bancroft in "The Docks of New York" took second honors of the week. The picture proved decidedly more popular than "The Drag Net," and wrote up a good gross and net.

Marking a radical departure from its previous policy, the Howard Theatre last week scrapped its stage band shows and went to a straight sound picture policy, Monday, October 1, with "The Terror" as the prime feature. Without the benefit of stage shows, without a pit orchestra, and without so much as an organ note, the house rolled up a good week, showing a substantial net profit.

With two good synchronized short subjects supplementing the feature, it is interesting to note that one of the talking shorts, Robert Benchley's "The Treasurer's Report," came in for a large share of praise. Adoption of the straight sound picture policy has served to emphasize the importance of entertaining talking and singing shorts that heretofore were submerged under the stage band show policy.

The Metropolitan enjoyed better than an average week with "The Scarlet Lady" as the main attraction.

Loew's Grand drew less than fair business with two second runs, "The Mysterious Lady" and "The Cossacks." Both pictures had rolled up good grosses on their initial runs and probably had skimmed all the cream.

"Fazil," in the second week of a two consecutive weeks' engagement at the Rialto, fell off considerably.

The first-run Westerns held the boards at the Tudor Theatre. Leo Maloney in "Two-Gun of the Tumbleweed" (Pathe) drew favorable reaction, but Buffalo Bill, Jr., in "Roaring Broncs" (Pathe), was only fair.

Des Moines

THE Des Moines Theatre had a very, very satisfactory week with "Lilac Time." Everyone liked it. "Lindy," a Vitaphone song number, made a big hit. At the Capitol, the attraction was a good one with Lon Chaney in "When the City Sleeps." Lon Chaney is a good draw and Jay Mills, stage band director, was back again with a rollicking stage show in "Rah, Rah, Rah."

"Forbidden Hours" at the Strand with Ramon Navarro and "Heart Trouble" with Harry Langdon for the last half did good business, which is the usual thing at the Strand.

"King of Kings," showing at the Capitol at Ames, did a very big week in its Iowa premier showing, reports Joe Benjamin Gerbracht, manager.

Cincinnati

THE week in the Queen City was quite a profitable one for all houses, due, partially to the character of the pictures, partially to the cool weather, and partially to the discontinuance of the dog racing track at Springdale, near Cincinnati, which nightly attracted thousands.

Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In" at the Albee enjoyed exceptionally good business. The picture was well liked and so were the vaudeville acts on the same bill, headed by Rae Samuels, a great favorite in Cincy.

"Our Dancing Daughters" at the Lyric was pleasing to the fans who proved this by their attendance, the house rolling up a healthy gross.

"Beggars of Life," screened with sound at the Capitol, caught on nicely at the opening, and business kept improving steadily as the week progressed. The Movietone was unusually good at this house.

Keith's, with "Tenth Avenue," enjoyed a better week than for some time past. The picture pleased greatly, and a good attendance was the result.

"Beau Broadway" at the Strand likewise had an exceptional week, with little, if anything, to be desired in the box office balance sheet.

The Family, split-week, with "A Son of the Golden West" and "Domestic Troubles," showing for the first and last half respectively, hit around the usual high attendance mark.

Boston

WITH the college season now in full blast and football crowds pouring into the city every week, Boston theatres are enjoying their usual early fall business. This year's business is considerably in excess of that of former years. Some lay it to the popularity of the "talkies," while others say that with Boston at least one good theatre too small, business is bound to be heavy.

Outstanding among the successes of the past few weeks are those films shown with movietone and vitaphone. At the Modern and Beacon of the Netoco chain, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has just finished a run of four weeks, a run only surpassed once before at these twin theatres.

"The Fleet's In" at the Metropolitan has enjoyed big business and with it comes the return of Gene Rodemich to the stage presentation. Standing lines have again formed nightly.

"Our Dancing Daughters" at Loew's State increased rapidly in popularity during the week for record business during the latter half. There is a possibility of a return of the film as soon as other bookings will permit.

Another box office success was "Just Married" at the Keith-Albee Boston Theatre with a big business through the entire week.

Other films netting liberal returns include "Lilac Time" at the Scollay Square Olympia, "Her Cardboard Lover" at the Bowdoin Square, "Wings," which comes for the first time at popular prices, at the Fenway and Washington Street Olympia since its phenomenal run as a road show; "Warming Up" at the Lancaster, "Street Angel" at the University and a number of feature films at other suburban houses.

Tampa

BUSINESS in the show-shops the past week was entirely satisfactory, with one exception. This was the failure of the much heralded Emil Jannings picture, "The Patriot," to pull better than average business for the Tampa. Great things had been expected of this picture and there is no doubt about it's being one of the big pictures of the year, but the fans didn't fall for it, and it went over just average.

"Dancing Daughters," which followed it in for the last half, did better and business on it was fine. Maybe Tampa fans prefer the flaming youth type of pictures.

"Caught In The Fog," four Vitaphone acts and the Movietone News, drew the usual good business for the Victory.

"The Head Man" gave the Strand a big Sunday and an average Monday following. "Waterfront" held business up better than average for its three day run, and "Fleetwing" closed the week to average takings.

The Franklin had two crook plays, "The Racket" and "The Hawk's Nest," on their program this week. Both these pictures were second runs, as was the other feature, "Orphans Of The Storm." The line-up seemed to click and business continued good.

Baltimore

WITH ten first-run pictures on view at the large houses here during the week beginning Monday, October 1, business was good for the majority.

Loew's Century pulled them in strong during the entire week with "Docks of New York" and a stage presentation act headed by Ted Claire.

At Loew's Stanley "The Fleet's In," starring Clara Bow, did fine business and the week's receipts could be called very good. That was due rather to Clara Bow's personal pulling power.

"Frazil" proved a good drawing card at the New Theatre, with other sound and talking films. But business there with this sound, song and musical synchronized picture could have been much better.

For its third consecutive week at Warner's Metropolitan "The Terror," the sound, dialogue and musical synchronized production, proved a very good patron puller.

The Palace burlesque and movie house on West Fayette street opened with Columbia burlesque and the feature picture "Walking Back," starring Sue Carol. This house fared well.

"The King of Kings" had its return engagement in this city at the Rivoli. Many went in to see it the first week but there was adverse comment concerning the cutting of this film from its former length in the silent version which had been shown at Ford's Theatre some months ago.

"Beggars of Life" was cracker-jack entertainment with sound, song, one line of dialogue and musical synchronization. It started off fair and towards the latter part of the week picked up to very good.

"Violette Imperiale," the foreign production starring Raquel Meller, proved a poor business getter at the Little Theatre.

"The Toilers" proved only a fair business getter at the Keith-Albee Hippodrome with five acts of Keith-Albee family time vaudeville on the same bill.

"None but the Brave" was only a fair business puller at the Keith-Albee New Garden with five acts of Keith-Albee high class acts with Glenn Hunter in person as the headliner.

Albany

RECORDS were smashed in Albany and Troy last week by Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool." At the Mark Strand in Albany, the picture ran to the best business in many months. Hundreds and possibly thousands of persons unable to gain admission. The neighboring Clinton Square Theatre and others caught the overflow and profited to a considerable extent. The same held true with the Jolson picture running at the Troy Theatre. The picture established a new record for the week-end at the Troy Theatre and Monday's matinee was the largest in the history of the house.

The Mark Ritz in Albany also played to a record breaking business in the "Docks of New York." This picture had been extensively advertised and it needed no overflow from the Mark Strand to fill it. Another picture that went over extremely well in Albany last week was "The Street Angel" at the Leland and while this picture did not establish a house record, it played to capacity business afternoon and evening and probably could have been held.

The Lincoln in Troy found "The Show Girl" playing to capacity business on Sunday night, with the crowds standing and to fairly good business for the remaining half of the week. The last of the week was given over to "Varsity," which caught on with the R. P. I. students, but did not make any great appeal to the rest of the city.

In both Albany and Troy neighborhood houses reported business as being satisfactory. The weather continued cool and pleasant throughout the entire week.

Ottawa

AN atmosphere of activity was in evidence at all moving picture theatres in Ottawa, Ontario, during the week of October 1. There was a season of French plays at the Auditorium and a big league football game at Lansdowne Stadium but they did not cut perceptibly into box office receipts.

There were good crowds at Keith's to see "The Passionate Adventure," a subject dealing with domestic relations in a deft manner. The story did not cause any sensation but the program was materially strengthened by good vaudeville.

"The First Kiss" at the Regent Theatre had a strong story and the stars, Fay Wray, a Canadian girl, and Gary Cooper, were very acceptable. Patronage was steady and the patrons were satisfied.

"None but the Brave" drew good business to the Centre Theatre because of its bathing girl theme. This feature was an eye-fall, with plenty of mirth.

Excellent business was noted at the Imperial Theatre for "Beggars of Life" and it was Jim Tully's name that helped to encourage patronage. At the same time, it isn't difficult to examine Louise Brooks on the screen and Wallace Beery completed a lively picture.

"King of Kings" had its second week at the Little Theatre and drawing crowds to the tiny playhouse was apparently a problem. Business was fair, but much better than the first week.

"The Desired Woman," a tale of burning sands, made a fair impression on Columbia Theatre crowds during the first half but "Spring Fever" renewed its local success in substantial fashion during the last three days.

"The Private Life of Helen of Troy," in its censored form for Ontario eyes, was only a fair attraction at the Rex Theatre for three days but there were bumper crowds during the last half for Rin-Tin-Tin in "A Race for Life," juveniles being out in force.

The Fern Theatre had a steady week with "Heart of a Follies Girl" and "Flying Romeo."

Seattle

FIRST run houses without exception enjoyed good business last week, with a list of attractions that were good for the box office throughout the week.

"The Patriot" at the Fifth Avenue Theatre was considered a remarkable picture and played to very good business, despite the fact that it did not draw the great capacity crowds it was entitled to. However, the week's total was quite strong, nearing the top of the records since this became a "sound" house, reached recently by "Street Angel."

At the Seattle Theatre, "The Night Watch" played to very pleasing business. It was considered the most interesting and well done of the Dove pictures in many months. Fanchon-Marco's stage revue was good in spots only, but the return of Gene Morgan from Tacoma as master of ceremonies was a big attraction on the stage. Box office about a good average.

The Blue Moose Theatre featured the second and final week of "Tempest." Houses were big at every performance, but the film didn't click as strong as it should have, compared with recent films at the same house. Business, however, was plenty good for the fourteen days and nights.

Across the street at the Music Box Theatre "The Terror" wound up its four-week run. Business the final week was almost capacity with the exception of early matinees, and the film established new records that eclipse the four-week total of the opening film, "Glorious Betsy." A fine month for this new house.

The Columbia Theatre borrowed a page from the book of some of the cheaper houses and put on "The Road to Ruin" as a sensational jazz expose of modern youth and morals. They used all the old hokum including patronage of the clergy and media, "Sleep It" ads, etc. The public seemingly fell hard for the game at 25c and 50c admission prices and the film did a very nice business. It goes into a second week with more sensational advertising and publicity.

"A Woman on Trial" at the Coliseum was a moderately good attraction for a 25c house, as was also "The Albany Night Boat" at the Embassy.

At the vaudeville houses, the Orpheum got the break with "Craig's Wife" which was well received, doing better than "The Michigan Kid" at Pantages. The Palace Hip, playing upon the coming of Harry Langdon in person to the Seattle Theatre next week, featured his "The Chaser" on their screen, but it was a very weak film and was no box office attraction.

Detroit

THE march of business continued to the doors of the new Fox, where the dedication program was held for the third week. Nearly every night has witnessed a capacity turnout. "Street Angel" was the feature picture run in conjunction with an elaborate stage program.

Clara Bow in Paramount's nautical dainty, "The Fleet's In," drew a surprising business to the Capitol. The vivacious Clara has proved herself an unusual favorite in Detroit. "Women They Talk About," the Warner Brothers' all-talking special, was another first-rate money maker, at the Madison, largely because of the novelty.

Jean Crawford's peppy activities in "Our Dancing Daughters," M-G-M, exhibit an enduring attraction at the Adams. They spelled a crowded house for the fourth week.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," Universal's sound picture, fell off considerably in the third week and probably will be replaced at the State. Milton Sills in "The Crash," First National, developed into a weak affair at the Michigan and the response was below expectations. The same fate befell "Two Lovers," at the United Artists, in its second week.

"Simba," the jungle picture at the Shubert-Lafayette, continued to do a pleasant trade in its third and final week. A fair number of patrons returned to take in the fragrance of "Broken Blossoms," the D. W. Griffith revival at the Little Theatre.

Harrisburg, Pa.

SPLENDID business was done all week in the first run houses. In the Victoria the principal offering was Emil Jannings in "The Patriot," which made a tremendous hit, the big theatre frequently being filled to capacity. "The King of Kings," with sound, was shown at Loew's Regent with phenomenal success. Practically every evening during the week the "standing room only" sign was up. The success of this offering was the more significant from the fact that "The King of Kings" was shown in a Harrisburg theatre, without the sound attachment, several months ago when it also did a huge business. It is quite evident that many persons who saw the spectacle on the occasion of its "soundless" appearance in Harrisburg went to see it again with the sound accompaniment.

There was much interest, too, in the appearance in the Colonial of "Sunrise," starring Janet Gaynor and George O'Brien, notwithstanding the strength of the attractions in competing theatres. The State did well with the comedy, "Pay as You Enter."

The Grand did well, financially, with a return to Harrisburg of Billie Dove, supported by Larry Kent, in "The Heart of a Follies Girl," while the offering at the Capitol was "Moon of Israel." On Friday and Saturday the National presented Ken Maynard in "The Upland Rider," which provided thrills for a satisfied audience.

San Francisco

IN spite of the holidays being celebrated here and exceptionally hot weather, the hottest in 37 years, motion picture business in San Francisco, generally, was considered very good.

The Embassy Theatre continued to draw crowds with "The Terror," and Vitaphone that the musicians are fighting. "Our Dancing Daughters" filled the Warfield all week along with the presentation act "Violin Ideas," movietone and the orchestra. This theatre did the best of any during the week.

Buster Keaton was well received at the Granada in "The Cameraman," which was shown with the revue, "Kat Kabaret." "The Tempest" continued to draw exceptionally well at the St. Francis Theatre, which also has a Movietone and orchestra. "Wings" at the California Theatre continues to take well its second week, although local movie fans do not like war pictures.

The El Capitan, the city's largest theatre, drew big crowds all week with "Hot Heels," and a presentation act, "Geisha Land." At the Columbia Theatre the picture, "Simba," shown for a third week at advanced prices, continued to draw crowds. More than the management and the public expected.

In the residential districts, The Alexandria did exceptionally well with "The Foreign Legion" and the Coliseum did fairly good with "Hold 'Em Yale" as local residents saw no plot or character to play. Something Westerners demand. "The Noose" was well received at the Majestic and the new Marina Theatre did very well with "The Secret Hour" and "Silver Valley."

Kansas City

THE week's attendance at first run houses was rather spotted, although there was no outstanding reason why some days or some pictures should have overshadowed others.

At the Mainstreet theatre "Lilac Time" drew capacity audiences at virtually every performance, both afternoons and nights, while "Submarine" at the Pantages drew equally well, there never being a performance during the week which did not find the house's capacity taxed.

At Loew's Midland "Two Lovers" drew well the first part of the week, then showed a slump on mid-week days, only to come back and finish strong on the last two days. "King of Kings" at the Globe played to a fair attendance throughout the week, the latter part of the week being better than the first part.

"The Patriot" at the Newman, featuring Emil Jannings, played to an average week's attendance, as did "The Michigan Kid" at the Uptown. Nothing was done at any of the theatres in the way of unusual exploitation.

Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS houses chalked up satisfactory grosses last week. Several days of cooler weather aided in putting business on the upgrade for first run houses.

The theatres have hit their normal fall stride, the strong attractions in the downtown houses drawing the heaviest business. Neighborhood houses have been very well attended.

"Sawdust Paradise" at the Indiana and "The Terror" at Apollo did good business. The Apollo held the picture the second week because of its popularity.

"Sunrise" at the Circle and "Our Dancing Daughters" at the Palace did satisfactory business.

The Apollo management announced a mid-night show Friday night to accommodate the late crowd which desired to see "The Singing Fool," with Al Jolson.

Dallas

THE past week has been exceptionally hot in Dallas, which hasn't helped theatre business in the least, and receipts are lower at the first-run theatres, but this is due more to the attractions offered than to the weather. The fact that weather won't keep the public away from the theatres if a real good picture is being shown was clearly demonstrated by the Melba Theatre.

At the Melba, "Wings" stacked them in for every performance for the entire week, and the starting of the second week run found business the same. There is no doubt that this picture will give the Melba the largest gross it has ever enjoyed and a gross which it will be hard to ever exceed.

"Painted Post," starring Tom Mix at the Majestic, secured average receipts for the week. Nick Lucas, the famous "crazy man," headlines the vaudeville, and is responsible for most of the business, and may always be counted upon to bring business to any Dallas theatre.

At the Capitol, "King of Kings," with an all-star cast, secured a good patronage, and receipts for the week were very much higher, and indications are that the picture will continue to hold up the coming week, as it is billed for two weeks. This attraction has given the Capitol the needed hike in receipts, as business has been off since the showing of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

"The Cardboard Lover," starring Marion Davies, brought only fair business to the Palace the past week. This was no doubt due to the strong competition of the Melba and the Capitol. Ray Teal, the new stage band leader, was heavily billed in an effort to get business and was responsible for no small part of the receipts. This is the second consecutive week that business has been low at the Palace, and this is very unusual for this theatre.

At the Old Mill "Partners in Crime," with Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, and "Tillie's Punctured Romance," starring W. C. Fields, Chester Conklin and Louise Fazenda, brought fair business for the week.

The Arcadia's gross for the week was good and the attractions offered were "The Mysterious Lady," with Greta Garbo and Conrad Nagel, and "If I Were Single," with May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel.

Dallas

(Previous Week)

BUSINESS at the Dallas first-run theatres the past week was only fair, although there were several cool days sprinkled in to relieve the public from the unusual hot weather of the past several weeks. Only one theatre could boast of unusually good business.

"Our Dancing Daughters," starring Joan Crawford and Johnny Mack Brown, at the Melba, proved to be the big draw of the week, and business was exceptionally good for the entire week. This picture seemed to please the public more than any picture shown in Dallas in quite a while, and did much for the Melba.

At the Majestic "The River Pirate," with Victor McLaglen and Lois Moran brought average business. Credit for the largest portion of the week's business goes to Francis X. Bushman, Jr., who headlined the Interstate Vaudeville bill in person, in a one-act playlet. Mr. Bushman's personal appearance did much to enhance him in the opinion of the Dallas public and his offering was well received.

"The Patriot," with Emil Jannings at the Palace, failed to uphold the high prestige which Mr. Jannings created in Dallas with "The Last Command." Receipts for the week were down at the Palace as were the expectations of the public after seeing the picture. The attraction was heavily billed, but failed to stand up after getting a fair start.

At the Capitol, "Lingerie," with Alice White and Malcolm McGregor, secured an average gross for the showing and was well liked by the patrons. No loss of business was noticed due to the absence of the Capitol orchestra, which has been discontinued, due to the increased expense and no increase in receipts.

The Old Mill checked off average receipts for the week with "The Water Hole," starring Jack Holt and Nancy Carroll. This picture was due to receive more patronage, as Holt has a following in Dallas, but for some reason it failed.

The Arcadia turned in a good gross for the week with "The Racket," starring Thomas Meighan and Marie Prevost, "The Play Girl," with Madge Bellamy and Johnny Mack Brown, and "Three Sinners," with Pola Negri and Warner Baxter.

Portland, Ore.

ANOTHER big first-run house opened during the week, John Hamrick's Music Box, and as was expected to exceptionally good business with "Glorious Betsy," and both the major offering and other vitaphone and movietone offerings were run off as smoothly as the house had been opened for a month.

The Blue Mouse, another Hamrick house, also opened with a new bill, "Women They Talk About." Capacity shows continued, especially heavy evenings.

Emil Jannings and Lewis Stone shared the honors in "The Patriot" at the Broadway with sound effects, and fairly good business rolled in.

For a change the Rivoli showed a first run to better business, "The Matinee Idol," showing that melodrama is popular at times. Bessie Love and Johnnie Walker are featured.

The usual double bill brought increased business to the Capitol with "Prowlers of the Sea."

The United Artists held over for a second week "Two Lovers," which continued to play to good business.

Much better business was enjoyed at the Columbia than for some weeks past due to a John Barrymore production, "Tempest," but without sound effects. The accompanying musical score as played by Joseph Sam-pietro was also well received.

Fairly heavy business at evening performances but considerably short on matinees was the rule for the week at the Portland, though the show deserved much better, George Bancroft's "The Docks of New York" and Fanchon & Marco's "Monkey-shines Idea."

Pantages offered seven all-around good acts and one of the best pictures of the fall season, "The Scarlet Lady."

Oklahoma City

ANOTHER fair week at the film houses in this city, with attractions pulling direct ratio to their quality in most instances.

At the Capitol "Wings" started on the third week, and with full houses prevailing daily, this Paramount masterpiece picture has had a record breaker run and still standing "em up," and everybody seeing the picture well pleased.

"While the City Sleeps" with Lon Chaney, pleased large crowds daily at the Criterion.

Jack Holt in "Court Martial" with Betty Compson, at the Victoria, and Alice White in "Show Girl" at the Empress, both registered good business.

Sammy Cohen in "Plastered in Paris" did splendidly at the Liberty for entire week.

Bessie Love in "Sally of the Scandals" together with five good acts of vaudeville completed an excellent program at the Orpheum and the business was good.

"Uncle Tom" Is Received Favorably in Atlanta

Although booked for a two-day showing beginning last Wednesday, at the Palace Theatre in Cedartown, Ga., Universal's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" scored such a success that T. F. Thompson, owner of the theatre, held the picture over for another day, according to a report received by Ben Y. Cammack, head of Universal's Atlanta branch. This was the first showing in Georgia of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and the report to Mr. Cammack also stated that comment on the production was very favorable.

Opinions on Pictures

Our Dancing Daughters

Lively and Decorative, But Lacks Story

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHAT the jazz age is responsible for is depicted as the theme of this story, which isn't so hot with plot and character as it is with decorations and incident. There is nothing extraordinary about the idea. It involves the chase and possible capture of an eligible youth by two society girls. But the director has covered up its weakness of story by pitching the action to a fast key and embellishing it with striking sets and plenty of movement.

So we see the cocktail, the flask and a lot of mad dancing—details necessary in putting over the picture. The development is consistent, though the end is labored. One of the girls is painted as a talented drinker, presumably for the purpose of having her fall downstairs and kill herself.

Joan Crawford, Anita Page, Dorothy Sebastian and John Mack Brown carry out the larger assignments—and all fit their roles well, especially Joan. She has developed fast during the past year and should be given bigger and better story films. The synchronization fits the plot in regard to its musical numbers.

It's a picture with an especial appeal to youth—and youth will surely be attracted to it. The title is a nifty and will figure curiosity.

Drawing Power: Title and tone of production. For all houses. Exploitation

Angles: Stage matinees for younger element. Tease the title. Mention cast. Play up the cast. Bill as timely story of jazz-mad age.

THEME: Romantic drama of younger set with two girls determined to capture eligible rich youth for husband.

The Night Watch

Entertaining Enough

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a war-time melodrama with a slightly different twist in that much of the action involves a triangle aboard a French battleship—and which action is continued in court. It is told by the flash-back method, and because of this method it is more ingeniously arranged than usual. So we have it in retrospect and it aids in making it easy to follow.

The idea exploits the confusion attendant upon the declaration of war. It is told on the witness stand through the court-martial of a naval captain for the murder of a lieutenant. There had been a gala affair aboard the ship and when orders are given to sail to the seat of hostilities the ladies are sent ashore—that is all but the captain's wife, who had secreted herself in the lieutenant's cabin. What follows are a series of misunderstandings, a picture of outraged honor by the captain and the subsequent death of the junior officer. These events are told with good dramatic effect, and Billie Dove acquires herself very well, besides looking very beautiful. It is all simple enough and interests all the way, even if you can spot the finish easily.

The cast is well picked as to types, the players looking like real Frenchmen, and acting very competently. The settings of the warship look authentic.

Drawing Power: Star's beauty and popularity. Suitable for all types of houses.

Exploitation Angles: Bill as different type of war melodrama. Use stills of star. Exploit her beauty. Mention Donald Reed and Paul Lukas. The title needs a play, too.

THEME: Melodrama involving a triangle and court-martial with husband vindicated.

Produced and distributed by First National. Length, six reels. Released, October, 1928. The Cast: Billie Dove, Paul Lukas, Nicholas Soussanin, Donald Reed, Anita Garvine, William Tooker, George Periolat, Nicholas Bela. Director, Alexander Korda.

The Vanishing West

(Ten Episode Serial)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

JUDGING from the dire villainy, the deep intrigue, the daring rescues and the fast action in the first three episodes of this ten episode serial it should be a humdinger before the youth is restored to his father and the latter is cleared of the crime for which he is being unjustly sought. There is certainly an abundance of action and it is of the typical serial type, done by an exceptional cast of serial stars.

The principal criticism of the picture is that there has been too much attempt to crowd it with villainy and rescues, the same fault that dominates all of this type picture. It is all without rhyme or reason in the first three episodes, but doubtless it will develop and unravel more smoothly when the groundwork is thoroughly set. As usual, all of the action is very far fetched. One sees some daring and entertaining horsemanship from such well known serial performers as Eileen Sedgwick, Jack Perrin, Jack Daugherty, Yakima Canutt, Leo Maloney and William Fairbanks, all of whom have starred in their own right in serials in the past. In addition the cast is made up of Mickey Bennett, Helen Gibson, Fred Church, Bobby Burns, Harry Lorraine, Aaron Edwards and Tom Bay.

The story has to do with the youth, Mickey Bennett, whose father is unjustly accused of a crime and therefore is a fugitive from justice. There is a villainous uncle who seeks guardianship over the child in the hope of eventually getting possession of a mysterious fortune and he is evidently willing to go to any lengths to gain his ends. Just what the nature of the fortune is still remained a mystery in that part of the picture revealed for reviewing purposes. However, it is the usual thrilling story and it gives promise of having a healthy appeal to serial followers.

The picture was produced by Mascot Pictures Corporation, of which Nat Leine is president.

The Singapore Mutiny

Fair Program Tale of the Sea

(Reviewed by Ray Murray)

NOT much to this story of a stoker and a fair lady. Ralph Ince who directed and plays the principal role carries the burden of the work and it is pretty much a one man picture. There is a touch of "Sadie Thompson" about Estelle Taylor's role in the first reel and a bit of the "Hairy Ape" in the stoke hole scenes, but both are forgotten in a weak finish.

Ince is cast as a hard-boiled seaman, Kelsey, in charge of the stokers on a freighter bound for Singapore. He attacks Daisy, a lady of the streets who is shipping to the Orient, and is locked up. Kelsey is rescued from his cell just as the ship is sinking, by a stowaway, and the girl, the stowaway and Kelsey save themselves in a row boat. Kelsey, driven crazy by the heat and lack of water, which he has given to the stowaway, jumps overboard.

The role of the stowaway is played by Gardner James. He hardly impresses one as a suitable hero for Daisy as she would be more apt to choose the stalwart seaman. Martha Mattox and Harry Allen as two missionaries were adequate in small roles. James Mason was excellent as Borg. Most of the action takes place on board a freighter at sea with much good photography.

Drawing Power: Fair. Exploitation Angles: Play up Ince and his meaty role. Also bill Estelle Taylor prominently. It is a "he-man" type of picture. Tell them that and also that its scenes of the stoking room are realistic to the core.

THEME: Drama of the sea. Of a woman of the streets, of a stowaway on board a freighter who showed her how to climb out of the slough and of the chief stoker, who, although he is but a primitive animal has some splendid points of character and who voluntarily drowns himself in order that the girl and the stowaway might have the little water that is left to them. The freighter sinks, the two drift in an open boat and are finally saved.

Produced and distributed by F.B.O. October 7, 1928 release. Length, 5,812 feet. The Cast: Ralph Ince, Estelle Taylor, Gardner James, James Mason, Will Irving, Martha Mattox, Harry Allen, Carl Axzelle, Robert Gaillard, Frank Newberg. Story by Norman Springer. Continuity by Fred Myton. Cameraman, Robert Martin. Titles, Ralph Ince and Norman Springer. Film Editor, George Arthur. Director, Ralph Ince.

"Ko-Ko Goes Over"

(Paramount—One Reel)

MAX FLEISCHER has a little frolic with his cartoon clown, "Ko-Ko," in this fairly entertaining bit. "Ko-Ko" and his dog join the army and for the most part their latest escapade places them along the battle front. There is some fine cartoon work showing the guns booming and there are a few laughs to be had in "Ko-Ko's" bombardment of Mr. Fleischer, who finally gets his lawless imp back again into the old familiar ink bottle.—RAYMOND GANLY.

The Mating Call

Vigorous and Substantial Film Fare

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THINGS are picking up for Tom Meighan since he tared forth with "The Racket." While the new opus hasn't got that picture's wallop, it has plenty of punch in its plot, an interesting line of action and clear-cut characterization.

Rex Beach is the author, and a vigorous yarn he's turned out. It's all about a Southern farmer who marries the village pride and who after a sojourn in the army overseas, returns to discover her a cheat.

For a side-issue of the plot Beach introduces good old Southern rebellion taking form in the shape of hooded night-riders whose members are dedicated to the job of preserving the honor of American womanhood. They aren't as alert as they should be. In watching for phandering gentlemen they fail to notice a playboy in their midst. It is Meighan who appears as the innocent victim of the organization. And the scenes give him a chance to expose his tense features to the Kliegs. He has two leading women here. Evelyn Brent and Renee Adoree, one as a society girl, the other as a drab daughter of the soil. Both give excellent performances. And so does Gardner James. In all this is a meaty story, crammed with action and carrying much plot.

It has a good title, has been given a first rate production, and James Cruze, who directed, has brought out every dramatic incident in tip-top film fashion. It should please em.

Drawing Power: Star's popularity, which seemingly is as sound as ever. For all types of houses. Exploitation Angles: The title, star's popularity and the presence of two leading women. Play up this fact. Feature as homespun story of love and misunderstanding. Feature the director.

THEME: Melodrama of young husband who discovers wife unfaithful while he is overseas and the tragic consequences.

Produced by Caddo. Released by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, October 1928. Cast: Thomas Meighan, Evelyn Brent, Renee Adoree, Gardner James, Alan Roscoe, Helen Foster, Luke Cosgrave, Cyril Chadwick, Will R. Walling. Director, James Cruze.

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ONCE again Murnau has made an outstanding picture—which has considerable more box-office ring about it than "Sunrise." In the making for several months one can easily see that Fox has permitted the director to go the limit toward bringing forth a rich production. And it stands out under the closest scrutiny as a picture finely produced, directed and photographed—with the acting registering high class all the way.

It is a graphic story laid against a circus atmosphere—and presents two romances. The major romance develops conflict as a vamp endeavors to lure the chief male acrobat from his fair partner. The best points are the circus scenes—with Murnau effecting a gorgeous shot of the auditorium with its circeal rows, the trapezes high in the air—and the safety net. Murnau has also brought out an appealing human touch in his sympathetic treatment. And his story builds slowly (almost too slowly at the start) and dramatically.

The introductory scenes show a clown rescuing two little sisters and brothers from a cruel circus owner. He intends to train them to be acrobats and watches over them with the tenderness of a mother and the protection of a father. Eventually they grow up to be known as the 4 Devils.

The acting in the hands of Mary Duncan as the vamp is splendid. She may be rather old-fashioned in her technique, but that's just what the part calls for—old-fashioned technique. Janet Gaynor hasn't the emotional flair here because the part didn't allow it, but she is always worth watching in any picture. The men did well—especially Farrell MacDonald, Wesley Lake and Charles Morton.

In all here is a real picture, one that doesn't lose its rhythm—one which is highly excellent in its production—and which is assured of success.

Drawing Power: Feature title and play up cast and director and it will get over. For best houses everywhere. Exploitation Angles: Feature director who makes another great picture to compare with "Sunrise." Feature players and bill as human story of the circus. Put on prologue in keeping with plot, etc.

THEME: Drama of four acrobats reared by clown—with vampire determined to break up romance with boy and girl members of quartette.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Length, 10 reels. Released, October, 1928. Cast: Mary Duncan, Charles Morton, Barry Norton, Janet Gaynor, Nancy Drexel, Farrell MacDonald, Wesley Lake, Anders Randolph, Claire McDowell, Philippe De Lacy, Dawn O'Day, Michael Visaroff. Director, F. W. Murnau.

"Come to Papa"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

AS Ole, a Swedish immigrant aboard a steamer making its way across the Atlantic, "Big Boy," Educational's gifted young star, is seen in what is easily one of his best comedies to date. The child's shy and sweet personality is strongly set forth. Coupled with him in many of the scenes is Lorraine Rivero, a delightful little fixture of the "Big Boy" comedies.

Ole is a restless little cut-up on board, playing merry pranks and getting into hot water with one of the ship's officers.

The comedy is fast and there are but few slack moments. The kid gets a few seconds in the beginning of the picture to give a snatch of pathos as they show him bidding goodbye to his fond parent. He demonstrates his talent for deeply human and wistful parts. The little fellow's flare for comedy is also seen to excellent advantage throughout.

Charles Lamont maneuvered with the megaphone.

"Muscle Marvels"

(Pathe—One Reel)

MUSCLES—the smooth, rhythmic muscles of the dancer, the bulging knotty muscles of the strong man, the muscular equipment of the acrobat—the muscles that are developed by different sports form the subject matter of this very interesting Grantland Rice Sportlight. It is easily one of the best of the newer Sportlights. Never is the high pitch of interest let down and a number of attractive titles flash their way in between the pictures.

These Sportlights, it must not be forgotten, are easily one of the best of the short subjects now confronting the public. They have an outstanding individuality and always something to tell.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Smith Catalina Rowboat Race"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

LITTLE Mary Ann Jackson, just about the smallest comedienne on the screen, is right in the midst of the fun in this new Mack Sennett production. Though she is only a wee girl she has genuine ability for pantomime. And her sense of humor is much more subtle and intelligent than many a grown-up's. This child, in our opinion, is really the humor of the Smith Family series. Take her away and these comedies would be hard hit.

Why emphasize Mary Ann? Because lots of stuff in this laugh vehicle reflects the child's ability. For the most part, the cut-ups of Smith are pretty flat. A hefty mama lends him considerable support in the boat race scenes. But the gags supplied Mr. McKee do not scintillate, either. They are of the average sort.

Perhaps the best part of the comedy is its beginning which portrays a domestic squabble in the Smiths' lives. The race which follows after is all slapstick, the characters getting all wet in the Pacific.

"Making Whoopee"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

HAROLD GOODWIN, who has been playing featured roles in the bigger productions for some time, stars in his first two-reeler for Educational in a comedy which has the alluring Estelle Bradley opposite and Ella McKenzie and Richard R. Neill in supporting roles. Charles Lamont directed and William Hyer cameraed it.

It is a fairly amusing comedy in which everything keeps again until the fadeout. There is not so much spontaneous and original humor but there is enough fun to make the onlooker happy.

Harold takes the part of a gob, who purloins his superior officer's suit in order to show off before a pretty waitress. He takes her to an amusement park and the officer follows them dressed in Harold's uniform. Things get pretty hot for the guilty sailor boy and he has further difficulties in getting rid of a fat feminine friend who has a crush on him.

"The Cross Country Bunion Race"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

SID SAYLOR, portrayer of dumb George in the screen adaptations of the George McManus cartoons, "Let George Do It," has a fairly enjoyable laugh offering in this two-reeler, which was directed by Gus Meins.

George and a fellow acrobat get into trouble with their neighbors and the judge reprimands them severely and tells them that they can stay out of jail only on the condition that they pay the neighbors the cost of the damages. George's friend drafts him to enter a cross country race in order to win the prize money and thus pay off their debts.

George enters the race but is far more concerned in snatching some sleep than in pounding over the hot pavement. His persistent friend rouses him into action and, after a struggle during which they are chased by a bear, George wins the race.

Saylor has a lot of ability, but he is not given so very many gags with which to work.

"Panicky Pancakes"

(Universal—One Reel)

THIS is a highly successful cartoon effort and easily one of Oswald's best. Containing some bright, sparkling gags, it is a lively little affair. The merry mice rob the cash register of Oswald's concession and when he gives chase they treat him with impudence. He chases them up hill and down dale, and things grow merry as the chase grows long. The gags that the comedy constructors have laid along the route of the chase are strongly effective.

A good cartoon.—RAYMOND GANLY.

A theatre to seat about 500 persons and to have Vitaphone and Movietone equipment will be built at Hollywood Station, Memphis, Tenn., by the Hanover Development Company, Joseph Hanover, president.

Cincinnati

PERSISTENT rumors are current in Cincinnati that a syndicate of New York and Chicago capitalists plan to erect a 40-story motion picture and hotel building on East Fifth street at cost of $7,000,000. Harry Linch, prominent in local real estate circles, is responsible for the statement that the building will occupy a site of 175 by 406 feet, although Robert A. Taft, noted Cincinnati attorney, repeated to be legal counsel for the syndicate, contends that there is nothing to the report.

Edwin Buechfeuer, house superintendent of Lyric Theatre here, caught and turned over to police a negro who had forced three porters into the manager's office.

Isaac Libson and Ben Heidingsfeld, Cincinnati, both prominently identified with the Keith-Albee-Orpheum interests, are in New York.

The Gem Theatre, East Liverpool, Ohio, formerly owned and operated by Mrs. Anna Fultz, has been purchased by George M. Aten.

Joseph H. Solomon, theatre operator, is reported to have leased the Case Block, Norwalk, Ohio, where he will raze the building in order to erect a theatre at cost of $175,000.

The Masonic bodies at Norwalk have voted for a new temple, which will be combined with a motion picture house.

Herbert L. Binder and James T. Herbert, exhibitors at Xenia, Ohio, were recently indicted by the grand jury for operating their theatres on Sunday.

Exhibitors at Martins Ferry, O., will again try to give Sunday showings, taking their precedent from refusal of Belmont County grand jury to indict them when 39 cases of Sunday violations were recently brought up for hearing.

Noah Schechter, Cincinnati, has been named editor of the Palace Review, house organ of the Palace Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.

Chifos Bros., Middletown, Ohio, have appointed Wm. F. Bennett, Dayton, Ohio, as architect for new $350,000 Strand Theatre, to be erected on Central avenue, Middletown.

Pinkston; The Pastime Theatre in Roan Mountain, Tenn., is now owned by U. L. Tribett; and The Royal Theatre in Raleigh, N. C., has been taken over by the Royal Investment Company.

The Arbitration Board met on Monday, October 1 and the exhibitor members of the Board hearing cases of members of the North Carolina Theatre Owners Association were Charles Picquet of the Carolina Theatre in Pinchurst, N. C.; W. T. Gray of the Loray Theatre, Gastonia, N. C., and Francis White of the Capitol Theatre in Asheville, N. C. Exhibitor members of the second Arbitration Board hearing non-member cases were Sam Craver of the Rex Theatre in Charlotte, N. C.; Otto Haas of the Ottoway Theatre in Charlotte, and George Hughes of the Columbia Theatre in Albemarle, N. C.

The entire film industry was grieved to learn of the death of C. W. Drace, owner of the Drace and Grand Theatres in Greer.

J. E. Webb announced last week that his new theatre at Gastonia, N. C. would open about November 1.

The Publix-Saenger Broadway Theatre in Fayetteville, N. C., which has been closed during the summer months, opened on October 1.

The Victory Theatre in Salisbury, N. C., owned by the Piedmont Amusement Company of Winston-Salem, N. C., and which has been closed since a fire in the early spring, has reopened.

On or about October 18, William C. McIntire, Sr., will open a new motion picture theatre, the Rose, at North Wilkesbarre, N. C. The house will seat 500.

Alabama

Among out-of-town exhibitors visiting Birmingham the past week were Colonel Thomas E. Orr, of Amusement Enterprises, Inc., of Albertville, Ala., and his partner, C. W. Woodall, of Guntersville; Jack Brown, manager of the Liberty, Attalla; John M. Miller, of Cordova; Glenn Crouch, of Troy; T. E. Watson, of Montevallo and H. G. Steely, of Siluria.

Louis J. Finske, assistant manager of the local Alabama has been transferred to Kansas City, Mo., where he will be manager of the Publix's Royal Theatre.

Willard C. Patterson, Publix district supervisor, visited Birmingham the past week, and conferred with Sidney Dannenberg and Bolivar C. Hyde.

Paul C. Bryan, manager of Fox's Atlanta branch, visited exhibitors in the Magic City the past week. Among other film representatives in Birmingham the past week were W. B. Butler, of M-G-M; W. C. Whitlock, of Paramount; George Blethen, of Liberty-Specialty; Edmund Reid of Tiffany-Stahl; Carl Moek, of Educational, and O. K. Bourgeois, of Pathe.

With articles of incorporation filed the past week, the Marvin Wise Theatres, Inc., comes into being, with Mrs. Marvin Wise as president and treasurer; Frank V. Merritt, vice-president and general manager, and L. Speigler as secretary. Further expansion of this circuit is now anticipated.

The Frances Theatre, Centerville, Ala., formerly operated by W. E. Nicholson, has been purchased by J. P. Nix. The Rose and Crystal theatres at Dublin, Ga., have been sold to Messrs. J. W. Peck and F. Wheeler Smith, who operate the First National and American Theatres at Sylacauga, Ala. The Ritz, a colored theatre formerly operated by Adams and Windham, in Montgomery, Ala., has been acquired by Bromberg and Creswell, who also operate the Dixie in Birmingham. The trend to chain operation still advances in Alabama. The Al-Dun Theatre in West Point, Ga., has been sold by L. J. Duncan to J. M. Etherbridge.

Louisville

The peak of a long career which began sixteen years ago, when George Sine was an usher at the Mary Anderson Theatre, Louisville, was reached last Saturday, when Fred Dolle, president and general manager of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company announced that Mr. Sine has been made his assistant.

H. A. Rohs of the Rohs Theatre, Cynthiana, Ky., and wife, have returned from a motor trip.

S. Haselden of the Grand Theatre, Lancaster, Ky., was a visitor in Danville last week.

The Lyric Theatre, Oakdale, Tenn., henceforth will operate but one day each week—Saturday.

J. M. Alper and his brother, who were formerly connected with Independent Theatres, Inc., are planning to build a large theatre on Main Street in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Florida

Anthony Juran took over the lease of the Italian Theatres, Ybor City, last Monday. He closed the house and put in a force of men to give it a real renovation, then hopped a train for Atlanta, booked his attractions and was back in Ybor in time to re-open Saturday. Tony is the pioneer of Tampa showmen. He has been operating movie houses here off and on, mostly on, since 1910.

George Pack, manager of the Victory, Tampa, won first place, and with it an award of $250., in the "Coming Thru" campaign.

It was announced last week that the new Park theatre, in the Hyde Park section of Tampa, would be ready and opened on the 1st of November. A feature of the new house will be the large balcony with special ventilation so as to permit smoking.

The friends of the Sunday movie movement in Lakeland, presented petitions to the City Commissioners for an election on the subject and it was supposed the election would be called and be voted on Nov. 6th with the general election. To call such an election it was necessary to have the signatures of 600 qualified electors, and the petitions carried 625 names, but after a careful check of the names, it was announced that but 325 of the names were qualified voters, and so now it will be impossible to get the required names in time for the November election, but the names will be secured, say the sponsors, and the election called at a later date.

Kansas City

LABOR difficulties are beginning to be cleared away in Kansas City. Union employees have returned to work at the Neptune and New Centre Theatres, suburban houses operated by Charles and Lee Vaughn. When a difficulty arose regarding the musicians the operators walked out at both houses, which are controlled by the same interests. Following a settlement of the difficulty with the musicians, details of which were not made public, the operators resumed their duties.

An illustration of how rumors sometimes lead to a "near fact" was provided along Kansas City's film row the other day. It was said that A. F. "Peck" Baker, manager of the Electric theatre, Kansas City, Kas., intended to enter the jewelry business. However, when the facts were brought to light, it was learned that "Peck" had been winning so many trinkets from punchboards recently that he had casually remarked he would go into the jewelry business and some one took him seriously.

Several hundred dollars were collected at the Pantages theatre, Kansas City, for storm victims in Florida, by Louie Charninsky, manager.

Among the out-of-town visitors in the Kansas City market last week were: G. L. Hooper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kas.; Stanley Chambers and L. M. Miller of the Miller Theatres, Wichita, Kas.; Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo., and C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kan.

Several new theatres have opened their doors in the Kansas City territory in the last few days. Many changes in ownership also have occurred. The Missouri theatre, Columbia, Mo., of which J. Dozier is manager, opened Friday (Oct. 5). The house was designed by Boller Bros., of Kansas City. The Auditorium theatre, Clinton, Mo., has been purchased by Lee Jones, owner of the Lee theatre in that town. The Electric theatre, Lawson, Mo., has been re-opened by F. Murphy.

The Tokio theatre, Moorehouse, Mo., has been re-opened under the management of W. A. Collins.

The Lone Star Theatre, Vermillion, Kas., is being remodeled, while the Dreamland at Herington, Kas., has been re-opened, as has the Orpheum, Lawrence, Kas., owned by Glenn Dickinson, which has been closed for about one year. The New Palace, one of the finest negro theatres in Kansas, has opened at Topeka, Kas.

The new Plaza Theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, was scheduled to open October 9.

One-half interest in the Rex theatre, Gilman City, Mo., has been purchased by H. F. Poor.

New State, Hanover, Pa., Formally Dedicated

Public officials took prominent parts in the formal dedication of the new State Theatre in Hanover, York County, Pa., on the night of September 21. The house was erected at a cost of $250,000 by the Appell Amusement Enterprises, of York, in association with Fred C. Bitner, of Hanover, who is the local manager. Both Mr. Bitner and Louis J. Appell, the latter head of the Appell chain, took conspicuous parts in the ceremonies. Addresses were made by Chester A. Eckbert, borough manager of Hanover; Chief Burgess Slagle, and E. A. Hirschman, the latter being secretary of the New York Chamber of Commerce, who made the principal speech.

The State is a beautiful theatre, of fire-proof construction. The plans were drawn by Gemmill and Billmeyer, and the building was done by O. H. Hostetter. The decorations were by the Brounet Studios, of New York City. The general color scheme of the interior is light buff and gold. The dome is in blue with silver stripping. Wrought iron brackets hold the wall lights. A tiled fountain sparkles in the rear of the auditorium.

Uniforms Play Important Part in Impressing Fans

All wide-awake showmen are keenly alive to the fact that distinctive and handsome uniforms are an important part and that the appearance of the theatre staff that comes into contact with the public can make or mar the whole impression," is the belief expressed by E. C. Koempel, director of the Browning, King and Company, manufacturers of uniforms. He is in charge of the entire uniform department.

Several of the newest theatres for which uniforms have recently been completed by Browning, King and Co. include Fox's in Brooklyn, Fox's in Detroit and the new Keith-Albee in New York.

Hollywood Continued

Going to Europe

Ludwig Berger, directing Emil Jannings in "Sins of the Fathers," at Paramount, will sail for Europe October 13. Paramount has granted the German director a four months' leave of absence to make a picture that he had contracted for before signing with the American company.

Pathe Signs Darling

While two prominent producers were negotiating for the services of one of film-land's most prolific writers, production chief Paul Bern succeeded in signing Scott Darling on the dotted line to take up work immediately at Pathe-DeMille Studios. Darling's first assignment will be "Noisy Neighbors."

Off for Europe Soon

Jean Hersholt's popularity as one of the most versatile character stars of the screen, has earned him a trip abroad, and may afford him a visit to his native Denmark. However, Jean will first play the leading role in "The Braggart," a story by Ben Kuttler, written especially for the Universal star.

Mr. Julian

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed Rupert Julian to direct its first big mystery thriller with sound effects and dialogue.

Beaudine, Newmeyer and Taurog

From the office of Sol Wurtzel, production manager for Fox Films, comes the announcement that Directors William Beaudine, Fred Newmeyer and Norman Taurog have signed Fox contracts.

Back Home Again

Noah Beery has returned to "the old homestead," where he is again working in the Paramount picture "Four Feathers," the Cooper-Schoedsack production from A. E. W. Mason's noted novel.

Down in Mexico

Stephen Roberts and Charles Lamont, two of Educational Pictures comedy directors, are sojourning in Mexico.

And Fox Gets Behn

Harry Behn has been signed by Fox to write "White Silence," which Charles Klein will direct. Behn just completed "Frozen North," a 100 per cent talking picture at Warner Bros.

Also a Dancer

Belle Bennett is finding her early theatrical training very useful in her motion picture career. At the present she is using her dance training in the title role of "The Queen of the Burlesque."

Shuts Off the Motor

Reginald Denny, Universal's comedy star, has returned from a motor tour of Northern California, and is preparing to begin work in "Clear the Deck," which Joseph Henabery will direct.

Starting "Wicked Angel"

One of Columbia's forthcoming pictures to be started soon is "The Wicked Angel," story by Gertrude Atherton, to be adapted immediately by Perry S. Nathan. Mark Sandrich will handle the directorial reins.

—as in so many other high grade Motion Picture Houses—the Kilgen Wonder Organ gives realistic background to the play, and entertains great audiences with its matchless music . . . Here, as everywhere else, the public has shown its desire to see the artist perform, as well as to hear the music.

In choosing the organ for your theatre, remember this: musical expression is one thing; permanence of physical and musical perfection, another. Kilgen Organs have them both.

UNIT Organ

Here, in another of America's most beautiful theatres, a Robert Morton has been installed as a permanent music feature.

Audiences today are far more critical than ever before. Not only good music, but the best and most appropriate obtainable is absolutely essential to successful theatre operation.

In magnitude, variety, resources and beauty of tone color, the Robert Morton Unit Organ excels any musical instrument ever produced. It is the supreme musical achievement for the motion picture theatre. Its music is real, genuine, intensifying every pictured scene, enhancing its beauty and transferring the world of make-believe into a highly bewitching land of romance.

¶ You play plenty of good pictures that get only a passing nod from the public. Comes "THE WEDDING MARCH" and does S. R. O. Why?

¶ The whole town says, "'THE WEDDING MARCH'? We must see that one!" The radio is deserted, the Blanks' bridge party is a flop—everybody is jamming your theatre to see "THE WEDDING MARCH." ¶ What showman is silly enough to pass up a "natural" like that? What showman is so lacking in showmanship that he doesn't grab important product like "WINGS" and "THE PATRIOT" and "DOCKS OF NEW YORK" and "THE FLEETS IN"? ¶ You find some good pictures in every company's line-up; you find important pictures in large quantity only in PARAMOUNT'S!

BRISTOLPHONE

ASHER, SMALL and ROGERS
announce to the trade:

After making a thorough examination of all synchronizing devices, we have come to the conclusion that Bristolphone is without doubt the most desirable. For human quality of dialogue, for proper volume and tonal effects, we believe it is the peer of all present devices. When you add to this its unique re-synchronizing feature which makes it possible, in case of accident, to immediately re-synchronize the picture, you have a system that achieves the peak of perfection.

For these reasons, it is a pleasure to announce that we have formed a corporation with Budd Rogers and Sam Sax of Gotham Productions, to distribute and service the Bristolphone machines, and to produce features and short subjects synchronized with the Bristolphone disc system.

ASHER, SMALL AND ROGERS

BRISTOL

PHONE

IN associating ourselves with Asher, Small and Rogers, we feel that we have reached a point of development in motion picture activities, commensurate with the great advent of sound on the screen. The enviable record of Asher, Small and Rogers, collectively and individually, as producers of outstanding productions such as "McFadden's Flats," "Cohens and Kellys," "The Gorilla," "Classified," "Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath," "Shepherd of the Hills," and others, is a substantial part of the industry's box-office history.

Their interest in the distribution and servicing of the Bristolphone system is the finest endorsement that could be made for this device. The participation of this enterprising and successful firm of producers in the making of features and short subjects with sound and dialogue, is an assurance of results that will meet the most critical needs of the box-office results. We see in this association, a most complimentary confirmation of all we had hoped for in Bristolphone.

"By All Means Don't Miss - The Man Who Laughs"

Says Rob Reel in the CHICAGO EXAMINER.

By All Means Don't Miss "The Man Who Laughs"

"THE MAN WHO LAUGHS" a Universal picture. Presented at the Roosevelt. From the novel by Victor Hugo. Directed by Paul Leni.

BY ROB REEL.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, may be small in stature, but his ambition to bring the classics within the reach of the masses of the movie public makes him tower above the ordinary run of film magnates.

Having already presented "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," Laemmle has again risked hundreds of thousands of dollars in a Hugo production, this time a picturization of the novel of seventeenth century England. "The Man Who Laughs."

Being from an ennobling piece of literature, there is that loftiness about the "The Man Who Laughs" as it unrolls at the Roosevelt. Being enacted by a splendid cast and directed in spirited fashion, it is enthralling as an entertainment.

Olga Baclanova.

DIRECTED BY LENI.

Most of you are probably familiar with the tale of Gwynplaine, the clown with the distorted mouth, who loved Dea, the little blind girl. Those of you who have not read the story will want to do so after you see this production.

Paul Leni, the director whose "Cat and Canary" you may possibly remember, begins his tale during the time of James II, and shows the evil monarch's revenge on one of his rebellious noblemen, Milord Clan Charles. Not content with sending the You'll find little Mary Philbin wearing a blond wig, in the role of the blind girl, and looking for all the world like Mary Pickford in the days when she won her greatest popularity. The little Philbin has a most difficult role, but she handles it remarkably well. Olga Baclanova plays the hoyden and moronic Duchess Josiana, and her revels with the rowdys at the Southwick fair, as well as with other royal ones in her boudoir, are daringly and disgustingly done.

BACLANOVA WICKED AGAIN.

Stuart Holmes, Cesare Gravina, Josephine Crowell, Sam DeGrasse and Brandon Hurst are others who round out the excellent cast, and then, of course, there is Conrad Veidt as L'homme himself. Veidt is a marvelous actor, and does a splendid piece of work.

Editorial Highlights

Comment on Important Developments

By William A. Johnston

THE number of pictures which are not making any stir at the box office is pretty big. . . . Productions which, a few years ago, would have registered decisively don't click in 1928. . . . The reason? Well, there are several reasons. . . . But if you are looking for only one, you'll find it under the heading "Sound." . . . But not any kind of sound. . . . Oh, no. The public already knows what it wants along this line. . . .

In proof we cite the amazing record now being made by "The Singing Fool." This record, by the way, comes to us from our correspondents in key cities. . . . It is independent of any and all claims that may be made for the film by interested parties. . . . Listen to this: In Pittsburgh, Milwaukee, Seattle, New Orleans, Indianapolis, Fort Dodge, Iowa; Buffalo, Syracuse, Elmira, Albany and Troy, N. Y.; Baltimore, Minneapolis, and Salt Lake City, a single week's reports show that the Jolson opus is a record-shatterer. . . . The story of this box office sensation will be found in detail in "Key City Reports." . . .

Another attraction which is writing new box office history at the moment is "Wings." . . . We publish, in the same department, reports from half a dozen or more "keys," which testify to the great business being done by this picture. . . .

From these two instances we draw a lesson or two. . . . Perhaps it is best expressed in the observations made to us by Arthur S. Kane, who arrived in New York the other day, with first hand, first class facts about the box offices from Kansas City to Dallas. . . .

He pointed out that the public is always several jumps ahead of mediocrity and false promises. . . . Which means, of course, that all superstition to the contrary notwithstanding, the fine show-picture gets the public's emphatic approval. . . . And the outstanding attractions, like "The Singing Fool" and "Wings" get the big money. . . . Mr. Kane, talking specifically about the sound revolution, said that talkie features and talkie news reels are the high spots in the great sound movie craze. . . . But he warns that the stuff must be good. . . . He also warns against shortsighted economy in production in general. . . . It doesn't pay; in fact, it's fatal in the show business. . . .

The Hagerstown incident, as it will probably be known in screen history, looms big in importance. . . . It brings forward interchangeability as a fact. . . . There are many angles to be cleared up, and of these we will speak when, if and as they arise. . . . But the point is that a picture synchronized by one process is reproduced by another device without difficulty technically. . . . Still, it would be rash, on the part of exhibitors in general, to assume yet that this solves all the points in the much-mooted interchangeability problem. . . . Let's wait and see whether there will be a sequel, legal or otherwise, to the incident. . . .

Hagerstown Showing Proves Discs Interchangeable

Western Electric Executives Absent from Headquarters, Action Is Waited Upon Their Return

THAT disc sound records are interchangeable as between the Western Electric device and Bristolphone, has been proven at the Academy of Music picture house at Hagerstown, Md., where a four day showing of First National's "Lilac Time," synchronized by the Western Electric device, was successful on Bristolphone equipment. Just what the reaction will be remains to be seen, but the fact remains that the discs are interchangeable, and quite satisfactorily so, according to Alan Bachrach, manager of the Academy.

A. Julian Brylawski, prominent Washington exhibitor, is the owner of the Academy and he booked only the silent version of the picture. After booking it he was successful in getting the first installation of Bristolphone equipment and with the arrival of the print of the picture he ordered the records from First National's exchange at Washington, D. C. The delivery was made, according to Manager Bachrach, without question.

Executives Absent

Following the first showing of the picture the story was published and Western Electric and First National executives were sought for a statement. It was thought that Western Electric would object to this interchanging of records, as it is said to be a part of their contract with distributors that such interchangeability was not permissible. However, all executives of the electrical company with authority to comment officially were reported out of town. First National executives also remained silent.

That the showing of "Lilac Time" on Bristolphone has not gone unnoticed by these executives, however, and that action is being taken regarding it, is evidenced by the fact that a subsequent showing of "The Whip" in the same house with Western Electric sound, was cancelled. The picture was to have been shown Thursday and Friday of this week but Manager Bachrach was informed that the sound discs would not be available.

Brylawski in Toronto

Mr. Brylawski was seen by a MOTION PICTURE News representative at the M.P.T.O.A. convention in Toronto. He said he had the opinion of several executives of companies interested in sound pictures that there would be no objection to interchanging sound records provided a satisfactory showing was made. They only desired assurance that the feature and other similar films would have proper projection and correct sound treatment, so that the reputation of the picture would not be injured.

Mr. Brylawski, who retired as an M. P. T. O. director at the present session after serving eight years declared that the presentation of "Lilac Time" as a sound feature at Hagerstown with Bristolphone equipment had worked perfectly and the result had been entirely satisfactory as well as interesting. He has been deluged with queries regarding the showing ever since his arrival in Toronto.

W. E. Non-Committal

Western Electric in the past has steadfastly refused to comment on the interchangeability question. They have contended that so far as they were officially concerned they were the only company making installations and that no action or statement was necessary until such time as some other company was actually making installations. At the same time RCA has continuously announced that their film records were interchangeable with those of the Western Electric system.

J. E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products Company, subsidiary of the Western Electric Company, which handles the sound pictures, was reported at headquarters as being in Chicago and not available for a statement. It was said he was registered at one of his clubs. He will not be back in New York before the end of the week.

Ned Depinet, sales manager of First National said he knew nothing of the showing of the picture at Hagerstown with sound accompaniment and that he had received no advices from the company exchange at Washington. Under the circumstances he said he had no comment to make on the matter.

Secrecy Over "Whip"

There is considerable secrecy regarding the cancelling of the sound showing of "The Whip" at the Hagerstown Academy. Asked over the telephone from New York as to who was responsible for it, Manager Bachrach of the Academy said he did not know, that he had merely been informed that the sound discs would not be available and that therefore he would show only the silent version of the picture. It is evident that the matter is in for some sort of adjustment which will probably be forthcoming with the return of the Western Electric executives.

Turns Back Houses to Publix

West Coast Complies With Move Suggested by Department of Justice; Policy Not a General One

WEST COAST theatres of Publix are to be turned back to Publix by West Coast Theatres at the request of the Attorney General's office in Washington. They were turned over to Publix some time ago and the deal is now to be dissolved because that condition will be more satisfactory to the Government.

Details of the dissolution have not yet been worked out, but Harold B. Franklin, president and general manager of West Coast, will come to New York for that purpose about November 1st. The Government merely suggested the undoing of the pool and the arrangement was amicably made. Publix and West Coast considered it desirable to comply with the Government requests, according to Franklin, who says the relationship between the companies is most amiable and that they believe the dissolution the constructive thing to do.

The houses effected in the deal include those in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, Portland and Seattle. Loew houses, Loew's State at Los Angeles and the Warfield in San Francisco are not effected by the dissolution decision.

According to advices from Washington this is not to be the general policy of the Government on pools. No general policy has been laid down by the Attorney General's office in making the suggestion that Publix and West Coast dissolve.

The department, it is said, has no intention of laying down any hard and fast rules in connection with pools, but each of the several cases that have received attention from the Attorney General's office is considered on its own merits.

Officials of the Government are reluctant to discuss requests of the kind made of Publix and West Coast. The policy is to maintain the confidence of those with whom they deal in all cases where legal proceedings are not involved.

The department's stand in the West Coast situation was made clear to officials of West Coast and Publix and evidently it was considered the wise thing to do to comply with the request rather than to become involved in other proceedings.

Screen Players Charge Legits With High Hat and "Whispering"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 15.—Bitter professional jealousies are developing in several West Coast studios between screen players and recruits from the legitimate stage.

Newcomers, recently imported from the New York stage, are said to regard even the better known screen celebrities with an attitude of superiority. This is fast proving intolerable to the silent picture fraternity. Ant-arctic glances, snubs and deliberate cuts on the sets and 'round the studios are a daily occurrence between representatives of the two factions. A number of stage players, without screen experience, are reported to be "whispering" the fact that they and others of their fraternity were brought here because the screen has reached a point where real acting is vital to its future, and that the Hollywood regulars are not equal to audience demands in this respect.

Countering this is the answer of experienced screen players to the effect that the newcomers from the stage may have good speaking voices but that their camera angles are not "right angles." Cooler heads among the professionals are known to have stopped several threatened outbreaks between representatives of the two branches of the acting fraternity, endeavoring to impress upon both that each has something to learn from the other.

Directors handling casts composed of stage and screen players are having difficulties preventing them from employing many of the tricks of their respective "trades" on one another.

Sam Harris Cup Award

Trade Paper Editors Now Selecting Person Who Has Proven Worthy of Goodwill Trophy

SOMEONE in the motion picture industry who, during the past year has exemplified the spirit of goodwill and cooperation between the public and the film companies of Great Britain and the United States, will soon be announced by a committee of film trade paper editors as the winner of the Sam Harris Cup which is to be presented at a dinner in New York in November. Mr. Harris, who is editor of the English trade papers, "Today's Cinema" and "Cinema News Weekly," will arrive shortly in New York for the specific purpose of making the award personally.

The dinner and the ceremony of presentation will be conducted under the auspices of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers.

The A. M. P. A. believes that one of the most important factors in the internationalization of the motion picture are such awards as Mr. Harris', which is helping materially in making steadfast the harmony between the film industries of the United States and of Great Britain.

Composing the A. M. P. A. Harris Cup Committee are: Edward L. Klein, chairman; George Harvey, president of the A. M. P. A.; P. A. Parsons, Bruce Gallup, Maurice Kann, Paul Benjamin and Charles Barrell.

Hollywood Speculating on Fitzmaurice Status

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, October 15.—Hollywood is speculating about the future status of George Fitzmaurice with the First National-Warner Brothers deal having been completed. Fitzmaurice, who gets $75,000 per picture, (no, this does not include negative costs), has one more production for First National under his contract. This will be "The Man and the Moment," an Elinor Glyn story starring Billie Dove.

Fitzmaurice was thought to be in a slump until "The Barker" was completed. First National executives, and now those of the Warners who have seen it, believe they have one of the best box-office smashes for the coming year. Fitzmaurice followed up "The Barker" with "Lilac Time," which has been released and is making money.

The Warners have never paid a director on weekly salary, over $1,750. The only exception was Ernst Lubitsch, who was reported to be getting a maximum of $50,000 per picture for them. If the Warners decided to renew with Fitzmaurice at the terms of $75,000 per production, they will be inaugurating a new era of salaries for themselves and it may indicate a desire to engage higher priced talent for the better class product in the future.

"Singing Fool's" Big Gross in Hollywood

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 17.—"The Singing Fool" has chalked up the remarkable gross of $68,700 in its first ten days' at the Warners Theatre here.

The first week, ending last Sunday, the gross stood at $40,000. Four shows are given daily, the scale being: matinees, 50c; evenings, 65c. The previous house record was $35,000 with "The Lights of New York." Over 60,000 people were handled the first week of "The Singing Fool," and the gross was only $2,000 under the Winter Garden figure in New York at $3.30 top.

The gross for this week, up to Wednesday night, stands at $18,700.

M. P. T. O. A. Convention Meets

600 Exhibitors from All Parts of the U. S. and Canada Gather In Ninth Annual Session at Toronto

By W. M. GLADISH

Canadian Correspondent, Motion Picture News

TORONTO, October 18.—Intense interest was displayed by the 600 delegates to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America convention at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, representing practically every state in the Union and the provinces of Eastern Canada in the discussion of numerous problems and menaces.

Sound pictures were the talk of the convention to a considerable extent. Rudolph Muehling, electrical engineer of Public Theatres, Inc., gave a very practical talk, declaring that sound pictures could either be developed to tremendous commercial returns or decline to mediocre returns, according to the efficiency of merchandising on the part of the exhibitor. The human element was important. M. A. Lightman, of El Dorado, Arkansas, declared sound pictures meant more to exhibitors on "Main Street" than to any other because they would bring the voice of great people to the small town. There was a menace, however, in that silent films might be neglected.

Labor Dept. Created

"There is no chance in the world of a monopoly in sound pictures," declared Fred. Desberg, of Cleveland, Ohio, another scheduled speaker. "There would always be millions of patrons for silent pictures," he said. Strong opposition to censorship in any form was voiced by President R. F. Woodhull. He besought exhibitors to fight for the freedom of the screen. He advocated the establishment of a department of Labor within the association to encourage harmony between exhibitors and employees and this recommendation was adopted later when a resolution providing for such a department was quickly accepted.

Mr. Woodhull condemned the music tax and, in connection with sound pictures, declared that the cost of installations should be reduced. A. J. Brylawski, of Washington, D. C., warned the delegates to be ready to do battle when the Brookhart Bill and other legislation came before Congress. Federal control of the whole moving picture industry in the United States would be attempted within the next 12 months. The move of the Lords Day Alliance, backed by a fund of $700,000, to secure the banning of Sunday shows had been blocked for the time being. Incidentally, when Mr. Brylawski was nominated with others to the new national board of directors, he declined to run, and his name was withdrawn.

Condemns Brookhart Bill

T. D. Goldberg, of Baltimore, delivered an impassioned speech from the floor of the convention in which he declared that the Brookhart and Hudson Bills "will drive us out of business." These measures were a serious menace to every independent exhibitor and the proposed legislation affected the producer distributor organizations having theatres of their own. A resolution

Convention Unanimously Condemns Any Government Interference

TORONTO, October 18.—The M. P. T. O. A. convention unanimously adopted a resolution that "utterly and earnestly condemned attempts to harass by government interference the production, distribution or exhibition of motion pictures in the United States."

The resolution, which is a condemnation of the Brookhart Bill, said that motion pictures should be kept free from political manipulations if the principles of free government were to be maintained.

Another important development was the launching of a movement by Colonel John A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada, for the withdrawal of Canada from the Berne Copyright Convention. He urged the United States and Canada to establish a separate convention for the control of all copyrights on this continent. His address on the music tax thrilled the M. P. T. O. A. convention. Canadian exhibitors would be faced with a music tax if the appeal of the Canadian Copyright Society before the Privy Council in London resulted in reversing the judgment of Canadian courts, permitting the Famous Players Canadian Corporation to play British compositions without payment of royalty.

Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Hays organization, delivered an address in which he declared that through the medium of motion pictures every international boundary would eventually become as free of fortresses as that between the United States and Canada. Arbitration, he declared, had served all branches of the motion picture industry for four and one-quarter per cent on the annual turnover.

The speakers at the brilliant banquet included C. C. Pettijohn, W. B. Finlayson, Ontario cabinet minister; N. L. Nathanson, ex-governor Milliken, J. L. Papenaude, of Montreal; Rev. Murdock McLean, of Pinehurst, N. C.; R. F. Woodhull and Alderman W. A. Summerville, of Toronto, as chairman.

urging that all sex-hygiene pictures should be outlawed was unanimously adopted, after such productions had been soundly condemned by President Woodhull.

The report of the Committee on Constitutional Methods, read by Secretary M. J. O'Toole, contained amendments which provided that all business of the association be transacted at conventions of the association and outlined the executive powers of the national board of 10 directors, and the duties of the president and secretary. These were adopted without discussion. A matter of interest was that when the list of accredited delegates was read by Secretary O'Toole, the names of those associated with allied states were not mentioned.

The many Ontario delegates present held a conference at which it was decided to ask the Ontario government for the abolishment of the whole provincial amusement ticket tax now collected on admissions of higher than 25 cents.

Directors nominated were: Michael E. Comerford, Pennsylvania; Harold Franklin, California; Joseph W. Walsh, Connecticut; Jack Miller, Chicago; Fred Wehrenberg, St. Louis; David Cohen, Binghamton; H. M. Crandall, Washington, D. C.; Fred. Desberg, Cleveland; Colvin Brown, New York; Samuel Dembow, New York; and Fred J. Dolle, Louisville. Important topics were discussed by outstanding men. George W. Harvey, president of the Association of Motion Picture Advertisers, spoke on "exploitation"; John Ebersson, Chicago, on "How to Build and Equip a Theatre"; W. Grove Smith, of Ottawa, on "The Safe Theatre" and others. L. M. Sagal, of New Haven, presented an excellent financial report.

Woodhull's Speech

In his address on the first day of the convention, President Woodhull took up a number of important topics.

He said, in part:

"It is well that we foregather at this particular time and at this particular place as our industry is now faced with many new problems that command our consideration and many old ones yet to be solved.

"The past year and a half has marked an era of great activity in our national organization with comparatively little noise and, following our charted course of "less noise and more achievement," we come before you in this convention with pardonable pride in a record of accomplishment second to none in the history of exhibitor organization.

"The arbitration system now firmly established within our industry has proved its tremendous worth in the solving of differences, and the adjustment of contractual troubles which would, if left unsettled, cost the industry thousands of dollars annually. It has been criticized by a few leaders whose purpose seems to be more in the direction of fault finding rather than in constructive and progressive action. It has been used to a tiresome degree as a bulwark for certain state and regional conventions, where if real issues such as Music Tax Legislation, labor and so forth were given proper prominence, the exhibitor would have received genuine service and profited immeasurably more.

"I believe in arbitration in this or in any other industry. It is now generally recognized as the most effective way to settle even international controversies. Of course, it is not perfect. Neither was the Wright flying machine at Kitty Hawk, but Lindbergh crossed the ocean later in an improved model. We should all give our best thought to making arbitration more perfect in application and more satisfactory in results.

Music Tax is Cancer

"With regard to the music tax if it is possible for an industry to have such an affliction, I know of no better diagnosis for this disease than just plain cancer. This infection has not as yet spread across the border, but I solemnly warn our Canadian friends that they are not immune. They should continue to exercise every precaution to meet this music license menace at the border and say 'Thou Shalt Not Pass.' Some of the exhibitors from the United States may say that this subject is ancient history. To them and to those who are taking this unfair burden as a matter of course, I say in the vernacular of the day, 'you ain't seen nothing yet.' This organization of authors, composers, etc., feels that it is now sitting in the driver's seat and while they have now set an arbitrary fee of ten cents per seat in the United States, they boast of the fact that there is no limit to the amount they can and may exact in the future.

"Nothing in the form of a new departure has ever elicited more diversified opinion and speculation than the advent of synchronized pictures into our industry. At your national headquarters we have daily and diligently studied every phase of this question. We have eagerly sought the opinions of inventors, actors, directors, producers and theatre owners. We have never lost an opportunity to witness the performance of a new mechanism. And there are many of them. Even if it were possible to advise you which one to purchase, the advantages of one over the other are so confusing that your own conditions, coupled with your own judgment, would ultimately produce the most beneficial results. We have cautioned the many exhibitors who have come to the national headquarters for advice, not to be stampeded. We are told that the best engineers are being employed in research working having as its objective the betterment of the synchronization, tonal qualities, etc. This is as it should be but I respectfully suggest that another corps of experts should direct serious attention towards a decided improvement in the original cost to the theatre owners.

"I believe this will be done, in fact, it must be done if the great number of small town exhibitors are to properly serve their patrons and hold their own in competition with nearby big cities.

"The officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have evidenced ideal vigilance in regard to legislation. They acknowledge with appreciation the splendid cooperation extended by exhibitors and other divisions of the industry, throughout every state in the Union, with but three or four exceptions. Unless all signs fail there will be a deluge of adverse legislation presented in the national and state capitols during the coming sessions. The same fine alertness upon the part of every sincere individual in our industry should prevail when the call to action is sounded by your national and state leaders. May I venture the sincere suggestion that extreme consideration be given to all public statements regarding pending measures. Many times this error has caused unnecessary trouble as the proponents of an adverse piece of legislation have been quick to take advantage of an individual opinion based upon a purely local condition.

"Censorship is an old enemy but one whose versatility for finding new methods of attack is unlimited and destructive. Censorship applied in our great medium of expression is wrong in principle. We believe that we operate the screen press of the world and, as such, should be extended the same privileges and rights as the newspapers, the editors of which are answerable to the courts for libelous statements or the publication of unwholesome matter which includes the printing of objectionable pictures. We, as an industry, publishing animated pictures, simply ask for the same consideration.

"The labor situation in our industry has now reached a point where its importance cannot reasonably be under estimated. It has always been and is yet the purpose of our organization and theatre owners generally to maintain the most cordial relations between the exhibitor and those who provide the different elements of service about the theatre. However, in some instances this mutuality does not prevail because of disputes which have arisen over wages, working conditions and the number of workers to be employed in given divisions of service.

"The experience of employees with other crafts has demonstrated to all, that mutual conditions can be successfully maintained. We believe the same situations can be reached in our industry and we earnestly desire to bring about this result."

Griffith Tells Members of Academy Pictures Have No Claim to Art

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 17. "There is no art in motion pictures," D. W. Griffith told the directors' branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences at a meeting Monday night, among other statements which are still the basis of Hollywood discussions.

It was Griffith's first attendance at a meeting since the formation of the organization. He had been invited to speak on talking pictures. Regarding the latter he said he knew nothing and if he did know he wouldn't tell.

Griffith poked fun at the high-sounding name of the Academy, saying that motion pictures had no claim to art; that it is purely a commercial industry and until it can reproduce or equal the work of great artists who have become immortal, it cannot classify itself with them.

William De Mille, producer for Paramount, attempted to reply to Griffith's remarks. He disagreed with everything said by the latter and pointed to him as an artist responsible for many things in pictures which have made them art.

9 Pathe Shorts Grouped for October 28 Release

Nine new short subjects, two of them dealing with football, one from an educational and the other from a humorous standpoint, make up the quota of featurette material scheduled by the Pathe exchange for release during the week of October 28.

"Football Sense," the fourth of the gridiron reels, inaugurates the program. It is followed by "Gridiron Demons," an animated cartoon which offers an Army-Navy football game in Aesop Fable style; "Getting Together," a new Grantland Rice Sportlight; "Taxi Scandal," the second of Mack Sennett's comedies concerning Dan, the Taxi Man; "Trapped in the Flames," chapter three of "Eagle of the Night;" Topics of the Day No. 44; Pathe Review No. 44; and issues Nos. 90 and 91 of Pathe News. The Review shows a camera study of London, "County Fair," and "Slender Charms."

Vidor Selects Leads for "Hallelujah"

Colored players for his new picture, "Hallelujah," have been selected by King Vidor, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director. He plans to place the production in work within a few days. Location headquarters have been made at Memphis.

The two foremost leads in the all-darkie talkie film will be Daniel Haynes, who has been appearing in Ziegfeld's "Showboat," and Honey Brown, singer and dancer of the Harlem Club, New York. The ingenue role will be played by Victoria Spivey, night club entertainer who has made a number of phonograph recordings. Everett McGarrity, Chicago colored boy, was signed by Vidor while the director was on his way east. He will have the second male lead. There are two more important roles to be selected—those of the parents of Zake, the role to be played by Haynes.

Novarro Renews Contract With M-G-M

A new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, under the terms of which he will yearly devote six months to motion picture work and the remaining six months to the pursuit of his musical studies, has been signed by Ramon Novarro, who has just finished a starring role in "The Flying Ensign" for M-G-M.

For several years, it is said, Novarro has been studying music under Louis Graveure. In the beginning of his career, the motion picture actor taught music and for a time is reported to have studied for grand opera.

Pathe Curtailment Rumors Denied by William Sistrom

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 15.—Contradicting published rumors that the Pathe Studios were holding up production awaiting funds and information regarding the status of the studios since the RCA deal, William Sistrom, general production head, told a Motion Picture News representative today that not only is Pathe completing its program for this year, but is starting preparations to outline the forthcoming year's product.

Only seven pictures remain to be made to finish the entire 1928-29 schedule. Two of these—"Leather Necks" and "Noisy Neighbors"—are now shooting, leaving five to complete by January 1. These are "Office Scandal," "Square Shoulders," "High Voltage," "The Getaway," "Listen Baby" and "The Flying Fool." The other 22 have been completed.

Reports that smaller negative costs would prevail in all future Pathe productions were also denied by Sistrom, who said that the same average would be maintained in next year's product, which would also contain four specials costing approximately $500,000 each.

Censor Lid Overnight

All Minneapolis Houses Affected by New Theatrical Ban; Trouble Over Burlesque

THE lid of municipal censorship was clamped down suddenly on all Minneapolis theatres this week.

Every house in the city—movie as well as legitimate—came under the order, promulgated by the city council, which imposed a censorship on all things theatrical.

This council's decision came after a heated debate as to whether or not the license of the Gayety Theatre, a burlesque house, should be revoked. The Gayety, according to some of the aldermen, had been presenting shows which were objectionable from a moral standpoint. Members of the council almost came to blows in discussing the desirability of closing the burlesque house. Then Alderman Victor Johnson introduced a resolution calling for censorship of all theatres and before anyone knew it, censorship became a reality in Minneapolis.

John M. Kittridge, city license inspector, and his assistant, Jack Kaufman, were delegated by the chief of police to act as censors following the council's decision. Alderman Johnson explained that they are to insist on strict enforcement of the ordinance against disorderly conduct which prohibits "lewd and obscene productions." Performers taking part in such productions will be subject to arrest. Mr. Johnson told the chief of police that Minneapolis expected strict enforcement of this particular clause and intimated that the city might be the scene of the same kind of a morality war against theatres as is now going on in New York.

Arrest of principals, of course, will be confined to vaudeville, burlesque and legitimate shows. In the case of movies, Mr. Johnson explained, action will be taken against the theatre managers. Kittridge and Kaufman, while they will serve as the official censors, will not have the last word in the matter. In case of flagrant violations, their recommendations will probably be accepted without question, but in "border-line" productions, the license committee of the council will probably inspect the performance.

The first theatre to be visited by the inspectors was the Unique Theatre, one of the smaller loop picture houses, where a sensational sex film was being advertised. At the time this story was written, the censors had not yet decided whether the film should be prohibited from showing.

Mayor Leach has promised his co-operation in the censorship movement, but said that he did not expect the police department to be called upon generally to aid in censorship. Meanwhile Kittridge and Kaufman are trying to figure out just where to begin their work as guardians of the public's morals. There are about 15 theatres in the loop which must be censored each week, and dozens of neighborhood houses, and the pair are wondering how two men can possibly perform the task. The plan doesn't seem at all workable, and, of course, may be abandoned eventually, but right now the censorship lid is on tight and will remain so until the city council sees the folly of its ways. Theatre managers don't like it a bit, but most of them probably feel that the plan will prove so ridiculous in the next few weeks that it will be abandoned.

No Recall on "Battle of the Sexes"

PLANS to recall all prints of D. W. Griffith's "Battle of the Sexes" have been abandoned by United Artists. It had been intended to cancel all bookings in order to insert dialog into about three sequences of the picture. This original decision is reported to have been made following a long distance conversation between Al Lichtman and Joseph M. Schenck. The later change of mind, to permit general release of the production as a silent picture, was made when a total of how much the move would cost proved it unpractical.

Kennedy Reported Financing John Gilbert Production Unit

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY will finance John Gilbert as an individual production unit for United Artists. That Kennedy's reported retirement from the motion picture industry is still in the distant future is further revealed by the fact that Harry Eddington has been appointed Kennedy's personal representative on the West Coast. Eddington has been, and still is, John Gilbert's manager.

The deal between Gilbert, Eddington and Kennedy is reported to have taken place several months ago, while Kennedy was in Hollywood revamping the First National studio and its production force. At that time, however, it is doubtful whether negotiations had reached any further stage than the arrangement giving Kennedy personal option on Gilbert's future, following the expiration of his contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in a few months. The United Artists' equation is said to have entered within the past fortnight.

At the New York offices of United Artists this week it was said that no negotiations had been entered into with John Gilbert. His contract with M-G-M expires in May.

Fox Move for Eastern Chain Under Way

Deal for Over 100 New York Houses Reported Set; Goal Said to Be 1,000

ACQUISITION of well over 100 independent theatres in New York City by William Fox is reported to have reached the final stages of negotiations which have been rumored under way since the Sapiro organization ceased functioning as an independent booking body. Among the theatres which are claimed to have gone over to Fox are some of the finest neighborhood circuits in the Metropolitan district and control of these are said to be the first step in the building-up of a chain of 1,000 theatres in New York State and New England. The new corporation, it is said, will be headed by William Fox and be known as Fox Metropolitan Theatres with $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 cash at disposal.

William and Harry Brandt, Brooklyn exhibitors and operators of a dozen houses, and A. C. Bluenmthal, representing Fox interests, are spoken of as responsible for bringing about what has been looked upon as a practically impossible task—that of gathering together a goodly number of independent exhibitors and their theatres.

Just how far the movement towards a total of 1,000 may go is problematical, circuits outside which Fox might look upon with favor not being any too eager to let go of profitable holdings.

New York theatre circuits named in the Fox deal are:

The Small and Straussberg circuit of Brooklyn and Queens with 30 houses; Consolidated Amusement Co., with 18 theatres in middle Manhattan and the Bronx, Mayer and Schneider and the Blinderman and Steiner circuits on the lower East Side of New York and Harlem, with approximately 35 houses; the Joelson-Suchman circuit, Bronx, with 11; Mueller and Schwartz, of Jamaica, where they operate three or four houses; Arthur Rapp, Brooklyn, 3; Grobe and Knobel, of New York, Jackson Heights and Flushing, 10 theatres; Harry Seagal, of New York and Brooklyn, operating 4; the Brandt Bros., Brooklyn, 12 houses. Several other circuits are spoken of as possible acquisitions.

Sanger and Jordan Merge With Anglo International

Sanger and Jordan, play brokerage and authors' agency, has become affiliated with the Anglo International Play Bureau, an English company in the same line of business. Walter C. Jordan, who has been the sole owner of Sanger and Jordan since the death of Frank W. Sanger in 1904, has been made general manager in America of the newly formed international organization.

The formation of an international agency has become a practical necessity, since the arrival of the talking picture, Mr. Jordon believes. "The silent picture business has always been an international one," he declared, "but the stage play business has been but national in scope, that is, the rights have been sold on a single country basis, and so in transferring stage plays to the talkie pictures where the rights of so many are included the business had to be internationalized."

The office of the new international brokerage in plays have been established at 208 West 41 Street, New York.

Film Industry Aiding Red Cross in New Roll Call

The American Red Cross is again receiving the cooperation of the motion picture industry. The New York field has extended whatever assistance it can render in the new Roll Call membership appeal, which opens annually on Armistice Day.

As volunteer chairman, Jesse L. Lasky of Paramount again takes command over the activities of the motion picture group. Essentially the same plan of effort that was followed in the 1927 Roll Call will be followed again.

There are approximately 175 groups now being formed under the Roll Call plan of the committee organization of New York.

C. M. Thall Seattle Chief For West Coast

West Coast Theatres' new manager in the Seattle Division was last week appointed by Harold B. Franklin in the person of Charles M. Thall, who has been assistant to A. M. Bowles, San Francisco Division Manager.

Mr. Thall has been with Wesco for the past seven years. In San Francisco he was also in charge of bookings. Prior to his Wesco connection he was advance road agent for theatrical organizations.

Paper Finds Curtailment Doesn't Work

The Minneapolis Tribune, which recently reduced its Sunday dramatic section by a page and virtually eliminated all pictures from it, has added the page again and has returned to its old policy of using photographs. The theatres, as a result, are running ads of normal size, after reducing them for a week as a protest against the curtailment.

Theatre Discontinues Its Orchestra

THE demands of the Musicians' Union, characterized by Manager W. B. Wagnon as "un-American, unreasonable and unjust," have forced the Embassy Theatre in San Francisco, which Mr. Wagnon also owns, to operate without an orchestra. The union had insisted that Wagnon employ an orchestra despite the fact that his house had used only a mechanical music-producing device, synchronized with talking movies.

The union's ultimatum was that failure to grant its demand would result in a walkout of the union men, operating the projection machines. To accede to all the union wanted would cost him $30,000, Mr. Wagnon declared. The union's ultimatum has expired so the Embassy will now be orchestraless.

A. M. Brilant Appointed Director of Colony

ARTHUR M. BRILANT, exploitation and theatre man, was appointed director of the Colony Theatre in New York last Friday by Fred A. Flader, general manager of the Universal chain theatres. W. J. Callahan was appointed house manager.

Both of these men have been in the theatre business for many years. Mr. Brilant's service with Universal including the building supervision, opening and management of the 3,000-seat Universal house in Brooklyn. Mr. Callahan has been house manager in various Universal houses for the past several years.

C. B. Paine Elected Universal Treasurer

THE board of directors of Universal Pictures Corporation at a special meeting last Friday elected Charles B. Paine to the position of treasurer, succeeding E. H. Goldstein, resigned. The election of Mr. Paine was in accordance with the desires of Carl Laemmle, the president of Universal.

Mr. Paine first came to Universal six years ago as assistant to the treasurer. For the past two years he has been concerned principally with the financial end of Universal's theatre chain. At the time of his elevation to his new post he was also elected a member of the board of directors.

Until other arrangements are made, Mr. Paine will continue to handle his duties in the theatre chain in addition to those of treasurer.

Raoul Walsh Recuperating In Salt Lake Hospital

Raoul Walsh, film director, is recuperating at the St. Marks hospital, Salt Lake City, after having been injured last week in an automobile accident near Cedar City, Utah, when a jack-rabbit, blinded by the lights from the machine, jumped into the windshield.

Officials of the St. Mark's hospital report that Walsh is doing as well as can be expected. Attending physicians stated that the cinema director's right eye is very badly cut and that there is some possibility that he may lose the sight of one eye, although hope is maintained that this will not be the case.

Chevalier Arrives for Paramount Film

Maurice Chevalier, French musical comedy star, arrived in New York last Tuesday aboard the Ile de France. He will star in talking pictures for Paramount. Before he left Paris, the star received a cablegram from Hollywood screen folk extending a warm welcome.

Chevalier's first vehicle will be "The Innocence of Paris," C. E. Andrew's novel, which will be converted into film form by Harry D'Arrast.

Sam Katz Visits Publix Houses in St. Louis

Sam Katz, president of Publix Theatres was a visitor to St. Louis on October 15. He was accompanied by Eugene Zukor, son of Adolph Zukor, head of the Famous Players Lasky Corporation. Katz is touring the country for the purpose of investigating the effects of sound pictures. He was particularly interested in the showing made by the Grand Central Theatre, since it went on a sound picture basis last December.

Esther Ralston Signs Anew With Paramount

Esther Ralston has signed a new contract which binds her for a long-term period to Paramount for whom she is about to begin work in "The Case of Lena Smith." Dorothy Arzner will direct the drama.

News Reels Set Record On Zeppelin Story

Arrival of Giant Dirigible Shown in All Details Within Two Hours After Docking in Jersey

THE efficiency of the news reel services was again exemplified with the landing at Lakehurst, N. J., of the Graf Zeppelin from Friedershafen, Germany, on Monday evening of this week. Just one hour and one-half after the giant ship landed at Lakehurst, newsreel prints were delivered to the motion picture houses on Broadway, New York.

The airplane escort that met the giant dirigible as she neared New York included several planes carrying newsreel photographers. Their product was rushed to the laboratories. Films were received at the Consolidated Film Laboratories at 4:40 P. M., even before the Zep was made fast at her temporary mooring. They were developed, printed, edited and titled and reached the theatres before 7 o'clock.

The Hearst organization was the only one with a camera man aboard the Zeppelin, but the other companies chartered airplane fleets that followed every move of the ship from the time she was first sighted well outside of New York until she was made fast to her mooring mast.

Not only was rapid Broadway service rendered but airplanes were rushed to many cities with duplicate prints and thousands and thousands of theatre goers were privileged to witness the exciting incidents of the arrival in record time.

M-G-M sent out a fleet of these planes which carried prints of every detail of the flight from the time it started. These were delivered to M-G-M News accounts in addition to the regular release of newsreel subjects at no extra cost to the exhibitor.

Pathe News covering details of the arrival had prints in the Roxy, Strand and other houses on the evening of the arrival. Some forty prints of the events were being unreel in the Pathe News in Metropolitan houses on Monday evening. Three airplanes and a large crew of ground men covered the events of the arrival for Pathe.

Additional scenes were included in Pathe News release No. 86 on Wednesday.

Kinograms, Educational's news reel, covered the arrival with its entire staff and the news story of the completion of the flight were sent out to every principal city as a special issue by air mail Tuesday morning. Nearly 400 feet of film was used in this Kinograms special.

Paramount News threw out a drag-net of fourteen cameramen and seven airplanes. There were four cameramen stationed at the Lakehurst hangar with two airplanes. Six cameramen with one sea plane and one amphibian plane were located at strategic points around New York City and many exclusive shots were recorded. Even before the arrival of the Zep at Lakehurst, Paramount had shots on hand taken over Washington and Baltimore.

Committees representing the M. P. T. O. of W. Pa., and the local operators union, got together the past week and ironed out some differences, so that now everything has been adjusted to the satisfaction of all concerned. The wage scale was renewed until September first next. It stands the same as it has during the past year.

Report Says Dempsey Is to Return to Screen

Jack Dempsey is reported returning to motion pictures on the completion of his run in New York and the road tour of "The Big Fight." Tex Rickard is reported to own a play called "The Ringsider" and is said to have completed arrangements for Dempsey to star in it.

Commission May Narrow Issues in Suit Against Paramount

NEGOTIATIONS with a view to narrowing the issues in the suit filed by the Federal Trade Commission against Paramount in the Federal court in New York are understood to be under way. Attorneys for Paramount have been in conference with counsel for the commission with a view to seeing whether the case cannot be expedited by eliminating some of the points covered in the petition.

It is probable that the commission will look favorably upon the suggestion that the issues be narrowed so as to expedite disposition of the suit.

Meanwhile, considerable attention is being paid to the present situation in the motion picture industry with a view to determining whether the code of ethics adopted at the New York conference last October is working out properly. Information is now being secured by M. Markham Flannery, chief of the division of trade practices, on the basis of which in the near future he will make a report to the commission as to how the matter is working out. His report may determine whether it is advisable to take any further action regarding the code of ethics.

Netoco Acquires More Theatre Holdings

NEWEST developments in Netoco's expansion activities occurred recently when the New England theatre corporation entered into an agreement with three other New England companies whereby Netoco obtains a controlling interest in the Empire, Strand, and Jefferson theatres, Portland, and the Capitol, Springfield, Mass. At about the same time, Netoco completed negotiations for the Day Square Theatre, East Boston.

Samuel Pinanski, president of Netoco, manipulated the deal through which he added the three New England houses to his circuit, negotiating with Abraham Goodside, of Portland, representing the two Maine companies, The Strand Amusement Co. and The Empire Amusement Co., and the Massachusetts company, the Capitol Theatre Co. Mr. Goodside will continue in a managerial capacity.

It is said that the operating company will also take over the Maine and the new State Theatres in Portland.

Tiffany to Make Color Symphonies in Japan

The land of the orange blossom will form the background of "A Japanese Carnival," one of the coming Tiffany-Stahl Color Symphonies. The ceremony of the ascension of the Japanese emperor is to be photographed as one of the important sequences, a company having left the United States on October 6 under the leadership of Howard C. Brown for that purpose. Japanese players will be used for the leading roles and original Japanese music will be played for the synchronization.

Frances Agnew is Writing "Stepping High" Continuity

The continuity for "Stepping High," FBO's first all-talking sound picture which will be started at the Sound Studios, Inc., New York City, within a week, has been assigned Frances Agnew. Gene Markey, author of the story, is working on the dialogue in collaboration with Director Bert Glennon.

3 Advertising Companies In Merger

Three of the leading manufacturers of advertising displays in the country have merged their resources to form a new organization to be known as National Studios, Inc. Included among its specialties will be lantern slides, photography in all its branches, enlargements, retouching, window and exhibition displays, transparencies, colored paintings, illustrations, lettering and layouts.

The companies involved in the merger are the Excelsior Illustrating Co., the Standard Slide Corporation and National Photographers, Inc. The new organization has acquired the good will, patents, etc., of the Animated Products Corp., and has also taken over Manhattan Slide and Film Corp. The new headquarters of the company are at 226-232 West 56th Street, New York.

B. J. Knoppleman is president of National while other officers include: H. A. Rosenberg, vice-president; Murray Rosenbluth, vice president; Jack Knoppleman, secretary; and Nat Cherin, treasurer.

Sunday Movies Take a Licking in Morrill, Nebr.

Another town in the Denver district held an election to determine whether or not Sunday motion pictures would be shown when Morrill, Nebraska, cast a record vote of 206 resulting in the defeat of Sunday motion picture entertainment by six votes. The business men of Morrill supported the movement because other towns in the North Platte valley that allowed Sunday movies were attracting the citizens from Morrill. The ministerial group fought the idea on the grounds of morals.

In and Out of Town

HARRY SCOTT, short subject sales manager for Pathe, is now touring the Pathe exchanges. Detroit is his first stop, his others including Chicago, St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Dallas and Memphis.

PHIL REISKAN, general sales manager of Pathe, extended his western sales tour to the northwest for conference with C. L. Theuerkauf, Seattle manager, and his staff. He is making several stops on his return to the east.

BETTY BRONSON, Warner Bros. star, has arrived in New York from Hollywood. She is vacationing.

PAUL J. SWIFT, Vitaphone sales manager, is now in Dallas, where he is to superintend the opening of the new Vitaphone branch there. On his return, he will stop at New Orleans and Atlanta.

N. A. McKAY, treasurer of the Mary Pickford Company, arrived in New York from Hollywood on Wednesday, October 17. He is conferring with O. B. Mantell, Miss Pickford's New York business representative, and United Artists executives.

BEN STOLOFF, box director, is now in New York on a short vacation. He expects to return to California next week, but before that he will see the latest Broadway successes.

VICTOR SEASTROM, director for M-G-M, sailed last week for Europe on the SS Olympic. He was accompanied by his wife and two children.

HAI ROACH, comedy producer for M-G-M, accompanied by David Loew, vice president of Loew's, Inc., and head of the real estate and film booking department of that organization, are now traveling from New York to Los Angeles by automobile. They left on October 10 and expect to reach their destination within three weeks.

Ship Films to Fiji Island Lepers

THE leper colonies on the islands of Makogai and Magodraga, of the Fiji group, will soon be seeing a new supply of films, 30 American motion pictures having been shipped last Saturday on the S. S. Benholm. The films were the gift of Universal, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Bray. Packing and shipping expenses were met by Universal. Another consignment of films is being sent by Paramount from their New Zealand headquarters. The motion pictures are being shipped to Dr. E. Aubrey Neff, medical director of the islands. They offer comedies, magazine subjects on nature, cartoons, world news and 10 features.

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America last year contributed a shipment of films for the entertainment of the lepers. The prints sent on Saturday were the result of an appeal made recently by Will Hays.

Colorado, Denver, Reverts to Former Management

Horace W. Bennett Company, owners of the Colorado theatre building, Denver, repossessed the Colorado theatre from the Bishop Cass Investment Company last week when it became apparent that the Bishop-Cass interests could no longer conduct the theatre successfully from a financial standpoint. Six years ago the theatre was completely overhauled, redecorated and remodeled at a cost of $400,000 and for a long time was very successful, it being the finest theatre of its kind in the Denver territory.

The coming of the Akaddin theatre and the building of the new Denver theatre, a million dollar Publix house, took a large part of the patronage away from the Colorado, as well as the entire Curtis street district. The Horace W. Bennett Company continues to operate the theatre under a change of policy with Al Haagen, a former Denver theatre man as temporary manager. Mr. Haagen is being assisted by Jack Krum, one of Delver's well known former managers.

First National Buys "Fast Life," Stage Play

First National acquired last week the world motion picture rights and the talking movie rights to "Fast Life," current play on the New York stage written by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer.

"Annapolis" Previewed at U. S. Naval Academy

PATHE'S "Annapolis," featuring John Mack Brown, Jeanette Loff and Hugh Allan, was previewed at the U. S. Naval Academy in Annapolis last Monday night, October 1. Superintendent of the Academy Rear Admiral S. S. Robison and the academic department heads attended the showing. The film received the approval of the Superintendent, the Commandant of Midshipmen and Professor Royal S. Pease, of the department of English of the Academy who wrote the story.

W. B. Set Date for "The Singing Fool"

WARNER BROS. will release nationally "The Singing Fool" on January 1, 1929. At present the production is playing pre-release engagements in many of the key cities.

Two Warner Bros. pictures, both Vitaphoned, have also been set for pre-release. "Beware of Bachelors" will begin showings on October 27 and "The Home Towners" on October 23.

Lasky Outlines Eastern Production

Paramount Planning Many Features for Long Island Plant

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice-president of Paramount, has announced the company's production plans for the reopened Long Island studio. Because of the proximity of the plant to Broadway and the leading stage stars, many feature productions in the talkie field will be made at the studios in Astoria.

With the experimental work at an end and the installation of sound recording equipment completed production work on features will be launched immediately. An ambitious program will keep the studio forces going at full speed for some time to come.

"Actual camera work will begin next Monday on 'The Letter,' an all-dialogue version of last year's stage hit, with Jeanne Eagles in the leading role," said Mr. Lasky.

"Following up that production and probably coming along about six weeks later will be 'The Four Cocoanuts,' popular vehicle of the Four Marx Brothers, featuring the famous comedians in person. Next in line will come 'The Birth of the Blues' and then the current newspaper play, 'Gentlemen of the Press.' Each of these productions will have distinguished stage-trained casts, which can talk, and will be all-dialogue, with absolutely no stint on quality of production.

"The foregoing bare statement, I believe, without amplifying details and making no mention of other outstanding features, should indicate to the public the great scope of Paramount's schedule for sound-picture production here on Long Island within easy reach of the speaking-stage capital of the

Phonograph Companies Entering Into Sound Production Field

PHONOGRAPH companies in addition to Victor are turning their attention to the talking picture field. It is said that Columbia Phonograph Company is in negotiation with Western Electric and Electrical Research Products for the production of talking both here and abroad.

The Sonora Phonograph Company is another in the picture field. It has been merged by the Acoustics Products Company and has entered into a deal with the E. F. Gillespie & Company, Inc., whereby Gillespie has purchased 200,000 shares of the Acoustics Company stock. The Gillespie Company will specialize in synchronization of sound, as well as sound reproduction and radio broadcasting.

world. Getting to work thus promptly at the beginning of the fall season, with the finest literary material and unlimited resources for production, I feel confident in promising an output of exceptional entertainment.

"My own enthusiasm for talking pictures has just received tremendous stimulation from seeing our first all-dialogue picture, 'Interference,' just completed before I left the Pacific coast. It is to follow 'Wings' into the Criterion theatre very soon.

"'Interference' has the benefit of a cast headed by Evelyn Brent, Clive Brook, Doris Kenyon and William Powell, all of them distinguished actors of the silent drama and all of them, furthermore, having had considerable experience upon the speaking stage. 'Interference' has a cast which can talk. I want to repeat that phrase, for it will become a slogan in our pictures, casts which can talk.

"This experience will guide us in casting for productions at the Long Island studio. For example, in 'The Letter' Miss Eagles will be supported by such players as O. P. Heggie, one of the favorite actors of the legitimate stage, who was seen here last season in 'Spellbound' and 'Out of the Sea'; Reginald Owen, now playing Richelieu in 'The Three Musketeers' and Herbert Marshall, now playing in Frederick Lonsdale's comedy, 'The High Road.' Tests are in progress now to obtain other actors of equal calibre."

The Long Island studio was reopened last June for the purpose of sound-picture production, but the intervening months have been spent in careful preparation for the great drive which Paramount just now is launching.

Three stages are now ready for sound production, with all equipment installed and tried out by actual use. The staff has been carefully selected. A variety of complete short productions have been made.

Two productions of the "Great Star and Author Series" have been completed at the studio with 100 per cent dialogue. They are "Night Club," based on the short story by Katherine Brush and "The Pusher In the Face," with a cast including Lester Allen, Carroll McComas, Estelle Taylor and others to be announced completely at an early date.

"Night Club" has its scene in one of New York's night clubs. It probably will be released in a length of four reels, half being devoted to actually telling the story and the rest presenting specialty acts.

The specialty numbers will include Jimmie Carr and his orchestra, Fannie Brice, Pat Rooney and Pat Rooney, Jr., eight girls from "Good News" and Tamara Geva. The cast includes Minnie Dupree, Vivienne Osborne, Jeanne Green, Margot Kelly, Ann Pennington, Frances Williams, Patricia Collinge, Mary Williams, Anne Forrest, June Walker, Geogfrey Kerr, Donald Kirke, Bettie Lawford, Dorothy Tierney, Percy Hilton, Dorothy Tenant, Adele Klaer, Georgia Lerch and Maybelle Swor. The picture was directed by Monta Bell and Robert Florey.

Vitaphone Installing In Up-State Houses

Vitaphone equipment is being installed in many theatres in New York State, the Schine Brothers being far in the lead in this respect. Already the Schines have equipped their theatres in Ogdensburg, Malone, Saranac Lake, Massena, Herkimer, Watertown, Little Falls, Oneonta and Gloversville, and are wiring several of their houses in the Buffalo territory.

Kormblite and Cohen, of Binghamton are installing Vitaphone at the Strand and Symphony in Binghamton, as well as their house in Endicott. The Mark Ritz in Albany, is installing the Vitaphone. The Colonial, in Norwich, will place the Vitaphone in operation in February, while Frieder and Grossman of Hudson, have contracted for the Vitaphone in January.

Talkies Improve Films, Say Managers

MOVIE-TONE and Vitaphone have materially raised the standard of present day pictures and will be a permanent feature in the future, according to the opinion expressed by theatre managers in Dallas, Texas.

Mrs. Ethel Boyce, city supervisor of public amusements, was hostess at a luncheon at the University Club last week to five managers of the Dallas first run houses and following the meal there was a round-table discussion of pictures. It was the unanimous opinion that the talkies were here to stay. Those present at the luncheon included James O. Cherry of the Melba, Sid Henry of the Majestic, R. J. Stinnett of the Capitol, Ernest W. Morrison of the Palace and A. R. Lever of the Old Mill.

Sound Picture Reviews

By CHESTER J. SMITH

Sidewalks of New York

HERE is one of the cleverest cartoons we have seen in a long time. The arrangement is wonderful and it should be a knockout from de luxe house down to the neighborhoods. It is one of those sing your own numbers with a dial jumping from word to word as the song progresses and it is all about as humorously cartooned as could well be imagined. They laughed over it at the Rivoli as much as over the most humorous comedy. It is a number that does not need the accompanying singing to put it over big. It just can't miss if never a word is sung. It is a Paramount short.

Papa's Vacation

This is a Vitaphone skit with Mickey Bennett, Patricia Caron, Blanche Douglas and Walter Rogers. It is the story of a mailman whose family insists upon a mountain hike for the vacation period. There are many humorous incidents in it and it is an improvement on some of the other sketches presented recently. There is nothing of the melodramatic about it, but it contains an abundance of good comedy.

The Ladies Man

Chic Sales is the star of this Fox Movietone comedy and if it is an indication of what is forthcoming from that company in the way of shorts these abbreviated talking subjects are going to come in for considerable more popularity. Sales is a splendid comedian and he is given an abundance of material on which to work. There are many laughs in it and the star registers well throughout.

United Artists Stars Working on Dialogue Features

UNITED ARTISTS continue to expand their sound program for the coming season. All of the regular luminaries of the organization will be heard as well as seen and additional stars are being added regularly. Mary Pickford, Gloria Swanson, Douglas Fairbanks, Ronald Colman, Lily Damita, Lupe Velez, Walter Byron, Harry Richman, Charlie Chaplin and others are engaged in the making of pictures that are in various stages of production.

Charlie Chaplin's "City Lights" will have dialogue sequences and Vilma Banky's "The Awakening" will present an Irving Berlin song, "Marie," sung by members of the cast. Herbert Brenon's "Lummox" will have dialogue; "Nightstick" will be an all talking film and it goes into production November 1st.

Mary Pickford's "Coquette" will be an all talkie. Sam Taylor is directing and the film is being made at the United Artists Studio in Hollywood. Western Electric devices being employed.

Gloria Swanson's "Queen Kelly" will be a part-talkie, the star singing a song and talking in dialogue sequences. Erich Von Stroheim is directing his own original story. Walter Byron, will play opposite Miss Swanson. R. C. A. Phonophone will be used.

Douglas Fairbanks will be heard in "The Iron Mask." Mr. Fairbanks, will employ the classic soliloquy rather than dialogue, which, he feels, limits the scope of a picture.

Charlie Chaplin, a stage celebrity before he became a screen comedian, has decided that his character of the poor little tramp shall not speak. But there will be dialogue between other players in "City Lights."

Ronald Colman and Lily Damita will talk in "The Rescue," Samuel Goldwyn's picture of the Joseph Conrad sea story.

Lupe Velez sings Irving Berlin's "Where Is the Song of Songs For Me?" in D. W. Griffith's production, "The Love Song."

Harry Richman, star of "George White's Scandals," will sing eight Irving Berlin songs in "Say It With Music," Berlin's original story to be filmed in New York by director Alan Crosland.

Herbert Brenon is leaving Hollywood for New York in ten days, to cast the leading role of "Lummox" and to work with Fannie Hurst, the author, on the scenario. There will be dialogue in "Lummox," as there is in "The Rescue," which Mr. Brenon has just completed.

The singing of "Marie" in Vilma Banky's "The Awakening" is done by regimental troops. The entire picture is synchronized by Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld.

Arthur Lake Will Star in Universal Feature

Arthur Lake, youthful Universal comedian who has already been starred in a feature by his company, is scheduled to star in another, an adolescent love story written by J. C. Hawks and titled "The Girl Dodger." Lake has been with Universal for four years and is just completing a series of "Horace in Hollywood" comedies.

Pathe Completes First Two Sound Films

The first two Pathe pictures to be filmed with the RCA Vitaphone process are "Sal of Singapore" and "The Spieler." The features were made at the Culver City studios. Dialogue is to be inserted in all future Pathe features. It is being added to "Show Folks" at present.

Claude Berkeley has been appointed film sound editor at the Pathe Studios and John Rohlfs has been made business manager of Supervisor Benjamin Glazer's sound productions.

Sixty Bristolphones Are Ready for Ohio

Sixty Bristolphones are available to exhibitors in the northern Ohio territory for delivery between now and the first of the year. This announcement is from Jesse Fishman, general manager of the Standard Film Service Company which is handling sales and distribution of Bristolphone and Gotham product. Fishman is in New York at the present time expediting shipments of the instruments.

Denver Blind Enjoy First Talkie

HARRY E. HUFFMAN, manager of the Aladdin Theatre, Denver, gave a rather unique performance during the engagement of "The Terror," a Warner Bros. all talkie motion picture. Mr. Huffman extended an invitation through the Blind Association of Denver for all of the blind members to come and attend the showing. It is reported that those who attended thoroughly enjoyed the entertainment and declared the talking sequences and sound effects so perfect that the picture can be followed by merely listening to it.

The HANA-PHONE

Arthur Richman Doing Banky Dialogue

VILMA BANKY'S new picture, for which most of the sequences are to be shot on Fifth Avenue, will have dialogue by Arthur Richman, author of "Heavy Traffic," "Ambush" and other Broadway successes. Mr. Richman is writing the talking sequences in collaboration with Hope Loring who is author and scenarist of the yet untitled story. This will be the first motion picture venture for the former president of the American Dramatists Guild.

Joseph Hergesheimer is writing the dialogue and story for the next picture of Ronald Colman, the second of Samuel Goldwyn's former co-starring team, now embarked on their individual careers.

Publix Widely Exploits "The Singing Fool"

Publix Theatres have gone in for extensive exploitation of "The Singing Fool," the Warner Bros. Vitaphone production, to be shown on their circuit this year. They have issued a sales manual to their managers covering in thirty pages the chief exploitation angles.

The data presented in the manual outlines practical exploitation, advertising and press campaigns. It gives complete endorsement to the ideas and material presented in Warners press sheet on "The Singing Fool."

Independents Get Break by W. E. Decision

Western Electric Company is giving considerable leeway to independent companies who are releasing through licensees of Western Electric sound equipment. The independents now have permission, it is understood, to record by the Western Electric process under a working agreement with the distributor who is licensed. They will not, however, be given permission to record if the releasing arrangements are with an unlicensed organization.

Leslie Pearce to Direct MacLean's Talkie Scenes

The dialogue sequences in Douglas MacLean's Christie-Paramount vehicle, "The Carnation Kid," will be directed by Leslie Pearce, stage director. Work will begin on the talking treatment within the next few weeks. Pearce's work will dovetail with that of the silent version already done by E. Mason Hopper. Tests are being conducted at the Christie sound stages, following which Pearce will begin directing.

Hollingsworth, Crawford Sign for Vitaphone

Hollingsworth and Crawford, variety team, will be seen and heard in a Vitaphone presentation. Previous to their variety appearances, Hollingsworth was seen with Clara Kimball Young and Edna Goodrich. Miss Crawford was in stock with Lucille La Verne and has had important roles in a number of Jane Cowl's pieces.

Equipment Companies Speeding Up Production Work

INSTALLATIONS of sound reproducing devices in theatres will probably be made more rapidly in the future than they have been in the past as both Western Electric and RCA are now concentrating on the manufacturing end and rushing equipment with all possible haste. It was said by Western Electric officials some months ago that one thousand houses would be equipped by the first of 1929. According to advices now received that number has already been passed and there will likely be approximately 500 additional installments by Western Electric alone.

RCA announced its first installments would be made October 18 and that they would continue regularly filling orders as rapidly as possible. The first houses, of course, to be equipped by the Radio Corporation will be those of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum circuit. Contracts to equip that circuit were closed some weeks ago and they call for close to 700 of the devices. This necessarily will require considerable time.

but it is understood that service will be made in other houses while the K-A-O order is being filled. Just what the plans are of the RCA are not known, but it has been announced that they would acquire additional houses as rapidly as possible when they get straightened out with K-A-O.

According to an official of the Western Electric Company every effort is being made to take care of orders now on file as rapidly as possible and no discrimination is being made in the matter of equipment. With leading executives of the company in Chicago to speed up production additional equipment is being manufactured each week and more rapid progress made from week to week. Western Electric was conservative in considering the capacity of the plant when the announcement was originally made that but a thousand houses could be equipped by the first of the year. It is not unlikely that many exhibitors will get their equipment before the time originally specified.

Colony Amplification Device Brings Stage Show to Street

THE Colony Theatre, Universal house on Broadway, New York, has installed an amplification device in the lobby of the theatre that is bringing splendid results. It is a Phototone equipment used in re-amplifying Movietone records directly from the stage of the theatre and also amplifying Victrola records to make the performance continuous.

It is an exceptionally loud amplification, the loudest that has been produced on Broadway and the Broadway crowds passing the house hear everything that is going on inside. The laughter is distinctly heard as are Ben Bernie and his band and the dialogue in the Glenn Tryon picture, "Lonesome." A passerby on Broadway does everything but see the picture.

There are five amplifiers used in the "broadcasting" of the show. They are lined up under the marquee just back of the box-office and camouflaged from the view of the public in such a way that the passerby is unable to figure out just where the music is coming from or how the machine is operated.

The device is one that J. Maxwell Joice, exploitation expert, is responsible for, and Arthur Brilliant, manager of the theatre, says is extremely easy to handle. It is necessary, however, for one man to devote his time to the operation of the device while the amplification is being conducted.

The equipment includes a large instrument board, a dozen vacuum tubes, five magnavoxes and D. C. and A. C. current cables, with the microphone located in the orchestra pit. The amplification is done merely by the turning of a switch to reproduce the stage show and the laughter in the house. Victrola records are used when the stage show is not audible and of course it is necessary that a man be on hand to change these. That, however, and the switching of the current can all be accomplished by an inexperienced man.

Television Device Shows Executives Talking Films in Making

ELECTRICIANS are working on a novel television device for the use of studio executives at the First National coast studios. It is said the device is a telephone with a vision screen above that will enable film executives in their offices to see and hear scenes of the picture as they are being made on the stages. This will do away with the necessity of visits to sets where sound pictures are being made and thus eliminate the expense incidental to interruptions in the process of filming a talkie.

The telephone works on a dial system and is to be linked with regular inter-studio wires now in use. Already one projection room at First National is equipped to "broadcast" either by wire or radio waves films shown there simultaneously with their showing on the screen. At executives' offices and homes, radio receiving and television sets, combined and readily interchangeable, are being installed.

Universal Acquires Picture Rights to Stage Play, "The Climax"

CARL LAEMMLE has just closed for the acquisition of the screen and talking picture rights to "The Climax," Edward Locke stage success. Universal will adapt the drama into a talking picture for next season with stars of maximum voice and screen appeal.

Jean Hersholt is to be the star.

Renaud Hoffman is slated to direct "The Climax," under the supervision of Carl Laemmle, Jr., to whose credit goes the supervision of such Universal successes as "Lonesome," "We Americans," "The Last Warning," and, at the present time, "Broadway." Julian Josephson is at work on the continuity.

"The Climax" was first produced on the stage by Joe Weber in 1909 at the Weber's Theatre. Effingham Pinto, Leona Watson and Albert Brunning were in the cast. The play had a year's run on Broadway and then was roadshowed over the United States and Canada for several years.

Dr. De Forest Foresees Changes Coming in Sound Field

DR. LEE DE FOREST, inventor of the De Forest Phonofilm makes a number of interesting predictions regarding the future of sound pictures. His statements carry considerable weight as he is one of the real pioneers in this field. Among other things Dr. De Forest expresses it as his opinion that all disc devices will be interchangeable, as will all film sound reproduction devices. He also thinks that within the next two years there will be no silent pictures.

Dr. De Forest makes the enlightening statement that production costs on sound films at present are approximately 200 per cent higher than on silent pictures, but that this will be materially reduced when conditions become better regulated. Rentals will also be reduced when there is more of the sound product on the market. At present, he says, film rentals are up 200 per cent and higher, but that eventually they will probably reach a level of about 100 per cent in advance of silent pictures.

The all-dialogue features, in the opinion of De Forest, will not continue for any great length of time as the public will become tired of it. He foresees the use of dialogue in part, with spoken titles gradually being adopted and with sound effects and synchronized music. He looks upon the advent of sound pictures as a Godsend to the comedy producers, whose worn out slapstick humor will be supplanted with sound effects and dialogue.

The foreign problem is one of the greatest the American producers have to contend with, according to the inventor. As a final solution he sees the necessity of producing French pictures in France and in other countries for home consumption.

The matter of acoustics is one that is going to be difficult to overcome, he says.

From his observation he feels that some of the larger de luxe houses will find it difficult to produce proper effects because of their tremendous size. People sitting in the back rows of these houses will receive a distorted impression because of the long distance the sound must travel before reaching them. He is of the opinion that houses seating 6,000 will find it impossible to transmit dialogue so that all may hear equally well.

Paramount Starts First All-Talkie in East

Paramount has started its first full length 100 per cent dialogue picture in the east. It went before the camera during the week at the Astoria studios of the company. The feature is "The Letter," screen version of the stage success of the same name by Somerset Maugham. This will be Paramount's second all-dialogue film, the first being "Interference," which has been completed on the coast.

Jeanne Eagles has the leading role in "The Letter," while others in the cast are, Lady Tsen Mei, Chinese actress, Tamaki Yohiwara, Japanese character actor; Reginald Owen, O. P. Heggie, Herbert Marshall and Irene Brown.

"Command" Talkie Shows King, Prince of Wales

Through a reciprocal agreement a "talkie" picture which has already gained a distinction of a command performance before the King and Queen of England has been secured for America by General Talking Pictures Corporation. The King, and his son, The Prince of Wales, are seen in the film, which shows the traditional ceremony of "Trooping the Colour" by the famous Horse Guards on the Whitehall Parade just opposite Buckingham Palace. Music is provided all the way through the film by the massed Guards band. As soon as secretaries had reported upon the film a command performance of it was ordered by the King at Balmoral Castle.

Talking Sequences For "Gang War" Done

FBO has completed sequences for "Gang War" on the coast and "The Scoop," a talking prologue for the feature production at the Sound Studios, Inc., in the east. Olive Borden and Jack Pickford are featured in "Gang War." At Sound Studios, Inc., work was started this week on "The Joyride," a one-act talking prologue for "Taxi 13." It will be filmed as a one-act talking and singing short and can be used independently of the feature.

Robert Kane, president of Sound Studios and Bert Glennon, brought to New York to direct "Stepping High," FBO's first all-talking picture, are busy assembling a cast of legitimate players for the production. Two continuities are being prepared for the film. The picture continuity is being written by Frances Agnew, with Gene Markey, author of the piece, working on the dialogue. The RCA Photophone process will be used.

Alice White Will Sing in "Show Girl"

After having been shown in the silent version of Los Angeles and San Francisco, "Show Girl" will next be seen as a musical comedy with synchronization. It is a First National feature in which Alice White will be heard in two numbers written for the picture. "She's One Sweet Show Girl," written by Ted Ward and Edward Crossman, is the theme song. The other song is "Buy, Buy for Baby, or Baby Will Bye, Bye, You."

In the numbers Miss White will be flanked by a large chorus of show girls in costumes said to be as brilliant as they are scanty.

Jean Barrios Signed for Vitaphone Number

Jean Barrios, double-voiced singer and feminine impersonator, will be seen and heard in a Vitaphone presentation. Barrios has played every major circuit of the variety stage in America and recently completed a tour of Australia, New Zealand, the South Sea Islands and the Hawaiian Islands. His Vitaphone presentation is titled "Feminine Types."

Synchronizes Own Music on Tonophone

A Tonophone has been installed in the Idle Hour Theatre, Baltimore, by Herman A. Blum, proprietor. On the instrument Mr. Blum is able to furnish music for his pictures which he himself synchronizes. One person is required to attend the machine and it cost about $500 to install it is said. Last week Mr. Blum showed "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson, and synchronized the records with Jolson's songs with the picture.

They Do "Come Back" in Hollywood

Directors Considered "Washed Up" Stage a Strong Return

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

THEY do come back! Probably in no other industry in the world have as many people, who were considered "washed up" staged come-backs as rapidly as the directors in the motion picture field. Almost eight out of every ten directors now under contract to larger companies, have gone through a period of depression following either poor pictures or financial difficulties, and have been relegated to the field of "has-beens." To add strength to this fact, is the additional one that such "come-backs" have not been just for one picture, but for a series of them and in most cases, such directors are still going strong.

Perhaps the outstanding example of the past year is Josef Von Sternberg. Sternberg went for almost two years without a job. He was hailed as something of a genius with the making of "The Salvation Hunters," despite the varied greetings by critics of that opus. Following that he made a picture for Charles Chaplin starring Edna Purviance, called "A Woman of the Sea," of which nothing has been heard and undoubtedly never will. It is reported that Chaplin burned the negative rather than take any chance of its being seen. Sternberg knocked around Hollywood seeking a "break" until last year when he was given an opportunity to remake "Children of Divorce" for Paramount. His work in remaking this gave B. P. Schulberg sufficient added faith in Sternberg to entrust "Underworld" to him. Since then he has delivered "The Drag Net" and "Docks of New York" among others.

Irving Cummings was considered through for many months. Fox gave him another opportunity to show that he was still more than capable. His outstanding work since has been "Dressed to Kill." D. W. Griffith's troubles were mostly financial. It was difficult for Griffith to concentrate on story and direction while worrying about financing his productions. After "America" Hollywood wiseacres said, "Well, Griffith was great while he had the goods." He returned to pictures last year. He has since delivered "Drums of Love" and "Battle of the Sexes." Now "The Love Song," which is to be retitled, is reported better than those two.

Tod Browning found himself rapidly losing importance. FBO was his entrance to staging a comeback. On the strength of his directorial performances there M-G-M took him and since then he has been assigned to the best Lon Chaney's made. William Nigh was supposed to be "washed up" at M-G-M, particularly after he started on "Rose-Marie." He was assigned to Westerns until recently. "Four Walls" has proven that Nigh still has a kick and is very much alive. W. S. Van Dyke is another M-G-M come-back, after years with Westerns and serials, in his work with "White Shadows in the South Seas" on the strength of which he has been given "Trader Horn."

Jack Francis Dillon had been slipping at First National and then put over "Flaming Youth." Since then he has delivered many good ones, among them "The Perfect Flapper," and "The Noose."

Various reasons are assigned to the slumps or bad-spells into which directors get. Occasionally it is simply a matter of too much interference from executives and a subconscious sulky fit which reflects in a director's work. Other times it is just that the director has burned out his creative energy by overwork and is in need of a long rest to restore vitality. Again, in most cases, it is saddling directors with a series of poor stories which couldn't be made into a good picture except by a miracle.

Sidney Olcott Gives Advice to European Job-Seekers

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Menjou's Last, Under Present Contract

"THE CONCERT," in which Leo Dietrichstein appeared on the legitimate stage, will be Adolphe Menjou's last picture for Paramount under his present contract. When Menjou completes "Marquis Preferred," now in production, he is going to New York to attend to several legal matters. While there it is likely that he will discuss a new contract with Adolph Zukor. It will be recalled that Menjou, prior to taking up this contract with Paramount, could not reach an agreement with Paramount executives on the West Coast. His contract had expired and his terms were deemed too much by officials here. The new contract was secured in New York by Menjou in direct touch with Zukor himself. Menjou's present salary is reported as $7,500.

"The Concert" will be a remake. It was originally produced and released by the old Goldwyn company in 1921.

AMERICAN actors and directors, who are considering a trip to Europe in the belief that they will be signed by some foreign company immediately on the strength of their American reputations, should try to secure contracts and definite understandings in advance, to save much trouble. This is one of many sound, intelligent remarks made by Sidney Olcott during a conversation with a Motion Picture News representative.

Olcott had been quoted as stating that American actors and directors should not go to England or Germany in any case and it was to check on this that the interview took place.

"I made no such statement," the director said. "What I did, was to warn actors and directors about going to foreign countries on speculation."

He pointed out that there is a vast difference in salaries which a company will pay to an actor who is sent for by the company and to the actor who applies for work himself. It is natural that the player or director who is sought has more opportunity to get what he wants and that the one applying for work will have to accept what is offered.

Olcott spoke of the attitude taken by many Americans in regard to the foreign product, praising the work of English and German studios.

"We don't give them credit for half the progress they are making," he said, "and what's more, they are improving daily. Do you know, the best example of how we should regard them is given in a line Adolph Zukor pulled many years ago. At that time we were working in New York and one of the staff members came in laughing about a report that another firm had engaged a very high-priced man."

"Never laugh at a competitor," said Zukor, "watch him."

Foreign producers already have succeeded in legislating a market for themselves and they are now anxious to create the product worthy of it.

When asked what he thought of the quota laws and the foreign producers "legislating a market," Olcott again quoted Ralph Ince who once replied to a similar question: "Well. Haven't they a right to?"

"Talking Trailers" Open Up New Field

May Prove to Be a New School for Future Directors

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 15.—A new field has been opened in conjunction with studio publicity departments which may serve eventually as a school for future directors. This is the "talking trailer" originated by Warner Brothers for release in advance of all Vitaphoned features and now being used by Paramount, Universal and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The writing and directing of these trailers is assigned to a member of the studio publicity staff, the boys vying with each other for a display of originality and novelty in their making.

Hal Wallis

Hal Wallis, is most experienced, by virtue of being a pioneer and attached to Warner Brothers, and is responsible for the trailers preceding Vitaphoned productions. He heads the Warner West Coast publicity department. At Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the trailer making for Movietoned features has been placed in the hands of Pete Smith, who heads M-G-M's West Coast department. Pete himself also writes and directs them.

Moulton and Jacobson

Paramount inaugurated a similar department with "Abie's Irish Rose" on which a talking trailer was made recently. Herbert Moulton of the publicity department wrote and directed and as a result has been given charge of all such trailers since. In the past two weeks he has made one for "Interference" and one for "Half Hour." Universal, which is now establishing such a department, also, has an experienced man in Sam B. Jacobson, director of their West Coast publicity. Jacobson conceived and supervised the production of the one reel "Jammie Novelties."

Fox has made but one thus far, for "Mother Knows Best" and nothing is definite as to whether they will continue them.

How One Lady Fell for Hollywood

A FAMOUS opera singer, appearing in Los Angeles last week, heard that a picture producer was in the audience during one of the performances. Ambitious to break into pictures, she started to ad lib business into her operatic role, with a view to impressing the producer with her pantomimic ability.

The "pay-off" came in the big death scene, in which she usually dies gently, slowly, even gracefully. Instead of sinking slowly to the floor and there expiring, she suddenly took a series of falls right on her seat, a la Laurel-Hardy. She took about six of them, and not knowing how to break her falls, suffered bruises for the rest of the week. She believed falls were necessary for motion picture acting!

The producer was "wised up" as to the why and said, "Tell her I'll pass the word to Mack Sennett."

Hollywood Has Brand New Gag

THE old gag of "dot's a fine buttonhole" has finally been displaced in motion pictures. Its successor is the result of an occurrence reported to have actually happened last week. David Selznick, Paramount production executive, dropped into his tailor's to be fitted with some new suits. The tailor was very busy and Selznick, who was pressed for time, finally said, "Well, Abe, send your cutters down to my office and they can fit me there."

"Please Mr. Selznick, I can't do that."
"Why?"
"I sent two cutters to Irving Thalberg last week and lost them!"

At present indications are that they won't. Robert Yost wrote the trailer for "Mother Knows Best" and John Blystone, who directed the picture, megaphoned the trailer-making.

Change in Title

Because they failed to recall that the Shaberts had presented an operetta some years ago with the title of "The Love Song," United Artists are now seeking a new name for D. W. Griffith's current production. The original title was "La Paiva" and shortly before it went into production, was changed to "The Love Song" and under that title has been heavily exploited. A new billing is now being sought.

The change in titles will necessitate also, a change in lyrics for the theme song written by Irving Berlin.

Charge to Experience

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer completed a one reel Gus Edwards revue as its first talking short last week on its newly completed sound stage. Edwards himself appeared in it, with a cast of some 40 actors. Edwards having staged the song and dance numbers. The reel is reported to have cost about $40,000. This cost, however, has charged to it much technical and dialog experimentation which will not be necessary in the making of future shorts. The cost of others to be made will be considerably less as a result of this experimenting.

"U" Signs Luddy

Edward I. Luddy has been signed by Universal to direct Arthur Lake's first feature length comedy for that company. A definite title has not been selected. Lake just completed the series of one reel "Horace in Hollywood" for "U." Luddy comes from First National where he was comedy constructor with Mervyn Le Roy on "Ritzzy Rosy." Prior to that he directed several shorts for "U."

Christie Reopens

The Christie Studios will reopen next week after a shut-down period which went into effect August 1. Billy Dooley is winding up a vaudeville tour and returns to the studio to begin a new "goofy sailor" series next week. The first will be "Gobs of Love." Bobby Vernon is back from the Good Samaritan Hospital where he underwent a spinal operation made necessary by the falls he has taken during the past 13 years. Jack Duffy starts a "Sandy MacDuff" comedy next week.

Drake with M-G-M

Oliver Drake is writing "The Gringo Cavalier" for M-G-M. This will be used as a starring picture for Tim McCoy. Drake went over to M-G-M from F B O.

Morgan and Chaney

Byron Morgan is writing an original story which will be used as a Lon Chaney starring picture for M-G-M.

College Girls

"Mary of Vassar" is title of original screen story Josephine Lovett is writing for M-G-M. It will have a girl college locale.

With Tiffany-Stahl

Production on "The Girl Who Came Back" will be started by Tiffany-Stahl on October 20 under the direction of James Flood. Eve Southern will be starred. Meanwhile "Helen of London," in which Miss Southern was to begin work next week, has been postponed until December, which will permit her to take a vacation of several weeks between pictures.

Muni for Short

Muni Wiesenfreund, the legitimate actor signed by Fox to appear in Movietone productions, has shortened his name to Paul Muni, as more practical for professional purposes. His last appearance on the stage was in "Four Walls" in New York.

Back to Legitimate

Bert Lytell is now returning to New York from Hollywood, again leaving pictures for the stage. He has just completed "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" for Columbia, which followed his engagement in the male lead opposite Pauline Frederick in "On Trial" for Warner Brothers.

Columbia's Voice

"The Donovan Affair" will be the first sound and dialogue picture made by Columbia when installation of its Western Electric equipment is completed.

Goes Talkie

Robert Hopkins, with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is switching from titles to dialogue writing. His first assignment on the lot is the talk for "Casino Gardens," which will be an M-G-M two reel Movietone.

Christie Signs Pearce

A. Leslie Pearce, well known Los Angeles stage director, has been signed by Christie to direct the dialogue version of "The Carnation Kid." This is Douglas MacLean's first talkie, to be released through Paramount.

Heath with "U"

Arch B. Heath has been placed in charge of all Universal Movietone productions. Heath directed Universal's first talking picture, "The Melody of Love" which was quietly made and unexploited until after several previews.

Conducted by An Exhibitor for Exhibitors

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

CLEARING HOUSE FOR

BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

Let's Get Down to Mother Earth

I would venture to say that during the past six months I have interviewed several hundred theatre owners and exhibitors located in dozens of different states. As the exhibitor member of the staff of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS they have accorded me every possible courtesy and talked a lot more freely than they would to anyone else. In these different conversations many important things were discussed but one particular point remained in my mind:

M-A-N-A-G-E-R-S. Spell it out so you won't make a mistake about what we are saying. Why is it that when the average theatre owner, circuit supervisor, etc., engages a manager, they seem to expect that within a week or two after he starts to work, that the whole town will be painted red; that the theatre will be packing them out to the curb and that he must be a cross-eyed wonder? Answer some of those questions for me. And tell me another: Why should they look for a lot of noise and excitement instead of a good sound executive in whose hands they are satisfied to place the operation of their theatre. Surely the most important part of a manager's job is to be a sound and steady man capable of handling the help, of seeing that the theatre is properly and cleanly conducted, to make the patrons comfortable and satisfied after they come in. Every other sound business is conducted along such lines, why not the theatre game?

A Message to the General Managers

I have met and talked with managers of all kinds, some who have every qualification for the job they hold, but if the business is a little off, regardless of the reason or reasons, they begin to worry about their jobs. WHY? I'll tell you why. Because the people they work for have the mistaken notion that whenever business is off the manager is to blame and all they have to do is to get another man and presto—the gold starts to roll in again. Bunk. In their own hearts they know it's the bunk, but they can't seem to get it through their heads. LET'S GET DOWN TO EARTH, you great big theatre owners, you mighty general managers and all others whose business it is to engage theatre managers. If you are looking for a manager to run your theatre, be reasonable and give him your full co-operation, allow him plenty of time to get accustomed to his new surroundings, to see the kind of a theatre he is running, to see the kind of patronage he must cater to, and to get a line on every conceivable angle so that he can best prepare himself to run your house properly and profitably. One is as important as the other. You will find darned few houses run profitably that are not run properly.

The Manager's Round Table Club

In the larger cities this quick change managing system has reached the point where a man starts to look for another job the same time he starts on a new one. He cannot comfortably feel that his present job is more than a week to week affair. His mind is never at ease. Never settled with the thought that his job is a good one and that he could devote every moment, every thought and every effort to putting it over. To run it economically and profitably and not to be constantly worried.

Look Them Over in the Small Towns

Fortunately, in the smaller towns, good managers are at a premium and generally when a theatre owner or circuit secures a man they are more than willing to give him every chance to make good. They can't help themselves because they would have a hell of a time finding men to change as often as they do it in the larger cities. For this reason alone, I would unhesitatingly recommend to many big city managers that they seek connections out of the larger cities and get into the smaller towns where they are honest-to-goodness managers in every sense of the word; whether they are the most important citizens in the town and where they are really their own bosses.

Lawrence's Police Popularity Contest

From C. F. Lawrence, manager of Schine's Ohio Theatre in Lima, Ohio, come the details of this unusual contest which he successfully put over and which brought him plenty of free publicity and attracted much attention towards his theatre.

The leading newspaper ran a fine editorial about the local cops and on the same day the announcement appeared telling all about the contest. From among the clippings Mr. Lawrence sent me I am reproducing one that best describes the entire idea. If you read it through you will readily recognize the possibilities of this unique stunt.

Who is Lima's most popular cop? The Lima Star, cooperating with the management of Schine's Ohio theatre, is endeavoring to find the man on the Lima police force who has the greatest number of friends.

The officer chosen will be presented a gold medal, the gift of William Boyd, star of "The Cop," which opens a three-day engagement at Schine's Ohio theatre, Thursday.

Lima police officers have a wide reputation for their efficiency, their unfailing courtesy and their friendliness. Each man on the force doubtless has made hundreds of friends in Lima and surrounding towns.

Names of the officers should be mailed or brought to the office of The Lima Star. The contest will close at 6 p.m., Thursday, and the winning officer's name will be announced in Friday's issue of The Star.

The medal is to be presented at the Friday evening performance at the theatre by C. F. Lawrence, manager.

For the convenience of voters, a coupon will be printed each day in The Star until the close of the contest. You need not sign your name. But be sure to vote for your favorite policeman.

Who Is Your Favorite Cop?

Name
This coupon is printed for your convenience. Mail or bring it to the Star to indicate your choice in the Lima Star-Schine's Ohio "Popular Policeman's Contest."

In Mr. Lawrence's letter we are pleased to note that business conditions in Lima have improved considerably and that everything points to a fine season. Lots of luck to you, Lawrence, and be sure to keep us posted on your activities.

A New Member With New Ideas

Leon O. Mumford, manager of the Roth Strand Theatre out in Summit, New Jersey, recently joined the rapidly swelling ranks of the CLUB and together with his application he sent us some clippings and notes on how he handled the picture "Babe Comes Home," which he played in his house.

Now, we all know how we like to talk about the great way "WE" put over "Ben Hur," "Big Parade," "What Price Glory?", etc., etc., without giving the producers or the east any credit for helping one single bit. But what we should boast about is the "not so good" pictures that we put across.

There is an ancient story in which an editor sending out a new reporter told him that when a dog bites a man it is not news, but when a man bites a dog, that is news. So we will steal that editor's stuff and say: "When a manager puts over a great, fine picture that is not such important news, but when a manager puts over a 'punk' picture, that's what I do call news." And mighty interesting news at that.

Round Table Club

So all of this chatter leads up to Mumford and his stunt on "Babe Comes Home" and just between you and I, it was NOT such a good picture. (That's treating it mildly). But he sold the picture by dating it during the World's Series and by advertising the fact that a bat and baseball autographed by the Babe himself would be given free to the kids. You all know the answer. Baseball was in the air, Babe was on everyone's tongue and the mat he ran of Babe "socking" the pill was enough to attract anyone's attention, just as it would on the sporting page.

We want to hear from Summit, N. J., again.

Don't Wake 'Em Up Let Them Sleep

While out in the middle west this past summer I met a lot of good fellows, many of whom promised to keep me flooded with lots of copy for the CLUB pages.

Now, I'm not complaining about any lack of material for publication, but I would like to know what happened to all those "live-wires" that suddenly went dead. What happened boys? I've watched the news-columns of the daily papers but failed to note any earthquakes, tornadoes, etc., out in your territory. "Ducky" Meyers, so full of "pep" on that Canada boat ride. My friend Heihle from out Newark, Ohio way, perhaps he has been too busy opening that new beautiful theatre of his. And "Tim" Roberts who sold me the idea of that Cedar Point convention; "Hey there, "Tim," how come all this silence? You were not that way up at Sandusky." And talking about Sandusky reminds me that I'd like to have friend Hemelion tell me how things are getting along up there. That town holds some fond memories of a very pleasant intermission of my trip, so I'm hoping for some word.

These are about the only boys who I've lost track of through silence. I'm glad the others kept their word, and what a kick I do get every time I find another letter from one of them. I'll say it was a grand trip, and I sure will want to meet the boys again next year. Then I'll be better known to them personally and otherwise. So hurry on ye winter months.

Answering Lamp and Other Queries

Since the publication of our little say about lamps and theatre lighting, I have received quite a few letters pertaining to this subject. Many have asked for information about lamp sizes and prices and I suggest they write to their nearest theatre supply office for a copy of the latest lamp schedule. This will give all the necessary information.

We are in receipt of a letter asking for information about two theatre managers. As this letter did not contain an address we could not reply. Please make it a point, when making inquiries, to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a prompt reply.

Here and there among my mail I find peculiar questions, but there is one that pops up quite often in various forms. It is about theatre managers. So I have decided to write a short story on "What is a theatre manager" in which I will give my conception of this all-important human being of the theatre.

All those whose queries touched on this subject are requested to await this little story as it will contain all the answers to all the questions. Besides a little of my own thoughts. O. K.?

Key City Reports

New York City

WHAT a good picture plus sound and synchronization can do was last week demonstrated at the Capitol where "Our Dancing Daughters" (M-G-M) set a new high attendance mark. This picture is going top speed the current week, lines at every show extending along the better part of the Capitol block. While Chaney's "While the City Sleeps" is announced for next week, it appears that "Dancing Daughters" could be held if bookings made it permissible.

The above performance was the highlight of the week among the large Broadway theatres, neither the Paramount nor Roxy registering anything out of the ordinary run of business. With the smaller but higher priced shows the Winter Garden and Al Jolson's "Singing Fool" (W. B.) continues to do the same whale of a business which immediately followed its premiere a few weeks ago.

At the Roxy Fox's "Mother Machree," after playing to ordinary business among the $2 patrons, got by with a comfortable week and the Paramount could do no better than that with "The Mating Call" (Par.). Both these houses felt the strong pull from other theatres with the result that they were under their usual marks.

Healthier signs were registered at the Strand, where a First National sound picture, "The Night Watch," with Billie Dove, gave this house a very good week. Indications here and at other houses playing sound shows are that they are the ones getting the best breaks these days.

The two new ones that came into the Rivoli and Rialto last week are not running any neck and neck race. Stroheim's "Wedding March" (Par.) with sound and synchronization is out in front and did very well for the first week-end which, added to the last days of "Two Lovers" (U. A.) gave the house a satisfactory break. The Rialto with last days of "The Patriot" finished o. k. Present reports on the current offering, "Battle of the Sexes," are too meagre to indicate what it is going to do. The Colony keeps on with "Lonesome" (U.) doing better than the house has done in some time. The Cameo finally called "Q Ships" a run after a four weeks' stay at average Cameo business.

With one or two exceptions practically all of the top priced shows turned in satisfactory gates for the week. Old vet, "Wings," at the Criterion for over a year, still manages to keep right up in the running with its $2 mates, small house, fine picture and good Broadway location being the answer.

Another offering which has been making an enviable showing is "White Shadows" (M-G-M) at the Astor. This sound picture has set a most consistent pace right from the very start.

At the very heels of this one is First National's "Lilac Time" at the Central, another sound picture which is still going along finely after two months. Fox's "Four Devils" gave the Gaiety brisker trade than it has enjoyed in several weeks and at the Globe, after just ordinary business "Mother Knows Best" is taking a rest preparatory to a showing at the Roxy in the very near future. Fox has announced the end of the lease on this house, which is to revert to musical shows.

Columbia's "Submarine" at the Embassy continues at a strong pace and Warner's "Terror" at Warners checked about the same as the previous week.

Seattle

"LILAC TIME" at the Fifth Avenue Theatre was the big money attraction in this fair city last week, playing to steady large patronage all week and coming close to the house record established by "Street Angel," just a couple of months ago.

Business above average was registered at the Seattle Theatre also. "The First Kiss" was the screen attraction, fairly well received. The drawing card, however, was a personal appearance of Harry Langdon. A well-rounded bill that played to better than average business.

The Music Box Theatre opened "The Singing Fool" as its third long run attraction and this film bids fair to exceed every house record held by any picture in any Seattle theatre. Long standing lines day and night attest the more-than-capacity business that the picture is doing. It looks like at least six weeks of big business for this one.

Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre didn't fare quite as well. "Out of the Fog" was the attraction, but it was a let-down as far as calibre of films goes, and business was not up to the usual big gross. One week was all for this picture—a good week, but below the recent high levels.

"The Big Killing" played to moderately good houses at the 25c Coliseum Theatre. "The Road to Ruin" finished its second "sexual" week at Universal's Columbia Theatre to fair business, but the total two weeks' gross was decidedly better than recent averages. "A Tragedy of Youth" at the Embassy was a fairly popular program attraction that played to fair business for four days.

"The Butter and Egg Man" was well received at the Orpheum, with a good vaudeville bill, and "None but the Brave" enjoyed a fair share of patronage at the Pantages Theatre.

Chicago

"THE SINGING FOOL," which played to capacity business at the McVickers Theatre, was the sensation of the week in the Chicago loop, although other houses reported excellent business.

The Chicago had as its feature picture "Moran of the Marines," a Spitalny musical production and a stage show which was up to its usual standard, the program drawing well.

"The Man Who Laughs" proved a good drawing card at the Roosevelt. The Oriental did an average business with "Women They Talk About" and Paul Ash and his gang on the stage, offering Sunny Spain.

The dominance of sound pictures in the loop now is complete, installation of sound apparatus finally being completed at the United Artists Theatre, which presented "The Battle of the Sexes," Griffith's first sound picture, and played to good business.

The Granada continued its "big name" policy, Raymond Hitchcock heading the stage show and "The Scarlet Lady" was the screen feature, big business resulting. The same picture was offered at the Marbro, which, in connection with a big stage show, was a good box office bet.

Other neighborhood houses which had good weeks included the Capitol, where "The Night Watch" was the screen feature and Roy Deitrich presided on the stage; the Paradise, with "Our Dancing Daughters," and the Uptown and Tivoli, both of which offered "Lilac Time" in sound.

Baltimore

WITH a week of clear weather beginning cool and winding up hot Saturday, the business done by eleven first run pictures here during the week beginning Monday, October 8, went from excellent for some and poor for others.

This was the first week for the indefinite engagement of "The Singing Fool," starring Al Jolson, at Warners' Metropolitan and the business done was record breaking.

Coming next to the Metropolitan for good business was Loew's Century, where "Oh Kay," coupled with a stage act, proved an excellent puller.

"Fazil," with sound and musical synchronization, proved a good pulling attraction at the New Theatre for its second week but the attendance was not what was expected. It seems that the public did not like the sad ending.

"The King of Kings" with sound, song and musical synchronization, had a fairly good second week at the Rivoli, but it was intended at the beginning of the run to hold it four or five weeks. But the second week let it out.

"The Wedding March" started out good at Loew's Stanley but gradually decreased in sales value.

At Loew's Valencia "A Certain Young Man" was the feature film attraction. Business was fair until the latter part of the week, when it picked up somewhat.

At Ford's Theatre, the legitimate house, "Submarine" was shown without sound but with an orchestra twice daily with the admission prices $1 top matinees and $1.50 top nights. Business was poor but this was to be expected with top prices for regular first run houses here ranging from 50 to 60 top nights.

At the Keith-Albee Hippodrome, "The Street of Illusion" proved an entertaining film attraction on the same bill with five acts of Keith-Albee family time vaudeville. But the attendance was only fair during the week.

Poor business was done by the Ufa production at the Little Theatre by "At the Edge of the World," formerly titled "Hell's Laughter." Business picked up a little toward the end of the week but not much.

"A Soft Living" was the feature film attraction at the Keith-Albee New Garden with the Mel Klee Revue. Business was only fair during the week.

At the Palace burlesque house "The Albany Night Boat" went over fairly good, but this house makes a mistake in not showing the feature film to wind up the show.

Des Moines

INDIAN Summer in Des Moines found good business at the theatres with "Wedding March" playing at the Des Moines and "The Terror" at the Capitol. "Wedding March" was judged slow and unwieldy in many places but Von Stroheim was complimented for his work in the film. It did a pretty fair business.

The Capitol probably got the edge on the trade this week with a big bill, the opening of the sound pictures equipment there, the Publix Shows, etc., etc. Business was marvelous. Ramon Navarro's "Forbidden Hours" did a very nice business at the Strand Theatre.

"The Singing Fool" at the Rialto at Fort Dodge broke all house records of every kind showing for the full week to record crowds.

Dallas

THE Dallas first run theatres have checked out good business for the past week, although no big business was recorded. Several things are to be taken into consideration, however. The weather has been very sultry and uncomfortable and the State Fair of Texas is now going on in Dallas, and the widely advertised stage show, "The Desert Song," is showing each afternoon and night at the Fair Park Auditorium and is certainly getting the patronage. The unusually large number of fair visitors have kept receipts up for the theatres and for this reason receipts for the week are satisfactory.

At the Melba, "Wings" rounded out its second successful week and held up from start to finish and turned the patrons away well pleased. This big attraction was offered at regular prices and was easily the best picture offered during the last two weeks and was successful in getting the largest patronage.

"Fazil" accounted for average business at the Majestic. This picture was synchronized and seemed to please although it failed to get the big business. James Coughlin and company, headlining the Interstate Vaudeville bill, accounted for a good part of the week's gross.

At the Palace "While the City Sleeps" accounted for average business and was one of the best liked of Chaney's pictures. More business was expected on this attraction but failed to develop. The Public stage presentation, "Rah Rah Rah," was an improvement over the late stage offerings and scored.

"The King of Kings" at the Capitol turned in a good gross for its second week's showing and received an unusual amount of favorable comment. The various churches of Dallas have done much in the way of free publicity for the picture and the gross for the two weeks showing is very good.

"Tea for Three" and "Take Me Home" brought a fair gross to the Old Mill Theatre.

At the Arcadia "No Other Woman" and "Three Ring Marriage" checked off a good patronage.

Albany

IT took three members of "Our Gang" to demonstrate in Albany and Troy last week the possibilities of personal appearances on the part of screen stars in the way of attracting business. The crowds were so great at Proctor's Grand in Albany that an extra show was staged on Saturday, and even at that the walls of the house fairly bulged. Next in line in the way of business getting came the "King of Kings," running the entire week at the Mark Strand in Albany, and a like period at the Troy Theatre in Troy. In Albany, the picture had been road-shown and this fact undoubtedly brought smaller crowds. The matinees, however, were exceptionally good. The picture had not previously been shown in Troy and as a result the Troy Theatre played to bigger business than the Mark Strand, and on some evenings the Troy house was jammed to capacity.

The Leland, in Albany, used "The Actress" last week to satisfactory, but not exceptional business. The picture ran about, however, on "Captain Salvation," which played the Leland the corresponding week last year. It should be borne in mind that the Capitol Theatre, playing legitimate in Albany, offered stiff competition during the week, while midsummer weather during the last of the week cut into business to no small extent. The Clinton Square Theatre in Albany played to exceptional business last week in its program of double features first run, using "Beautiful but Dumb" and "Undressed," the titles seemingly attracting the crowds.

Neighborhood houses in Albany report normal business for the week.

In Troy, the Lincoln split the week with "The Midnight Taxi" and the "Goodbye Kiss," each playing to satisfactory business. The Mark Ritz, in Albany, used "The Goodbye Kiss" last week and found it a fairly good business getter.

Reports from the rural sections indicate that business is holding up well except in a few scattered districts.

In Syracuse, "The Singing Fool" is going over so heavily that it is to be held for a third week at the Stanley house, something new for that city, while in Elmira, the same picture was held over for a second week.

Tampa

YOU can call it Indian Summer, or just plain "continued summer," but, we have it. Straw hats still reign supreme and the coats are still in the moth-balls. The Sunday beach parties seem to be on the wane and the theatres are getting a better break.

Last Sunday the Tampa played to the largest Sunday of the year. Not of the summer, if you please, but since the holiday week of last year. "The Docks of New York" was the feature that drew this record business. The following three days did not hold up; in fact, they went a little under average, but the big Sunday carried the first half over to better than average. "The Show Girl" featured the last half went over to about average takings.

The talkies didn't do so well the first half. "A Sawdust Paradise," with sound, was the feature, with four Vitaphone acts and the Movietone News, as added attractions. The combined program failed to draw the average of this house. With a bad ram, and the opening of the Radio Show in opposition, the mid-week opening of the all-talking feature, "The Terror," was big. This picture is pulling fine and it looks like it will hold up for the ten day run and give the Victory a satisfactory gross.

The Strand had a good Sunday with "Beaware of Blondes" and an average Monday. "Brotherly Love" pulled just a little over average, and "Horsemen of the Plains" held 'em up to average.

The Franklin, second run, suffered a little from the big draw at the Tampa on Sunday and that day dropped a little with "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" featured. "Four Walls" and "Partners in Crime" both drew nicely, keeping receipts up to average.

Indianapolis

OPTIMISTIC predictions of Indianapolis exhibitors for a pick-up in fall movie business were fulfilled last week. Indications are that good conditions will continue.

Managers were elated over the general increase in business brought about by stronger pictures and favorable local conditions. Neighborhood houses report a gain along with the first run houses which have offered augmented programs.

"The Whip" at the Indiana and Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" copped the crowds last week. The Jolson picture was held a second week at the Apollo and played to a capacity house practically every performance.

The Circle did good business with "Uncle Tom's Cabin," but receipts were believed to be somewhat less than the other houses.

Lon Chaney in "While the City Sleeps" at the Loew's Palace was popular.

"Simba" at the Murat drew heavily but did not detract from the first run houses.

Atlanta

LEWIS Capitol rounded out a good week with its second sound picture, "While the City Sleeps." Business did not reach the high water mark set last week with "Our Dancing Daughters," but it could not have been expected that the Capitol could repeat that brilliant performance.

Keith's Georgia ran neck and neck with Loew's Capitol for first place in box office results. Bebe Daniels in "Take Me Home" was the feature picture and is accredited with drawing patrons. However, there is no gainsaying that the vaudeville show at Keith's actually took first honors with patrons.

The Howard dropped far below its average business with "The Wedding March." Although critics were practically unanimous in praise of certain sequences bearing the unmistakable stamp of genius—notably the Corpus Christi Day pageant—and though cordial praise was bestowed upon von Stroheim, it is equally true that "The Wedding March" failed to show box-office strength. The receipts were distinctly disappointing. Incidentally, "The Wedding March" is the second sound picture to be presented under the "whole show on the screen" policy.

The Rialto Theatre fared moderately well with "The Midnight Taxi." Several talking sequences were favorably received and the week is regarded as satisfactory.

The Metropolitan did about the average business with "Love Over Night." It opened to slow business, but increased as word-of-mouth advertising spread the word that the picture was more than ordinarily pleasing as a program offering.

At the Tudor Theatre two breezy Westerns split the week, each gaining favorable reaction. The first half brought "Captain Careless" and "Hello, Cheyenne" closed the week.

Loew's Grand, continuing its split-week, second-run policy offered "The Crowd" the first three days and "The Cardboard Lover" the last half of the week. Business is reported only fair.

Minneapolis

"WINGS" continued on its record-breaking march in Minneapolis by doing a magnificent business at the Strand its fourth week and holding over still a fifth. No other picture in the history of Minneapolis has ever had such a run as this. The showing of "Wings" is the more remarkable because it had a two weeks run at the Metropolitan Theatre last winter as a road-show. "The Gold Rush" played at the Strand four weeks, but it did less business in that time than "Wings" did in three weeks. Now "Wings" is on its fifth week, and has the all-time attendance record safely sewed up as far as Minneapolis is concerned.

Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" did an excellent business at the State as everyone thought it would have stayed over for a second week. Billie Dove in "The Night Watch" did just about the average business at the Minnesota. This film was supplemented by a Public stage show called "Step This Way." The Hennepin-Orpheum had a poor week but this was due to a vaudeville program that didn't get over, rather than to the picture, "Craig's Wife," which made a favorable impression. Pantages featured "Man, Woman and Wife" with its regular vaudeville program and found it a fair box office attraction.

The Lagoon, an outlying house, tried a revival week, and show such pictures as "Robin Hood," "Broken Blossoms," "The Dark Angel" and "Orphans of the Storm" for a day each. The Rialto and Loring, both neighborhood houses, did good business with "Street Angel," while the Granada, Minneapolis' newest and most elaborate neighborhood house, showed "Tenderloin" with good results.

THEATRE WANTED

Has a Manager and a world of business. Will accept a position in any theatre. Address: Box 399, Motion Picture News, 729 Seventh Ave., New York.

Cleveland

THE down-town first run houses have continued to draw capacity audiences. Interest in the new sound pictures grows keener each week. All of the houses are advertising extensively, and some of them are exploiting as well. But the effort is showing the desired results, and even a spell of the hottest October weather on record has failed to lessen public interest in the new screen productions.

"Wings" opened to remarkable business at the Stillman last Sunday, when they had to stop selling admissions, and refunded money to patrons in the lobby. This was the first popular priced showing of this screen classic. However, it had played a record run of thirteen weeks at the Colonial Theatre at road show prices late into the spring. Business kept up all week at the Stillman, and, of course, the picture is being held over.

"The Wedding March" opened up very big at the Allen. Every local critic gave it a big boost, some saying it ranks among the best pictures ever made. Although no records were broken, it showed a good record at the end of the week.

"The Docks of New York" packed Keith's Palace for every performance. The picture was very well liked. In addition a $500,000 Fur Show was put on as an added attraction. However, the picture stood up on its merits, both as to story and direction.

"The Hit of the Show" made a real hit at Keith's 105th Street Theatre the first half of the week. Story, continuity, and presentation were excellent, and it mingled laughter and sadness successfully.

"Fleetwing" was well liked at Keith's East 105th Street the last half of the week, and did satisfactory business.

"The Patriot" and "Two Lovers" divided the week's honors at the Park for first run neighborhood showings. Both did just average business although highly recommended by critics. Both had highly successful downtown runs.

Neighborhood houses quoted the high temperature as their alibi for a fairly poor week. The fact is, however, that neighborhood theatres have not yet felt the upward trend of the movie business. The downtown houses are all enjoying success way ahead of last year. This boost is still confined to the downtown houses which are playing the new pictures and which are equipped with sound installations. Cleveland neighborhood houses are still silent with the exception of the Circle and the Last Side, and the Lincoln on the West Side.

Legitimate theatre competition was keen but did not hurt.

Ottawa

THE ticket-vending machines clicked merrily at Ottawa, Ontario, theatres during the week of October 8 and mid-season show enthusiasm was in evidence.

Most of the film fans took in "Two Lovers" at the Regent Theatre and this colorful costume production gave satisfaction all around.

Big crowds also saw "Loves of an Actress" with Pola Negri at B. F. Keith's Theatre.

"The Patent Leather Kid" fell short of being a real success at the Centre Theatre, in the estimation of patrons. It is hardly suited to Canadian audiences.

Jack Holt was the name that attracted good crowds to the Imperial Theatre for "The Water Hole." The title did not mean anything but once you got into the story interest was aroused and maintained.

The majority of pictures at the neighborhood houses were substantial productions, particularly "Laugh, Clown Laugh" at the Rex Theatre, which enjoyed relatively better business than for its first local run at the Regent. "The Coward" at the Rex Theatre during the last three days, was about average in quality.

The Fern Theatre did better with "The Mysterious Lady," first half, than with "Heroes in Blue" during the last three days. The juveniles liked "Heroes in Blue."

"Foreign Devils" had the crowds, particularly the kids, all worked up at the Commedia Theatre, while "The Gay Retreat" provided good comedy entertainment for all for three days.

The theatres in Hull, Quebec, had real box office attractions. "The White Sister" at the Laurier Theatre made a decisive impression with French-Canadian patronage and good crowds were the rule. Norma Shearer is well-liked in Hull, partly because of her Montreal connections and her "After Midnight" was eminently pleasing at the Capitol Theatre.

Milwaukee

BUSINESS in the down town theatres took a little slump this week. Things were still rather lively but by contrast with last week's unusually good business, the crowds seemed not quite so large. The weather for the past week has been sweltering, a throw back to the summer months.

A strange sight greeted the downtown office workers at about 10 every morning last week—a long queue forming in front of the Garden waiting for the ticket office to open. The Garden is showing "Singing Fool" and thus far all records set by any picture at the Garden have been so badly shattered that the management predicts the picture will have an eight week run. The lobby of the theatre is packed at practically all times of the day. Business just could not be better.

"King of Kings" closed its second week at the Alhambra with a very good record to its credit. It played to very sizable audiences throughout its stay. "Four Sons" at the Strand will be held over for a third week. Crowds are still flocking to see this picture. "Scarlet Lady" at the Merrill had a very successful week. "Win That Girl" at the Wisconsin drew just fair business. The Majestic's feature, "Our Dancing Daughters," received such encouraging patronage that it will be held over for an additional week. The Orpheum offered an unusually strong bill and kept the house well filled at every performance. Its photoplay feature was "Show Girl." The film at the Riverside was "Love Over Night." Business here too was good.

Neighborhood houses had a moderately good week. "Glorious Betsy" succeeded in drawing good business to the Oriental and Tower Theatres. "Lights of New York" played to fair houses at the Garfield, Uptown and Modjeska. The Zenith enjoyed very good patronage during the showing of "Honor Bound." "The Gaucho" was very well attended at the Venetian. "The Mysterious Lady" drew fair patronage to the Egyptian.

Kansas City

THERE was little cause for complaint, in so far as the weekly attendance was concerned, from Kansas City exhibitors. Cooler weather and a good line-up of pictures proved sufficient to lure patrons away from radios and bridge parties.

At the Mainstreet Dorothy Mackaill in "The Whip" drew well all week, the nightly attendance holding up exceptionally well. Lon Chaney at Loew's Midland also drew good all week in "While the City Sleeps," the matinees drawing a bit better than usual. At the Pantages "The Street of Illusion" packed them in all week, both afternoon and night, while "King of Kings" had a fairly good second week's run at the Globe.

"Caught in the Fog" drew slightly better than the average picture at the Newman, while "Phyllis of the Follies" did a big business at the Uptown Theatre.

Nothing additional in the way of newspaper space or exploitation was employed by any of the theatres.

Pittsburgh

THE Stanley Theatre did a sensational business with "The Singing Fool," accompanied by Vitaphone. Absolute S.R.O. at all performances, and S.R.O. in Pittsburgh at 11:30 a. m. is quite a rarity. This is one of the greatest pictures of all time, and hundreds of patrons returned to see production a second time. (Follows immediately into the Grand, another Stanley house, for an indefinite run.)

Loew's Penn had a big week's business with "Excess Baggage." Though somewhat different from the usual picture in which William Haines is seen, this one is not up to the Haines average. The Public unit, "Blossoms," on the stage, was the most pretentious yet shown here.

"Wings" stood 'em up all week at the Regent in the East End, after it had already played two weeks in the downtown section.

The Aldine had a good week with "The Air Circus," although the film is not nearly so good as such other airplane stories as "Lilac Time" and "Wings."

The Grand and Liberty played "Oh Kay," and though Colleen Moore has a big following here, the film played to but average audiences. Probably suffered because of the keen competition.

"None but the Brave" at the Davis proved a mildly amusing feature comedy, and business for the week was average.

"The River Woman" at the Alhambra brought a fair week's business.

"Two Lovers" did a little better than average at the Cameraphone.

Birmingham

THE past week proved an excellent tonic for Birmingham box-offices. The Alabama, with stage shows eliminated, seemed to bear out the assertion that Birmingham is, primarily, a picture town. "Lilac Time" (F. N.) had a very good week. The Ritz, with five acts of Keith vaudeville and William Fox's "Plastered in Paris," also had a good week. The Empire, reopening after having been dark for several months, had very good business with M-G-M's "While the City Sleeps." The Trianon with "Out of the Ruins" (F. N.) had a good week. The Strand, with another Warner Bros. Vitaphone picture, "Caught in the Fog," had good business, as did the Galax with a split week, the last half of which showed the Western star, Fred Thomson in "Kit Carson" (Par.).

New Orleans

WITH downtown first run theatres playing outstanding film productions during the past week and summerlike weather prevailing business reached record-breaking proportions.

The new Saenger Theatre led the local field and did a volume of business that broke all previous attendance records for the house. Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool," a Warner Brothers Vitaphone attraction, packed them in the palatial theatre at every performance. While thousands saw the film the first week the Saenger management was forced to hold it over for a second. It was the most talked of film ever to play this city.

Edw. G. Strubheim's masterpiece, "The Wedding March," did the second best business of the week, being shown at Loew's State Theatre. The film, long awaited by movie lovers of New Orleans, was highly praised by critics and patrons alike.

The Grand Theatre's "Good Morning Judge" was the Orpheum Theatre film offering, but it was the personal appearance of Ben Turpin, screen comedian, and four other outstanding vaudeville acts that drew whatever business the house did. The Diverse film, however, did well.

"Wings" drew well considering the fact that it was shown for a second week. Its first week's run did the best business of the week previous at the Indiana Theatre.

At Saenger's Tudor, "Tenderloin," the Warner Brothers Vitaphone picture, completed its third triumphant week and is still going strong. The film was liked by all who saw it.

Several motion picture houses of the New Orleans business district which have been dark during the past few months will be reopened. The Liberty Theatre opened on October 13 as a sound picture house. "The Jazz Singer," which recently set a record for continuous run at the Tudor, was the opening attraction.

Harrisburg

INDIAN SUMMER weather all week contributed materially to a continuation of good business in the theatres of Harrisburg.

George Bancroft, whose dramatic work has won him a big following in Central Pennsylvania, appeared at the Victoria in "The Docks of New York," with marked success from the financial viewpoint, some of the night crowds being almost capacity.

News pictures of the Graf Zeppelin helped to swell the Victoria crowds.

The Colonial offering was "Out of the Ruins," a picture that won immediate popularity which it maintained throughout the week. At Loew's Regent the principal attraction was "While the City Sleeps," which kept the box office cash register jingling merrily for the whole six-day booking. The State put Lois Wilson in "Ransom" on the screen the last half of the week with highly satisfactory results which were augmented perhaps by the fact that "Peaches" Brown appeared in a vaudeville act on the same bill.

The latter part of the week the Broad Street Theatre showed a double bill, consisting of "Marry the Girl" and Al Hoxie in "The Range Riders." Women particularly were attracted to the Grand when the romantic Ramon Novarro was featured in "A Certain Young Man." "The Phantom Flyer" was shown at the Capitol and the bill at the National, which featured Hoot Gibson in "The Flying Cowboy" was popular particularly with the juvenile element. The Rialto on Friday and Saturday presented "Honor Bound."

Cincinnati

HOT weather, due to Indian Summer, had the effect of somewhat slowing up attendance at the Cincinnati theatres, although not sufficiently to cause any general alarm.

At the Albee the receipts were up to a satisfactory figure after the box-office check-up following the picture "Excess Baggage," with James Barton as the featured stage act.

"Beggars of Life" at the Capitol, with sound synchronization, together with Movietone features, had a good week in the aggregate, business fluctuating from day to day.

Keith's presented Chaney in "While the City Sleeps," and got away to fair returns.

"Two Lovers," at the Lyric, for which a special musical score was provided, piled up a satisfactory gross, although business was not quite up to previous weeks of the regular season.

The Strand, featuring Milton Sills in "The Crash," had a very good week, which also is true of the Family, with "Beyond the Sierras" for the first part, and "Hellship Bronson" during the last half.

The Erlanger Grand, legitimate house, playing a three weeks' run of "Wings," had excellent business during the first week's showing, and this has undoubtedly helped out into the receipts of some of the other houses in the downtown section.

Palace, with "Danger Street" and vaudeville, had a big week, which is the rule rather than the exception at this house.

Neighborhood houses report satisfactory business.

Portland, Ore.

PROBABLY on account of the big film star-identification contest being staged in all of the West Coast houses, this week's attendance at all the houses has shown a considerable increase, even though some of the attractions are hold-overs.

The most notable of the hold-overs is "Glorious Betsy" at the new Music Box, which continues to enjoy a nice run during its second week.

"The King of Kings" went into the third week of good business at The Oriental, and appreciative comments were heard on H. B. Warner's portrayal of Jesus. The Oriental is one of the three largest houses in the city—and a run of more than a week is phenomenal, therefore this film is in record-breaking class here.

Musicians, dancers and entertainers held first position on Pantages bill. "The Michigan Kid" brought in the usual good business at this high-class vaudeville house.

A considerable increase in the attendance at the Columbia with "Tempest" was enjoyed throughout the week.

"While the City Sleeps" proved to be another interesting Lon Chaney picture, and brought in more money than "The Patriot" did the previous week. Georgie Stoll and his musical gang were back on the stage again.

Several big crowds were registered at the United Artists, at the opening of the second attraction, "The Woman Disputed" but fell off somewhat at end of week. Also showed Pendleton Round-Up pictures with sound effects.

West Coast Theatres also reopened the State Theatre, large suburban house, with Frazier Stock Company to good business, and feature film "Prowlers of the Sea."

An increase in attendance was noted by Manager Maxwell at the Portland with "Dry Martini," which had its premiere here, and which shared in the big applause given Fanchon & Marco's "Temptations" Idea.

Salt Lake City

SALT LAKE CITY first run picture theatres have enjoyed some very good business this past week as a whole with some exceptional and highly satisfactory reports having been made.

The second week of "The Singing Fool" at the Victory Theatre exceeded even the first week which is reported to have broken all attendance records of the house.

The Capital Theatre has had exceptionally good houses with "The Crash," in conjunction with the Fanchon and Marco stage production.

Alice White in "The Show Girl" was well received by good sized crowds during the week. On the stage Ralph Cloninger and his company in "Sun-Up" was also presented.

The Pantages Theatre enjoyed a week of rushing business which was somewhat above the average this week. The picture offering was "The Cameraman," with Buster Keaton.

"The Toilers" with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Jobyna Ralston and a series of "The Collegians" drew fairly good sized houses to the American, it is reported.

"The King of Kings" has been held over this week at the Gem Theatre and is still packing the house.

The second run houses here have also enjoyed exceptionally good attendance this past week.

Oklahoma City

OKLAHOMA CITY houses all chalked up satisfactory grosses during the past week. The pictures were right and the weather was right.

"Our Dancing Daughters" with Joan Crawford, Anita Page and Dorothy Sebastian, a Metro-Goldwyn sound picture, enjoyed a week's excellent business at the Capitol.

Opinions on Pictures

Yellow Contraband

A Good Action Vehicle

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

LEO MALONEY is well acquainted with the fashioning of pictures that offer action, a logically knit story and some humming acting. "Yellow Contraband" is a composite of a western, underworld story and the typical action feature. Dope smugglers along the border, the Chinamen who buy their stuff, the government agents who cope with them are all mixed up in this one to make a fast-moving tale. It has all the earmarks of the celluloid that satisfies.

Maloney has a double role, that of the government man and one of the smugglers. He discards his usual sombrero and western chaps to assume the guise of underworld character, a scowling bull-dog type. The government man successfully copes with his gangster twin, outwits him and even fools the Chinaman who employs him. When the dope dive is raided, the government man makes his exit with the girl pal of his underworld rival, but he finds that she, too, is a government agent. This is just a wee extra dose of make-believe and does not jibe with the convincing incidents which it culminates.

All in all, though, there are but few faults to be found with this opus.

Drawing Power: Good for the customers who want their screen fare served with strident action. Exploitation Angles: Feature as an underworld story, with the usual rat-a-tat accompaniment of gunplay, the menacing Chinamen, the struggle between law and order.

THEME: Underworld drama. Government agent and underworld character look alike, so the former outwits the latter in order to assume his place amidst the gang of dope smugglers. His underworld rival shows up in a Chinese dive where he is impersonating him and the government man is saved only by a raid.

The Wedding March

Fine Production, But Not Up to Stroheim Standard

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S taken a long time for Erich von Stroheim to make "The Wedding March," and it sure shapes as a costly production—one well over the million dollar class. And, as customary with one of his achievements much relevant matter has been trimmed from it. The result is it loses considerable force from the operation. The picture is typically Stroheimish in its treatment—the idea being one which has been utilized before by the actor-director.

Once again he plays his rakish, swanky, Viennese military officer, bent upon the conquest of the ladies. And sure enough the familiar conflict is present, too. The peasantry is pictured—so is the aristocracy.

The germ of this story develops from the seduction of a bucolic maid by the roystering roue—and his marriage to an heiress who is not so keen as to personality. That's all there is to it—and it takes an unusually long time to tell it. The picture is particularly long in the religious procession of Corpus Christi, but it is beautifully produced, the atmosphere, the settings and backgrounds carrying real pictorial appeal.

Of course the eliminated footage has taken the spark out of the story and what is left cannot be called anything extraordinary. It is interesting in its acting and scenes. Fay Wray surely emerges as an emotional actress of the first rank—her study of the wistful peasant being exceptionally effective and appealing. Stroheim, himself, is a master hand at playing the over-bearing officer—and ZaSu Pitts is excellent as the heiress.

"The Wedding March" is a costly job. And Stroheim has done better.

Drawing Power: Director's name—and big publicity concerning picture should attract them. For highclass houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up title and cost of picture, billing Stroheim's name prominently. Feature Fay Wray. Advertise it big.

THEME: Drama of triangle—with autocratic officer involved with peasant girl and heiress.

"Pathe Review No. 43"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE Pathe Review for October 21 release is a dandy featurette into which has been incorporated an interesting quartet of novelties. There is a smoothness and a crispness in the new Pathe Review. These offerings offer sufficient proof that the Review in its new dress is fast threatening to make apparent to all that it is the best film magazine on the market.

The quiet, picturesque town of Sunbury, where England's great painter, Gainsborough was born, is presented in Pathecolor. Two other subjects deal with mountain climbing and novelty knives turned out by the workshops of England. A final touch, particularly appropriate today, gives an idea of the latest developments in furniture with the modern touch.—RAYMOND GANLY.

The Battle of the Sexes

Griffith Has Done Much Better

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THEY'VE given D. W. Griffith an opportunity to make over one of his early triumphs, and all things considered it doesn't shape up as anything out of the ordinary. The idea has been used many, many times—indeed, ever since it was first exploited by Griffith. It employs the age-old theme of the trespassing husband and father who so far forgets his marital vows as to wander from the straight narrow to gad about on the primrose path. And once he checks out the blessings of home he finds a certain amount of foolish pride and a mingled feeling of making whoopee and feeling sorry in the companionship of a vamp.

The giddy girl is played by Phyllis Haver who had a similar role in "The Way of All Flesh," only in that picture the character was much more genuine. Here it registers as artificial and inconsistent. The outraged wife makes a threat of suicide—and the young daughter of the house makes a grand gesture by upbraiding the vamp—even to the extent of flourishing a revolver.

The picture is obvious all of the way, and lacks the w. k. Griffith touches of humanity. But he hasn't forgotten his contrasts nor his sentiment, though the latter element looks out of place—as if it was added to balance the high jinks and make its bid for sympathy. The acting could be more restrained. Jean Hersholt gives a colorful performance as the trespasser, but he goes to extremes with his emotions. Phyllis Haver is more in character as the play-girl. Belle Bennett is the mother—and make the figure fairly genuine. It is just a fair picture. The synchronization introduces some applause and a musical accompaniment.

Drawing Power: Title, director and cast. Suitable for all types of houses. Exploitation Angles: Tease the title. Feature director and what he has accomplished. Bill Miss Haver in large type—also Jean Hersholt. Bring emphasis to theme.

THEME: Domestic drama founded on the eternal triangle with trespassing husband and father.

"Getting Together"

(Pathe—One Reel)

A FAIRLY interesting Spotlight setting forth the activities of various athletic clubs. Such sports as fencing, relay running and broad jumping are shown, the collection of shots containing variety and a general interest. The exponents of the sports take in men, boys and girls.—RAYMOND GANLY.

The Toilers

Good Picture, With or Without Sound

(Reviewed by Oscar Cooper)

A PRODUCTION of substantial box office worth is "The Toilers." Its value is heightened by sound, but it is fully able to make the box-office grade as a "silent."

Synchronized by the RCA Photophone process, with music score by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, the picture also has sound effects. These are fine examples of the use of good judgment and common sense. They are not forced; on the contrary, they are put in when they really mean something.

Director Reginald Barker has done a workmanlike job. His direction cannot be called inspired, but it is thorough, and it scores particularly in the climax scenes showing the fire in the mine shafts, and the rescue of the entombed miners.

The cast does uniformly good work: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Jobyna Ralston, Harvey Clark and Wade Boteler, in particular. The slight story runs along with a considerable amount of love interest, and not a little humor.

Drawing Power: Good for all types of houses. Box-office without a doubt.

Exploitation Angles: The mine fire is the big punch, and can be used to fine advantage in exploitation.

THEME: Drama of the coal mines, in which the hero, after winning the girl, is rescued in coal shaft fire.

THE CAST

Steve Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Joe Harvey Clark
Toby Wade Boteler
Butch Robert Ryan

"The Spieler"

Good Story, Excellently Directed

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

TAY GARNETT goes another step to justify Ralph Block's faith that he can direct. Under the De Mille regime at the present Pathe studio, Garnett was one of the staff's ace scenarists. Block, as associate producer, promoted Garnett to a directorship with "Celebrity" as his first assignment. Then came "Show-Folks." And now "The Spieler," produced by Block, written by Hal Conklin and adapted by Conklin and Garnett.

Garnett displays intelligence by remembering constantly he was a writer. In other words, even with a megaphone, he sets about to tell a story, goes directly to the point, sustains interest brilliantly, draws his characters exceptionally well, omits all unnecessary padding and thus far in all his pictures has attained the only result needed. A fine picture.

"The Spieler," to lull the fears expressed by many, absolutely bears no resemblance to "The Barker" made by First National. The latter is a story of father and son. "The Spieler" is the old one of a crook's reformation for the love of a woman. Alan Hale proved conclusively in "Sal of Singapore" that he deserves individual featuring. The last vestige of doubt, if any remained, comes with his virile performance in "The Spieler." And Clyde Cook, whom producers relegated to falls and slapstick, adds more truth to the old belief that a clown makes a better tragedian than any standard dramatic actor. This belief, undoubtedly exaggerated in most cases, holds good as far as Cook's portrayal of the wire-walker and assistant "grifter" to Hale. With Alan, Clyde furnishes tears in addition to laughter, which some may claim, is the function of Pagliacci. But Clyde isn't playing the clown with the broken heart. It's simply that such a fine actor has been wasted in past years to the business of taking falls.

The one weak spot in "The Spieler" is Renee Adoree. She is far from the Adoree of "The Big Parade" in charm or performance. One may be charitable and say she was miscast. Fred Kohler adds to the suspense element as the "menace."

Undoubtedly outdoor show-folks will resent "The Spieler" with much bitterness. Their resentment will be justified to the extent that such conditions as "The Spieler" is based on have been cleaned out of carnivals and tent shows to a large extent. The only ones they exist in now are the "turkeys" and one-season "gyps." However, that doesn't detract from the merits of the picture as entertainment or as a story which has been exceptionally well told.

Pathe's rooster can lift its head high and crow over "The Spieler." It deserves it.

Drawing Power: For both large and small towns, it should be good. The lure of carnivals has never been restricted to population, size or type. As a silent picture, which it was in preview, its entertainment values are very good. Whether dialogue and synchronization will affect this any depends on just how the dialog and effects are written and inserted. Exploitation Angles: Carnival atmosphere to dress the theatre: an old-time "spieler" type giving a circus or carnival bally-hoo may be used effectively in most localities. In others the bally-hoo can be burlesqued to good results. Play up the wire-walking of Clyde Cook for thrills.

THEME: Two crooks, one a wire-walker, join a carnival owned by a woman anxious to have an entirely honest midway. Unknown to her and protected by her reputation is a gang of crooks operating right in her show. Hale, one of the crooks, falls in love with the carnival owner and she with him. He sets about to prove his honesty and aid her clean up her own midway. He succeeds following several thrilling scenes in which some snappy fist fighting occurs. His buddy is shot while walking a wire by the other "grifters."

Red Moon Fred Kohler
The Barker Fred Warren
The Rabbit Jimmy Quinn

"Rocks and Saddles"

(Universal—One Reel)

OSWALD, a courageous bunny, goes on the spoor of big game in this amusing cartoon. He has many adventures with the beasts including one with a huge ape with whom he cuts up in fine style, an assortment of gags emerging with their scuffle. The action is rapid and the cartoon work very effective.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Marriage by Contract

Good Box-Office Material

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS tale has as its moral that women should remain well satisfied with the good old-fashioned marriage ceremony, that precarious as that sometimes is, it will continue to be generally accepted as the proper and safest standard. However, companionate marriage has come in for a deal of discussion and because of that there is plenty of box-office material in this feature. If it is to be adversely criticised at all, it is because there may be one too many of the marriage sequences.

Patsy Ruth Miller trudges her way sadly through four or five "agreements," each time being satisfied she has hit upon the right man at last. And then she wakes up to find it has all been a dream, that her original companionate agreement with the youth she loves and who loves her has not departed because of a tiff that brought on all the hysteria. But she is smart enough, after all, and so is he, to realize that the old fashioned marriage ceremony is much the most satisfactory.

Miss Miller is very convincing in the handling of a somewhat difficult role which takes her from the young modernist wife through the various marriage episodes until she comes to the border of middle age and with it there is the desire to retain her youth. It is somewhat a relief to know all of these hardships have not been hers when she awakens from her troubled sleep. Lawrence Gray also does some creditable work, as do the other members of the cast. It is a picture that has quite considerable appeal and it should do well at the box-office.

Drawing Power: The subject is one that has had much attention, and with a well molded story, well done, it promises to click in nearly any house. Exploitation Angles: The companionate marriage subject lends itself to ready exploitation; the good story, the well balanced cast.

THEME: Thoroughly modern girl and youth decide upon a companionate marriage; they quarrel and she leaves in a huff. She drifts from one marriage contract to another, only to finally wake up and realize it has been a dream, which, however, has a happy ending.

Produced and distributed by Tiffany-Stahl. Length, 7,786 feet. Released, December 1, 1928. The Cast; Patsy Ruth Miller, Lawrence Gray, Shirley Palmer, Ralph Emerson, John St. Polis, Claire Mc Dowell, Ruby Lafayette, Duke Martin, Robert Edison, Raymond Keane. Director, James Flood. Story by Edward Clark. Continuity by Frances Hyland.

"Teacher's Pest"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Gandy)

WITH the help of Tige, his clever dog, Buster Brown produces a few laughs in this juvenile comedy, which was directed by Samuel Newfield. Fairly amusing.

The piece starts off with a good scene showing Buster in the throes of a bad dream.

From thence on the comedy is just an assortment of hoary gags, which do not carry much pep any more. The climax arrives in the visit of the school board of trustees to the classroom. There they and the pupils are upset when a mischievous pupil drops a box of sneezing powder, with the result that ka-choing becomes prevalent. Buster is blamed for this mishap but Tige and the dogs of the neighborhood come to his assistance. Their entrance into the classroom brings general disorder.

Freedom of the Press

A Good Newspaper Story
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

UNIVERSAL has a powerful story and a good box-office bet in this yarn of newspapers and graft. It is an accurate portrayal of life behind the scenes in a newspaper office and equally as accurate in the corruptness of politics in some quarters. At the same time it carries a lively romance which builds to a dramatic climax when the young son of the owner of the paper assumes command and is compelled by a promise to his father to exploit the crookedness of the father of the girl he loves.

Lewis Stone heads the capable cast and he gives a splendid portrayal of the difficult role of the power behind the underworld in a large city. Henry B. Walthall is equally good as the newspaper proprietor who is pledged to give the city clean government. Malcolm McGregor is the youthful hero and opposite him is Marceline Day, ward of the corrupt politician. Both are well cast and do some effective work.

The direction is all that could be desired. George Melford has not spoiled the effectiveness of the story by permitting any overacting. All of the roles are played in a dignified manner, those of Stone and Walthall being particularly commendable. Had they been otherwise a good story could easily have been ruined. There is not a dull moment throughout the progress of the feature and there are some thrilling ones that will make it a picture that will be talked about.

Drawing Power: It is a generally appealing subject that is handled in a dignified manner and with the good cast it should do very well at any box-office. Exploitation Angles: Newspaper tieups should be readily arranged. The press book offers a number of good suggestions.

THEME: Son of newspaper owner is forced to take over paper when his father is murdered. He pledges to carry on the crusade against the corrupt politician who is the guardian of the girl he loves.

Sinners in Love

Not So Well Done

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE kind of tale with which Bernarr Macfadden fills the pages of his "True Story Magazine" is screened and doesn't come off so well. Far from seeming true, it appears typically movieish all the way. It does not carry much conviction, although there is some good acting to be found in the cast.

However, this is the type of story the masses seem to want. Inasmuch as "True Story" has been eminently successful, they are beyond a doubt just graded for popular response. If the public wants it, then that's all that matters. There have been, however, better pictures done along the same lines of this one.

The story tells of a girl from a squab mill town, who is loved by a gambling house proprietor. She awakens repulsion in him for his trade. The girl is attacked by a villain and kills in self defense, the attack having been instigated by a jealous woman admirer of the gambler. Wedding bells and happiness for the girl and the reformed gambler.

The scenes of the girl's tenement surroundings have been done well. But those showing the gambling den and the old drama of the triangle that goes therein are just about average in their telling.

Drawing Power: Suited primarily for second run and neighborhood trade. Exploitation Angles: Mention as "true story" from the Macfadden publication. Bill as story of an everyday girl's predicament.

THEME: Drama. Girl from small town goes to big city, where a gambler uses her as a lure in his gambling establishment. When she discovers his trade she leaves him. He realizes then that he loves her and follows her. Meanwhile, the gambler's woman partner resents his interest in the girl and lures her into the apartment of a rake. The girl slays in self defense, but the gambler removes all evidence of her crime, calms her fears and weds her.

Silk Oliver	Ernest Hilliard

"Fish Stories"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

MIKE and IKE, those two young bouncers of the Stern Bros. series of comedies of that name, get involved into a mess of trouble in their latest adventure. They try to "make" two girls by posing as wealthy sportsmen and they impress their dad by telling him a yarn of their prowess with the tackle, and so it comes about that they join the man and his daughters in a fishing party.

Here they cut up at a fast pace, both of them get a good wetting and their arms grow weary trying to catch a few fish. They finally become attached to a large sea monster, which goes through the water so fast that their boat falls apart and they ride what is left of it as if they were aquaplaning. Of course, everything is extremely silly, but at least they don't go to sleep in this one. Even if some of their gags are a little mouldy, they keep throwing them in with gay abandon. The comedy impresses one as a fairly enjoyable splurge.

Gus Meins directed.

Pathe Review No. 42

(Pathe—One Reel)

NO. 42 offers some bright diversions along the paths of traveling, sculpturing and nature study. A few glances at Northern Algeria, presented in Pathecolor, are first hand. Bernarr Macfadden, the publisher and physical culturists, is then seen submitting to a plaster cast in the studio of Sculptor George Grey Bernard. The osprey, the fish hawk of the New Jersey coast, is the next subject for the camera, the scenes showing him in flight and at close range in his nest. Another scene in this Review deals with a study in the various periods of office furniture.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Saps and Saddles"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS is a pleasantly conceived and nicely executed short western of the Tenderfoot Thriller series that Universal is releasing. It is a vehicle for George Chandler, who is seen to good advantage in the role of a hypochondriac. He comes to the great open spaces where some terrific action takes hold of him and jars him back to a normal position of health. He errs in thinking a frijolite is a sort of local disease and as the cowboys are continually mentioning the word among their other favorite foods, the hypo is stirred into action.

Some villains in the neighborhood kidnap the invalid and his sister and things look pretty bad for them until one of the villains inadvertently lets fall the word, frijolite, with the result that the hypochondriac leaps into the thick of them, makes his escape and also knocks the chief villain cold when he tries to run off with his sister. Far from being an invalid, the hypo becomes a typical roaring westerner within the short length of his sojourn.

Fabian directed.

"Jessie's James"

(F B O—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

SCANNING this Larry Darmour comedy, conning it closing, one is not minimizing its worth by arriving at the dictum: not so good. It has action, but is undeniably weak when it comes to gags. And what good is a gagless comedy or a reel containing nothing but old gags? The humor this one puts forth has been throttled time and time again by other hands in the comedy field.

There are Alberta Vaughn and Al Cooke in the cast and this fact strengthens the reels somewhat. They are capable funsters but they are bucking up against punk material here. Lewis Sargent has the role of jockey sweetheart of Miss Vaughn and Cooke is cast as a four flusher and a bluffer. There are performances, too, from Eleanor Flynn and Willie Grey. Albert Herman directed, not with striking effect.

The titles are fierce. Brighter and more original ideas from Mr. Darmour's gagmen are needed if the material in "Jessie's James" is the best they can muster.

"Fun in the Clouds"

(Universal—One Reel)

CONTINUING the adventures of a movie-crazed boy, this new chapter in the "Horace in Hollywood" series, starring Arthur Lake, is just about average film fare. Arthur boasts of his skill as an air pilot. A director, on the lookout for a stunt aviator, sends him up in the clouds for a few thrill scenes.

The boy had just been chewing some tobacco, with the result that he feels sick and in no condition to pilot a plane. But in this state, he unconsciously maneuvers the ship into the most unheard of antics and more than satisfies the director as to his skill.

It's a comedy that should not be taken seriously. Some of the scenes that Universal used in "The Lone Eagle" appear in it as do the leads of that production, Raymond Keane and Barbara Kent. Tom O'Brien is cast as the director.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"The Defensive Line"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE work of the tackles in a football game of today is emphasized in this issue of the "Football Sense" series, produced by "Chick" Meehan, famous N. Y. U. gridiron mentor. How the tackle uses his arms and legs in bowling over the interference of the opposing team to get at the man with the ball, how he must always keep his feet and act as a human battering ram is explicitly brought out in this little number. It demonstrates the plays as no words possibly could and is right in line with the interest that the other "Football Sense" issues have possessed.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Details Plan of Presentation to Exploit "Singing Fool"

A BRIEF account of the trailer presentation for "The Singing Fool" at the Great Lakes Theatre, Buffalo, published in Motion Picture News of September 29, has created such widespread interest and queries for full information concerning the exact details of the stunt that we are giving below the description of this unusual presentation as supplied this department by H. M. Addison, managing director of the theatre, and originator of the idea of using phonograph records in conjunction with an organ number to exploit a coming feature.

It will be recalled that the initial notice of this stunt related the immense popular enthusiasm which greeted the presentation at the Great Lakes. Patrons applauded the number in a manner that made evident their pleasure at the entertainment it afforded. The presentation was called "Jolson-ania."

The stunt started off as an organ recital, with Carl Coleman, at the console, playing, in turn, April Showers, Dirty Hands, Dirty Face; Toot, Toot Tootsie, Mother of Mine and Mammy, all choruses, with the exception of Mother of Mine, which used verse and chorus. Slides, with the exception of that for April Showers, were made locally from pictures of Jolson in "The Jazz Singer." The April Showers slide was made from that now famous black and while cartoon of Jolson used so much by Warner Bros., in which nothing except the eyes, mouth and hands, white on a black background, show.

With the close of the organ playing Mammy comes the big punch. Rigged up in the operating booth is a phonograph turntable, with an electric pick-up, which allows the use of a phonograph record, playing through the Vitaphone hook-up, to broadcast music through the horns back of the screen. Brunswick record No. 4033, with Jolson singing "Sonny Boy," the theme song of "The Singing Fool," was used, with the organ playing a soft obligato. Slides of "Sonny Boy," which may be obtained free from De Sylva, Brown and Henderson, Inc., New York, were used on the screen as the record brought Jolson's voice through the horns to the auditorium.

For the first slides, up to "Sonny Boy," blue and reds were used on the foots and a dark spot on the organist. For the last number, house lights were dimmed and the organ worked dark.

"Sonny Boy" slides carried the verse and two choruses of the song, the same as played on the record. The only trouble was the synchronization of the organ and record for this song and that was done after a few trials without any trouble.

USING the titles of feature attractions prominently in the theatre front advertising for a "Take a Chance Week" at the Palace Theatre, Toronto, Ontario, was the trick which was played on an unsuspecting public by Manager Charles Querrie. The features for the week were "Telling the World" and "Warming Up." Included in the elaborate front for the week were such expressions as "We're Telling the World it's some show" and "We're just Warming Up for the fun."

USING the mother-sons angle, Manager H. Kayes was able to hit the top center position on the front page of the local paper in connection with the showing of "Four Sons" at the Temple Theatre, Houlton, Me. The message appearing in the newspaper read: "Mothers Be Our Guests—Through the Courtesy of the Temple Theatre Management, the Pioneer invites mothers with four sons as guests of the Temple during the two-day run of the picture 'Four Sons.' Any mother and her four sons appearing at the box office either of the two days, Wednesday or Thursday.

DORIS STECKER, manager Forest Theatre, Cincinnati, is putting her house on the local map with Saturday matinee for children only at which appropriate pictures are shown. Matinees are sponsored by parents and local child welfare associations, as well as teachers.

VIC GAUNTLETT, publicity and advertising director for John Hamrick's five theatres in Seattle, Tacoma and Portland, returned to Seattle last week from the opening of the new Music Box Theatre in Portland with the distinction of having page one stories of the opening in each of Portland's four newspapers, the first time such a "break" has ever been put over.

GEORGE MORRELL, of the College Theatre, Toronto, Ontario, an excellent neighborhood house, obtained considerable extra business and also incurred the pleasure of the Y. M. C. A. by staging a series of junior boxing matches as Saturday matinee features. There was little work in these stunts for Manager Morrell because the details were handled by the physical director of the Y. M. C. A. The expense to the theatre comprised admission passes, light refreshments and a few gifts, such as gymnasium suits.

BECAUSE of the competition of the radio in reporting the World Series baseball scores, fewer Central Pennsylvania theatres than in former years provided World Series scoring service for their patrons this season. Among the few that did, however, are the State, Harrisburg, and the Gaiety, Wilkes-Barre, which installed regular electric score boards that recorded the games play by play.

ALEX MOSS, director of advertising and publicity for Columbia Pictures, crashed into the Yankee Stadium during the World Series game with publicity for that company's current attraction at the Embassy Theatre on Broadway. A complimentary four-page score card, carrying an advertisement for "Submarine" was inserted in every copy of the "Baseball Magazine" distributed at the game.

Stage Talent Contest Featured with "Our Dancing Daughters"

CHATTANOOGA'S "Dancing Daughters" were given opportunity to win stage fame at the Tivoli theatre there in conjunction with a contest conducted as a co-feature with the presentation of "Our Dancing Daughters." The stunt conducted by manager R. B. Smith met with hearty response.

The newspaper tying in with the theatre on the contest among its numerous stories emphasized that the dancing contest was open to all women over 15 years of age and that any person could participate in any dance she chose such as a solo dance or ballroom dance with masculine partners. However, no prizes were to be offered the men.

The idea of the contest was to have an elimination contest each night during the showing of the picture and then run off the finals one week later.

Prizes were donated by local merchants who also made excellent use of their windows in co-operative displays on both the contest and the picture. First prize winner received a beautiful engraved loving cup valued at $75.00 in addition to receiving a three-day stage engagement at the local theatre. The second prize winner received a $50.00 dress; 3rd prize, a $30.00 hat, and 4th prize, the choice of any pair of shoes at the Walkover shoe store.

Many entries stated that they preferred to entertain in other ways besides just dancing and so listening to popular demand as the contest was primarily an "opportunity contest," Manager R. B. Smith decided to let down the gates to all comers, singers being equally as welcome as dancers.

The elimination contests were a big attraction in themselves and greatly helped to swell the box-office receipts for "Our Dancing Daughters."

Fake Tab Scores as Herald For "Terror" in St. Louis

A fake tabloid featuring a scare headline reading "Terror Strikes City" proved a profitable piece of exploitation for the Grand Central Theatre in St. Louis in connection with a drive for "The Terror" there.

The four page sheet was tabloid size and bore a further resemblance in make-up and printing. Coarse screen cuts were employed as illustrations and the text stressed the mystery angle of the story in true journalistic fashion. The little paper, called the St. Louis Daily Mirror, was distributed by the thousands in advance of the showing as well as currently.

Discuss "Companionate" in Newspaper-Theatre Tie-up

When an exploitation man breaks into the columns of the Toledo Blade he considers himself lucky, if even for but a single article. "Companionate Marriage," based upon Judge Ben B. Lindsey's book of that title, crashed into the Blade for an essay contest on marriage for ten days—a week in advance of its showing at the Pantheon Theatre and three days following the opening.

The contest was to last but the week, but so many telephone requests were received by the contest editor at the end of the week for more time in which to write their essays that an extension of three days was given.

The Blade offered twenty-five pairs of tickets to "Companionate Marriage" as the prizes for the best essays of 150 words submitted on the question "What ails marriage?" On the second day of the contest the Blade announced that it had arranged for a special first prize for the best letter of all, the prize to be a season pass to the Pantheon good for two persons.

Canada Air Mail Officials Cooperate with Theatre

George Rotsky, manager of the Palace Theatre, Montreal, first sound theatre in the Dominion, was authorized by the Dominion Government to announce that: "By special appointment, the Palace Theatre is an official Canadian Air Mail Depot during this showing."

This was due to the fact that Manager Rotsky arranged for the recognition of the Palace as a branch Post office for the handling of His Majesty's Royal Air Mail during the week of October 13 when the talking feature on the screen was "The Air Circus." In conjunction with this arrangement, there were postal wickets in the lobby and foyer of the theatre along with official letter boxes in which air mail matter could be posted, regular collections being made to connect with the recently established air routes from Montreal to New York and to Ottawa and other cities. The postal arrangement was announced near and far.

"Clara Bow Stomp" Good for Publicity by Howard

New York may claim the lion's share where new dances emanate but Hollywood is the home of the latest creation known as the "Clara Bow Stomp."

It is said that Miss Bow originated this new dance during the filming of "The Fleet's In," which played at the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, Ga.

Jack Chalman, publicity manager at the Howard made arrangements with one of the local papers to publish the ten poses of Miss Bow illustrating the various steps of the new dance.

Publishing one pose daily for ten days would perhaps create more reader interest than publishing all ten poses in one issue. Due to close booking, Chalman was confronted with doing the best he could, the result being all ten poses were shown in one issue.

Patron Suggestions Read from Stage Stimulate Interest in "Idea Box"

H. E. WILTON, manager of the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, has a lobby suggestion box which is literally a howling success. Having noticed that many such "idea receptacles" become practically useless in short order, Wilton hit upon the scheme of announcing that suggestions for Strand Theatre programs and operation would be read from the stage of the theatre. This started the fireworks as the neighborhood wags are busy with pen and paper. Some suggestions cause a big laugh while others are really valuable.

Noting that "The Head Man" had to do with municipal politics, Wilton invited all members of the Hamilton City Council and their wives to attend a performance as his guests. They all came and the newspapers did the rest.

Launches New Season Bookings with "Jubilee Month" Drive

AS a follow-up to the success which marked his "Harvest Month" campaign last year, Manager C. Clare Woods of the Colorado theatre in Pueblo, this season used a similar stunt to inaugurate the new fall bookings at that house, calling the celebration "Colorado Jubilee Month." The first picture on the list of features offered in this one-month drive at the Colorado was "Two Lovers."

Woods started his campaign two weeks in advance by posting the letters—in cut-out—"C.J.M." at every conspicuous place about the front of his theatre. There was a liberal use of the words "Amazing," "Different," "Without Precedent," etc., in this theatre billing. Screen trailers, newspaper teasers and a teaser radio campaign also were joined in the exploitation efforts used to put over the "Jubilee Month" event at the Colorado.

A week in advance all the teaser methods were turned into announcements about the Jubilee Month and in an organ solo, just before the opening, a parody on the month was featured.

Big boards were used carrying stills from all the pictures to be shown during the month and still another board was used carrying stills of the Vitaphone stars that were to appear during the month.

The front of the theatre presented a gala effect with its stringing colored lights all over and hanging colored discs under the marquee, on one side of which were painted "Colorado Jubilee Month" and on the other side the name of some star of the month.

A contest was conducted in one of the local papers to see who might be able to guess the stars of each picture showing during the month and a bakery also helped the cause along by distributing between 75,000 and 100,000 numbered coupons in their wrapped loaves of bread.

Sunday, as "Two Lovers" opened, the Star-Journal devoted a streamer entirely across the amusement page and the Chief-tain used a four-column cut of Ronald Colman in the best spot on their theatre page on the same day. Both papers featured stories playing up the big pictures to be shown during Colorado Jubilee Month.

Lobby Concerts by Phonograph Popularize "Fazil" Music

TO emphasize the song theme in "Fazil," Manager John McKenna gave a musical program in his lobby every morning during the run of "Fazil" at the Imperial Theatre, Charlotte, N. C.

These morning musical programs were made possible through a tie-up with Charlotte's largest and best patronized music dealer who gratuitously furnished a beautiful electric orthophonic vietrola.

This machine plays four and one-half hours without repeating a number, so the machine was filled with "Neopolitan Night" records—the love theme for "Fazil." Cards on top of the orthophonic and on the sides announced that the various musical selections could be heard in the synchronized score of "Fazil."

The musical lobby program was an innovation to Charlotte and often the lobby was packed to overflowing. At times the overflow became so great that it was necessary for the local police department to detach patrolmen to the scene and open up an artery on the sidewalk to allow pedestrians to get by.

The lobby was filled with a selected display of accessories which greatly helped to sell the picture to those gathered to hear the music.

Offers Operatic Scene as Prologue for "King"

An excerpt from the opera "Sampson and Delilah" presented by two soloists, a chorus of 18 and an ensemble of 16 dancers, was offered as a prologue to "The King of Kings" at the Cathedral Auditorium at New Castle, Pa.

The presentation was staged by Ted Hall, musical director. The accompanying music was rendered by a symphony orchestra, which also played the Hugo Reisenfeld score for the screening of the picture.

Two theatreowners at Fairfield, Iowa, are interested in the Sunday show question which has been brought up by the circulation of a petition asking that the ban on Sunday shows be raised.

At Hampton, Iowa Sunday shows opened on September 30. Charles Peterson is the exhibitor.

Kansas City

A F I N E tribute to August F. Seested, general manager of the Kansas City Star, who died the other day, was paid by the Globe Theatre, Kansas City first run house, Monday. At the time of Mr Seested's funeral—3:30 o'clock—the performance was stopped at the theatre for three minutes and "Rock Of Ages," which a massive choir sings in "The King of Kings," a sound picture being shown at the theatre, was played and sung.

The Orpheum Theatre, Kansas City, which was a first run picture and vaudeville house last year, and which, it recently was decided, would remain closed this year, will re-open October 28 with a stock company under the "visiting star" system.

The Empress theatre, a burlesque house last winter, also has opened.

Sammy Nasters is now managing the Gillham Theatre, Kansas City.

The Capitol Theatre, downtown motion picture and vaudeville house of Kansas City which has acquired the reputation of being the "most closed and re-opened theatre in town," again has closed, following difficulty with local unions.

The People's theatre, Chanute, Kas., which has been remodeled, has re-opened as has the Midland Theatre, Pittsburg, Kas.

The Home Theatre, Hutchinson, Kas., will be remodeled, according to Fred Casner, manager.

Work on Edward Borgan's new theatre in Kansas City, Kansas, which will be named later, has started.

Glenn Dickinson's new Uptown theatre, Junction City, Kansas, designated by Boller Brothers, Kansas City, opened the other day.

Few, if any, exhibitors of Kansas have the colorful career behind them that is possessed by John Tackett, Coffeyville, Kas., exhibitor who opened his new Tackett theatre in that city the other day. Back in 1889 Tackett went to Coffeyville and decided to try the lot of a photographer—not a motion picture photographer, however. But John had a proverbial "ear for music" and soon organized a dance orchestra and held dancing classes in the old Perkins Opera House. Such environment eventually led John into the motion picture business. Today he is one of the most widely known exhibitors in the Kansas City territory.

M. C. Siniif, manager of the Warner Bros., exchange in Kansas City, contends by all that is holy that it was the first time he ever had gone fishing. Nevertheless, he went to a lake near Carrollton, Mo., and brought back eighteen large bass.

Harvey Day, general sales manager for Kinograms; Phil Reisman, Pathe general sales manager; F. D. Lederman, general purchasing agent for Universal Chain Theatres, and Marty Solomon, Vitaphone representative, were Kansas City visitors.

James Shorgl, former booker for the M-G-M exchange at Kansas City, has been made assistant manager of that exchange.

Ralph Oviatt is gaining the reputation of being the "hot shot" salesman of the National Theatre Supply Company's Kansas City office. Last week he sold two Model M. Simplex projectors to M. B. Shamburg for the Gilloz Theatre, Springfield, Mo., and a similar order to Hooper & Jencks for their theatres at Topeka.

Dallas

T H E Crystal theatre, one of the old landmarks of Dallas is being rapidly torn down to make way for a more modern building.

The Pantages Theatre is now being completely remodeled and redecorated, and both Movietone and Vitaphone equipment are being installed. The name of the theatre will be changed to "Ritz," and will feature second run synchronized and talking pictures.

The five first-run theatres of Dallas cooperated with the local relief organizations in obtaining money for the Florida flood sufferers by having a speaker address the audiences from the stages of the theatres on the conditions existing in the stricken region. A collection was then taken among the patrons of the various theatres and over $1,000 was obtained.

L. E. Schneider, divisional manager for Publix, J. H. Elder, director of maintenance, C. B. Stiff, district manager and Elmer Zrenner, in charge of Vitaphone installation for Publix, were in San Antonio for the opening of sound pictures at the Empire Theatre on October 6th.

Leon Gunn, an organist of accomplishment, has been selected by Arthur Keyes to manage his three theatres in Childress.

The Old Mill Theatre has started work on the installation of Vitaphone and Movietone equipment and expects to have these devices ready for use on October 25th. By January 1st. Dallas will have six down town theatres offering sound pictures, as R. J. Stinnett, managing director of The Capitol, states that sound equipment will be installed in his theatre by January 1st.

Word has been received that Don Albert, first musical director of the Palace Theatre in Dallas, will leave for England at once to open a new Loew Theatre in London.

E. M. Remington of Newcastle is now joint owner with Simpson & Neely of the two theatres at Wellington, Texas. Mr. Remington purchased the interest of A. M. Avery, and will manage the two theatres. Mr. Avery was a former First National Salesman in West Texas, and has now purchased two theatres in Clinton, Okla.

Charles McCarty has leased the Queen Theatre at Yoakum, Texas, from Rudy Garbade, and will manage the theatre himself.

Don McMains has sold his theatre at Bandera to R. C. McBride, who owns the theatre in Medina.

T. B. Phillips has purchased the Texan Theatre at Junction from E. G. Lockley.

Visitors on film row the past week included E. J. Callahan, Crockett, Jack Kaufman of the Opera House at New Braunfels, Bruce Anderson of Marlin and Furman Wolf of Lampasas and Belton.

The Casino Operating Co., Boston, has been incorporated, with 1,000 no par shares. Incorporators are Samuel Pinanski, of the Netoco Circuit, and Nathan Pinanski.

Sub-contracts have this week been awarded for the new theatre for the Netoco chain at Congress and High streets, Portland, Me. Financing of the theatre was completed two weeks ago.

I. Gordon and James Doyle, for many years operators and owners of the Central Square and Waldorf Theatres in Waltham, Mass., who recently joined forces with the New England Theatres Operating Corp., in the management of those houses, have just announced that they have acquired a theatre site at 330 Moody street, Waltham, where they plan to erect a new de luxe motion picture palace. Arrangements have already been completed with Netoco whereby the proposed new theatre will come under the management of that organization.

Henry Taylor, general manager in New England for the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, announces the appointment of Harry Browning as managing director of the new $5,000,000 B. F. Keith Memorial Theatre, which is to open shortly in Boston.

Cincinnati

THE Southern theatre, Columbus, Ohio, under control of Isaac Libson, Cincinnati, originally built by the Valentine Company in 1896 as a legitimate house, but for the past few years, devoted to Keith-Albee pictures, has closed. Concurrently with the closing, Loew's Broad announced discontinuance of vaudeville, with future policy of sound pictures. These changes are reported to have been made for purpose of "equalization." Loew's Broad, located directly opposite Keith-Albee theatre (vaudeville) is said to have made heavy inroads on the Keith patronage. An agreement was therefore reached whereby Loew's Broad would discontinue vaudeville in return for the Keith-Albee interests closing the Southern, where sound pictures would have been installed. Chas. H. Weidner was manager of the Southern.

L. B. Wilson, who has been operating the Liberty, Strand and Lyric theatres, Covington, Ky., has taken over the Rialto and Hippodrome in that city from Max Schwartz.

The Boulevard theatre, with 750 seating capacity, on upper Vine Street, Cincinnati, has passed into history as far as pictures are concerned.

According to announcement, the Keith and Lyric theatres, Cincinnati, will be wired for sound pictures. Both houses are in the Keith-Albee-Harris-Libson - Heidingsfeld chain.

Bids have been made for leasing Memorial Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ohio. The house will go to the highest bidder.

The Victory Theatre, Dayton, Ohio, legitimate house, will play a short run of pictures before again opening season with road attractions.

Joe H. Mayer, 41, director of publicity for Palace Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, died suddenly last week at his home in Latonia, Ky., where he had gone to spend a few hours with his family after having witnessed a trade showing of a picture in Cincinnati. He was widely known in theatre and newspaper circles. He leaves wife and three children.

Weller Theatre, Zanesville, O., has reopened after being closed for the summer. Orchestraphone has been installed. The Schutz Theatre, Zanesville, has been closed for repairs.

Strand Theatre, Dayton, which recently changed from full to split-week, has returned to its former policy of full week, Manager Claude Miller reports.

Palace at Marion, O., Costing $500,000 Formally Dedicated

THE Palace Theatre, recently completed at Marion, Ohio, at a total cost of $500,000, was formally dedicated August 30. The house is one of the chain of the Young Amusement Co., Gary, Ind., of which C. J. Wolf, Wheeling, W. Va., is president, and V. U. Young, Gary, secretary, treasurer and general manager. John Ebersson, Chicago architect, designed the house, the general contract being handled by D. W. McGrath and Sons, Columbus, Ohio.

The Spanish design of architecture has been faithfully carried out in both the exterior and interior, and is one of the atmospheric theatres for the design of which the architect is noted. From the walls and mural decorations to the reproduction of period furniture in the lounges, the Spanish motif prevails. Through the archway at the front of the house is visible a vine-covered garden wall, on which is shed the dim glow of a harvest moon, while the ceiling represents an azure blue sky, with stars twinkling here and there, and fleecy clouds drifting by.

On the mezzanine floor, the Spanish idea prevails to even a greater extent, patches of red brick appearing in the somber colored walls giving the effect of plaster having fallen from the walls.

Albert Sindlinger is manager, and W. E. Bail, director of publicity.

Architect Ebersson was present and gave a short address on the opening night, as did also General Manager Young.

A three-manual Page organ has been installed, and is in charge of Banks Kennedy, Chicago, as guest organist. Elmer Newstrom is conductor of the orchestra.

Vaudeville and pictures will be the policy, with installation of sound pictures within a few months.

Showings are continuous from 12:30 to 3 P. M. and from 6:30 to 10 P. M. daily, except Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, when there are continuous performances from 12:30 to 10 P. M.

New Florida in Gainesville One of States' Best Theatres

NORTH CENTRAL FLORIDA boasts one of the most beautiful motion picture palaces in the state today, as the result of the opening recently of the new Florida Theatre, Gainesville. The last word in theatre design and equipment is exemplified in the new house, which is of the stadium type, with 1,600 seating capacity, and both Vitaphone and Movietone equipment. Newton A. Treece, in Gainesville for more than a year, is manager.

The exterior of the house, which is in a strategic location for successful operation, is of terra cotta, with stone trimmings. It is of Spanish design, the entire scheme presenting a colorful Sixteenth century Mediterranean castle.

The main lobby has a tapestry wall effect. The ceiling is ivory, with cornice in polychrome and picked out in colors, highlighted in gold leaf bronze. The ticket booth is in stiple effect, highlighted polychrome color, glazed antique.

Leading to the main auditorium, the ceiling is of plaster texture, with stencil and free-hand ornaments for decoration. The beams are French putty color, and decorated panels add to their attractiveness. The side walls are of old Spanish wall effect. The wall panels of the middle balconies are also glazed and three-toned, of mulberry tapestry. The proscenium is designed in the Italian, Spanish and Moorish styles. The stage curtain is of rich Spanish red velour and gold and mulberry damask. The main curtain is of damask in gold and mulberry with -inch bullion on the bottom.

The organ opening is of pecky cypress in polychrome color and antique effect.

Appointments of the house throughout are the most modern in theatre equipment. Comfortable seats, rest rooms for men and women and a cooling system similar to that of the Florida Theatre in Jacksonville are striking features.

Plans Call for Two New Theatres in Wichita, Kas.

Wichita, Kas., probably will have two more new theatres in the near future, according to J. C. Hartman, who, with his associates, built the Uptown in that city. Proposed plans now call for a $75,000 house in the residential district at Nineteenth Street and Lawrence Avenue and a downtown house to cost about $500,000. The suburban theatre will seat about 1,200. The seating capacity of the downtown theatre will be 2,500.

5,180 Extras

A total of 5,180 extra men and women, representing every conceivable type, worked in Paramount's ten feature pictures. "Redskin," "Avalanche," "Sins of the Fathers," "The Four Feathers," "Three Week-Ends," "The Canary Murder Case," "Someone to Love," "The Shopworn Angel," "His Private Life," and "Interference."

Reginald Barker's Next Special

An entire company of players will en-train for New Orleans, where exterior scenes are to be taken for the Reginald Barker special production for Tiffany-Stahl, temporarily entitled "New Orleans."

FBO Films Fight

A lightweight fight will be seen in "Come and Get It," Bob Steele's recently completed starring feature for FBO. The fight, between Steele and Jack Perry, was staged in the Hollywood Stadium, where the movie colony attends its weekly fight programs. It was conducted strictly according to regulations and was filmed in the same manner in which title bouts are "shot" by the news cameramen.

Comedian Finlayson

Jimmy Finlayson, former comedian with Hal Roach M-G-M Comedies, returned to the "lot" to play a featured role in a Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy comedy just completed by Leo McCarey.

"Wells Fargo Express"

"Wells Fargo Express," a story of the famous stage coach company, is to be Ken Maynard's next western production for First National Pictures, instead of "The Lawless Legion," due to the inability to obtain at this time the great herds of cattle needed for "The Lawless Legion."

Another Zane Grey Story

Because of his work for Paramount, Otto Brower, former assistant director, will also direct the next Zane Grey story, "Sunset Pass."

Alf Goulding to Direct Karl Dane

Alf Goulding will renew his affiliation with M-G-M when he takes up the megaphone for the new Karl Dane-George K. Arthur comedy, "All at Sea." The recently completed Dane-Arthur vehicle, "Brotherly Love," which Charles Reisner directed is scheduled for release by M-G-M in October.

"The Duke Steps Out"

James Cruze will again be paired with William Haines in "The Duke Steps Out," Lucien Cary's recent Saturday Evening Post serial, in which Haines is to have the role of a pugilist.

Prowess Wins Him Role

By capturing the junior championship in the model airplane meet in Los Angeles last month, John Berg, 13-year-old youth, also won the right to play a part in a forthcoming picture in the "Russ Farrell, Aviator," series being released by Educational.

PARAMOUNT—the modern stars!

3 weeks—3 pictures—3 records!

FORM 1419A 1M PADS 9-28 GORDON

PUBLIX THEATRES CORPORATION

INTER-OFFICE COMMUNICATION

To S. R. KENT

Date October 19, 1928.

Three Paramount Pictures have established new high records at the Paramount Theatre in three consecutive weeks!

The previous high weekly gross at the Paramount was $81,000. Here are the new records:

"DOCKS OF NEW YORK"	-	$88,000
"BEGGARS OF LIFE"	-	81,500
"THE FLEET'S IN"	-	84,000

In a theatre seating 3,500 people and against the toughest competition Broadway has ever known, this is a truly remarkable achievement. It speaks volumes for the quality of Paramount product this year.

SAM KATZ

NOT just three or four big pictures a year, but important successes week after week—that's where PARAMOUNT stands out above every other company. When a theatre can break records three weeks running, as Mr. Katz shows above, and then have "WINGS", "THE WEDDING MARCH", "REDSKIN" (Dix-Technicolor), "SINS OF THE FATHERS" (Jannings all-star), "INTERFERENCE" (first of a series of PARAMOUNT ALL-TALKERS), to name a few, coming along — no wonder the whole trade's shouting

IT IS INTER= CHANGEABLE

THE whole motion picture world is electrified by the announcement that interchangeability is here!

We are elated and proud to be the company whose placing of a Bristolphone machine at the Academy Theatre, Hagerstown, Md., brought the question of interchangeability to a head!

To A. Julian Brylawski, owner of the Academy Theatre, our hat is off in a sweeping bow for being the incomparable showman whose conviction that Bristolphone would be universally accepted, prompted him to make the first installation in the land. That this initial test proved superlatively successful from a box-office as well as an interchangeability standpoint, is a further tribute to his keen judgment.

Mr. Brylawski has written himself into the history of this great industry. We gratefully acknowledge the part he played in bringing Bristolphone to the forefront of the motion picture industry.

PHON

THE eyes of the entire industry are on Bristolphone! Prominent exhibitors, sound experts, exchangemen, producers and engineers from both coasts have been held spell-bound by its flawless synchronization and faithful reproduction of dialogue and sound effects.

With the question of interchangeability now defined, there must inevitably follow a rush of applications for installation of the Bristolphone machine.

This is the day of quick turn-over with sound! A profitable business is based on how soon your turn-over starts. Every moment you delay is that much more delay of extra profit.

Insure your early delivery of a Bristolphone machine by immediately wiring or phoning your application. Machines will be allotted in the order of acceptance of these applications.

"Vilma Banky, more radiant than ever, rises a star in her own right in 'The Awakening.'

"I am as proud of that, as she is modest about it.

"From the day I discovered her in Budapest—from 'The Dark Angel,' her first co-starring picture with Ronald Colman, down to 'Two Lovers,' her last—everyone—showmen, artists, writers, recognized authorities of femininity—have all confirmed my faith in her as a great actress and a great in box-office attraction.

"Vilma Banky's personal following is tremendous. Her fan mail is enormous. Only recently, Oscar Depew, professor of Aesthetics at Valleeau University, stated, 'She is the loveliest woman in the world.'

"Now she rises an individual star in 'The Awakening' matching her personality and performance with its power and drama.

"Her portrayal of the awakening of a girl's love-life will remain indelible on your mind for a long time.

"Here she reveals new allure, new fascination. Her emotional range is more vivid than ever.

"In support of Miss Banky, Louis Wolheim blends laughter and tears in a great part. Opposite Miss Banky, Walter Byron, my latest discovery, is a 'find.'

"'The Awakening' is all you or your patrons can wish for in drama, beauty, spectacle and eye appeal. For the ear, they'll enjoy the tuneful song, 'Marie,' by Irving Berlin and music by Hugo Riesenfeld.

"It cost me BIG money to make. But I am sure it will make BIG money for you."

To the Common Stockholders of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation

Holders of over 40% of the outstanding Common Stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation have entered into an agreement for the organization of a New Company to be known as Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, which will issue shares of its Class A Stock, share for share, for Common Stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation tendered for exchange, and which will also issue 500,000 shares of Class B Stock in consideration of certain contracts to be made with the New Company by Radio Corporation of America, R.C.A. Photophone, Inc., and National Broadcasting Company.

Mr. David Sarnoff, Vice-President and General Manager of Radio Corporation of America, has accepted the office of Chairman of the Board of Directors of the New Company, and Radio Corporation of America will have substantial representation upon the Board.

It is contemplated that shares of Class A Stock of the New Company will also be issued, share for share, for capital stock of F.B.O. Productions, Inc. a corporation engaged in the production and distribution of motion pictures, and additional shares of Class A Stock may be issued for the purposes set forth in the Plan.

Copies of the Plan containing further details and of the Deposit Agreement, may be obtained from Empire Trust Company, Depositary, 120 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Holders of Common Stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation desiring to deposit their stock for exchange under the Plan, should immediately deliver or forward by registered mail insured their stock certificates to the Depositary. Stock certificates should be endorsed in blank for transfer and the endorsement witnessed and guaranteed by a bank. The Depositary will issue transferable Certificates of Deposit. All transfer tax stamps required will be affixed by the Committee.

The group of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation stockholders who have entered into the agreement believe that the association of Radio Corporation of America, and its subsidiary, R.C.A. Photophone, Inc. (controlling the Photophone devices for the synchronization of sound and motion pictures), and its affiliated company, National Broadcasting Company, with your Company through the organization of the New Company will create a combination of vaudeville, talking moving pictures and radio with vast possibilities of expansion in the entertainment field. The inclusion of F.B.O. Productions, Inc. will add to the business an established unit for the production and distribution of moving pictures. The undersigned deem the carrying out of the Plan exceedingly desirable and beneficial from the standpoint of your Company and invite and advise all holders of the Common Stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation to join in exchanging their stock for stock of the New Company.

Lehman Brothers and Blair & Co., Inc., who are holders of substantial amounts of common stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and have taken an active part in the negotiations for the organization of the New Company, have approved and agreed to the Plan.

Attention is called to the fact that in order to declare the Plan operative, the consent of only 51% of the Common Stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation is necessary and that over 40% of such Stock outstanding has already consented. In order to insure participation in the Plan and the full benefits thereof, Stock should be deposited on or before November 15, 1928.

A "BIG BOY" comedy hit is not something that comes along just occasionally, or by accident. It's a regular, established asset on which the exhibitor can bank eight times a season.

It's just "as usual" when "Big Boy" delivers a knockout like "COME TO PAPA" or "HOT LUCK".

That's why the fans unanimously agree with the Film Daily's verdict: "The kid is a wonder".

mystery show since "Sherlock Holmes"!

And now
THE CREEPIES!

Movies — Talkies — Creepies. Mystery dramas are the latest film craze. . . . Bound to be, because mystery fiction ranks 47% in demand above any other class—and radio, stage and magazine developments all point to tremendous demand for this type of entertainment. And First National will enable you to cash in on the craze when it's at its height, with a series of three mystery thrillers, of which "The Haunted House" is the first.

Dread ghosts walking—secret doors slamming—frightened women shrieking—terror-struck intruders in the mystic Haunted House. "Sound" Showmanship

Exhibitor Points Out How It Can Be Used with Music Scores

By William A. Johnston

A LETTER from William H. McLaughlin, treasurer of the Stoneham Theatre Company, Stoneham, Mass., contains, to our way of thinking, an excellent suggestion for the presentation of sound pictures, and many other helpful remarks on the silent-sound picture situation. Mr. McLaughlin thinks that the present method of opening a picture with synchronized score is too much "like turning on a phonograph" and we are inclined to agree with him. He also comments on the constructive note in our recently published letter of Leon Jarodsky's, dealing with sound pictures:

Dear Mr. Johnston:

In your issue of Motion Picture News, under date of September 22, in your editorial you published a letter received from Leon Jarodsky of Paris, Ill. I know of no more constructive letter published for some time. Besides being timely in regard to sound silent picture problem, it is to a certain degree a solution for those exhibitors who can not get deliveries on first class equipment, and for those who do not desire to equip until such a time as they know there will not be an improvement in them from week to week.

His thought in regard to the two distinct demands for pictures is timely. In the sport world there are fans who like base-ball and those who like foot-ball, two distinct types of games that draw big crowds. In the picture game there are the fans who like the talkies and those the silent pictures. Don't ruin the big outdoor spectacles, for the sake of making them into talkies.

Even with the constructive suggestions of Mr. Jarodsky's letter, they will fall on deaf ears. It seems that the small exhibitor is considered small fry in this industry of big combines, yet he is the fellow who has more direct touch with the ultimate consumer of the pictures than any man in the industry. He has more first hand information than the men in the 75,000 and 100,000 cities that Mr. Jarodsky speaks of, that are near Paris, Ill.

Every man, woman and child in Paris knows and speaks to Mr. Jarodsky. Many patronize the big city as well as his theatre, and they will tell him of their reaction toward pictures they have seen in the cities. In the big theatres they cater to a great many transients, and the managers hardly ever get a chance to talk to his patronage from the palatial offices they occupy. The patron will, however, talk with the theatre men in their own home town and give him their ideas and suggestions. The exhibitor therefore, in the small town gets more first hand information in regard to likes and dislikes of motion picture fans, than any man in the business, still he is considered the smallest factor in the business. Therefore, I believe Mr. Jarodsky's qualifications to write the letter he did, are as great as the man who runs a palace in New York City.

While the talkies are being perfected, it would be well to give the synchronizing of pictures a little more expert attention. In the cathedrals and palaces of motion pictures, the picture is presented either by a prologue or an appropriate setting. I have observed that in the chains or first run theatres that since orchestras have been replaced by synchronization, the picture is presented in a very, very cold way.

Take the musical comedy for example, although the orchestra has to play during the most of the show, it always opens with an overture. The overture acts as a point of contact between the audience and the orchestra, and although your attention is on the show for the rest of the evening you have seen and felt the presence of the men who help put the show over.

In synchronizing pictures, an orchestra is used. Why not take a shot of it, of say 200 or 300 feet, and open the picture with it? Let the audience see the men who are giving them the music during the picture. The way synchronized pictures are presented now, it sounds as if when the picture starts, somebody back stage turns on the phonograph. If the orchestra synchronizing the picture were shown, the audience could visualize the men playing during the picture. If some thought were given to presenting the synchronized picture to the public right, so many theatres would not be putting back their orchestras.

The industry, it seems, has taken a step backwards. When "Don Juan" was synchronized the orchestra that played the score, gave an overture to the picture. I have seen "Four Sons," "Wings," "Lilac Time" and many others synchronized in first run houses, but the way of presenting them to the public, left a lot to the imagination, as to who and what was giving the music effects for them.

The opportunities for presenting synchronized pictures to the public are wonderful. The producers should not overlook them in their speed to perfect the talkies. Although granted that it is the talkies the public want, we are in business today, as well as tomorrow.

Yours very truly,
William H. McLaughlin.

"Move the Movies"

ONE of the wisest and most timely utterances we have seen on the sound-silent picture problem comes from M. H. Hoffman, vice president of Tiffany-Stahl. It appears as an editorial in "The Sparkler," the T-S house organ, and is addressed by Mr. Hoffman to his sales forces. But the message is one, which in its general reasoning and its splendid common sense, should go to all the industry. We quote:

"We must not forget that are several thousand theatres without sound equipment—theatres that must have pictures today.

"For at least two years more, there will be many thousands that will not be equipped to use pictures which are only suitable for sound equipment. Tiffany-Stahl proposes and intends to make pictures which will be good box office drawing cards regardless of whether they are shown in theatres with sound equipment or whether they are shown as just high-class entertainment without sound.

"You must carry your message to the exhibitor who is in doubt whether to travel by sound or without sound that his road in either case must lead to better entertainment.

"Sound pictures are new and marvelous in their box-office value, but the big thing after all is the picture. While all this rumpus is going on about sound, we must not let sound drown the voice of the exhibitor for bigger and better pictures. There will be a devil of a lot of noise of the wrong kind if there is a weakening in production in the enthusiasm over sound.

"Theatres that cannot be equipped for sound pictures for a year or more must meet the competition of sound pictures with their only means of competing—good silent pictures."

Interchangeability

Lowdown on Situation; Copyright Music Big Key to Problem; Otterson Statement Important Concession

INTERCHANGEABILITY in sound reproducing devices is now an established fact, at least so far as Western Electric subsidiary, Electrical Research Products Company, and R. C. A. Photophone equipment is concerned. According to advices received by this paper the restrictive measure in sound film rental contracts, whereby the exhibitor was permitted only to reproduce sound pictures recorded by the Western Electric process on Western Electric equipment, resulted from a clause in the original copyright license agreement between Edwin C. Mills and Electrical Research Products, which stated that a license under the copyrighted music of the publishers represented by Mr. Mills would be granted "to record said musical compositions or any of them . . . and to produce and reproduce said musical compositions publicly, but only by means of apparatus for the reproduction of sound operated or controlled through the agency of said recordings (or copies thereof) in, or as a part of such apparatus WHICH APPARATUS HAS BEEN OR SHALL BE FURNISHED BY LICENSEE OR ITS LICENSEES TO PRODUCERS, DISTRIBUTORS OR EXHIBITORS of motion pictures only; and to use, lease and sell such recordings and copies thereof, but only for the purpose of reproduction by said apparatus."

The foregoing clause means that Mills licensed the Electrical Research Products Company to reproduce the copyrighted music of his association only on Products' Equipment. Consequently, the recording licensees of the Electrical Research Products, such as Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox, etc., attached a rider to their sound picture contracts which bore the essence of the statement quoted above.

Photophone Has Showdown

It is understood that when R. C. A. Photophone subsequently obtained a copyright license from Edwin C. Mills, they demanded that the foregoing restriction be left out, and accordingly it is stated that Mr. Mills issued a letter to R. C. A. Photophone as a part of the R. C. A. License Agreement that he would not invoke this clause in the case of Photophone, and that Photophone was free to reproduce its sound pictures insofar as the copyright license was involved on apparatus made by a manufacturer who had already been licensed by Edwin C. Mills. It is understood that a copy of this letter was forwarded by Mills to Electrical Research Products.

However, in the absence of a definite statement on the subject of interchangeability from Electrical Research Products Company, it is reported that there was a show-down between Photophone and the Mills organization on that particular clause of the Mills

Agreement, and it has even been stated that Mills was advised by someone well versed in legal matters that the clause in question was illegal. However that may be, Mills forwarded a letter to both Electrical Research Products and R. C. A. Photophone on October 16, 1928, in which he stated definitely that he would not invoke the clause quoted above in this article (which, by the way, is clause No. 3 of the Mills License), for the reproduction of Photophone or Western Electric recordings on apparatus manufactured by another manufacturer who had also secured a copyright license from Mills.

To condense the matter, it is obvious that if the restrictive riders on Fox, Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contracts resulted from clause No. 3-A of the Mills Copyright License, that restriction is no longer necessary so far as the Mills organization is concerned. It has been hinted that Mills has instructed at least one of the sound-recording licensees to discontinue the use of this rider.

There is, of course, the matter of patents. Photophone and Electrical Research Products are cross-licensed in the public theatre field under one another's patents, and consequently no patent quibble is involved in the interchangeability situation between these two companies. However, the fact that Mills may be willing to issue a copyright license to manufacturers of sound picture equipment other than Electrical Research Products and R. C. A. Photophone does not mean that that other manufacturer also automatically secures a license under Photophone and Western Electric patents.

When told that a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS had seen a copy of the communication which Mills had directed to R. C. A. Photophone and Electrical Research Products, E. E. Bucher, Executive Vice-President of R. C. A. Photophone, Inc., declared that this letter solved the question of interchangeability between R. C. A. and Western Electric insofar as any copyright restriction may have heretofore prevented such interchangeability. He pointed out, however, that sound pictures made by the Photophone process had been reproduced in nearly 100 motion picture houses equipped with Movietone apparatus, and that no measures had been taken by any one to prevent the public reproduction of such pictures.

Concedes Interchangeability

Mr. Bucher also pointed out that Photophone had no objection to the public reproduction of films made by the Western Electric process on Photophone machines; that several such films had already been tested on Photophone apparatus, and were found to give satisfactory reproduction. Further, that Photophone would not prevent the public reproduction of Photophone made pictures on apparatus of other manufacturers provided the quality of reproduction was the equivalent of that produced by Photophone apparatus itself. He stated that this would not mean that any manufacturer who had no patent rights in the talking movie situation, would obtain an implied license under such patents because Photophone permitted its films to be reproduced on such machines. He pointed out that the patent question is quite apart from the mere matter of interchangeability and the public reproduction of such films.

That a copyright license will not be difficult to secure from the Music Publishers represented by Mills is evidenced from the Hagerstown incident. Gotham-Bristolphone Service Corporation had been negotiating for a license to use the copyrighted music controlled by the seventy-odd publishers that are represented by Edwin C. Mills. While these negotiations were pending, they asked permission to use the copyrighted synchronized score with "Lilac Time" at the Hagerstown showing and it was promptly granted. The music was reproduced on Bristolphone apparatus and the score was that of First National, a Western Electric Company licensee. There was no objection either from First National or Western Electric and the showing, according to all advices, was entirely satisfactory.

In granting that permission for the use of the music at the Hagerstown showing, Mr. Mills was quoted as saying that it was for experimental purposes and that the theatre would have to secure the consent of the manufacturer of the sound-picture and meet all possible patent rights. As the picture was delivered to the theatre by the Washington exchange of First National, there could be no question from that quarter. It is assumed that Bristolphone had patent rights necessary to go ahead with the showing, although there has been no definite statement on that point.

Otterson Statement

Aside from the question of settling the interchangeability problem through copyrighted music, J. E. Otterson issued a statement during the week that may or may not have considerable bearing on the subject, though the Otterson statement is at variance with conditions specified in contracts with licensees of the Western Electric Company and exhibitors who lease Western Electric reproducing equipment. The Otterson statement provides for interchangeability providing the reproducing equipment is satisfactory to the Western Electric Company.

The statement by Mr. Otterson, in part, says: "It (Western Electric Company) has all along maintained that the sound pictures of its licensees should be used only on theatre equipment which operates properly, reliably and efficiently to reproduce sound with adequate volume and quality equal to that obtained by the use of its own equipment."

Amplification of that part of the statement could not be secured from Mr. Otterson or any other executive of the Western Electric Company. Asked who was to be the judge of the quality of the equipment upon which interchangeability was permissible, it was said that was a question that would probably be answered in a subsequent statement by Mr. Otterson. Questioned also as to whether or not product of other companies may be reproduced on Western Electric equipment, the same answer was forthcoming.

With regard to the adequacy of rival equipment, Mr. Otterson said in his statement:

Competitive Equipment

"From time to time there have been a number of competitive equipments announced and advertised and claims have been made for simpler, cheaper and better systems than that of Western Electric. Some companies making such claims have passed out of existence before the echo of their advertising had died down.

"The fact remains that there is not a single competitive apparatus in successful commercial operation today. One or two have been installed recently, as in the past and are giving public demonstrations with claims of interchangeability with the Western Electric system. The public and theatre owners are told that such apparatus will reproduce the productions made with Western Electric recording equipment by our licensees. It is upon the strength of these claims and assurance that these competitive equipments are offered for sale. We cannot be expected to make a public statement of approval and acceptance every time a new device is offered for sale. When such devices in significant numbers have been installed and maintained in successful commercial operation over a reasonable time, the facts will determine themselves without any statement on our part. This is a matter that will be settled by the facts and not by the claims of interested parties. That, I believe, is the essence of this question of interchangeability."

Conditions Confusing

Under the terms of Western Electric Company's recording license, agreement with its licensees it is stipulated as follows: "Licensee agrees that it will use the recording equipment to be leased to it by Products as herein provided, pursuant to the methods and systems and in the manner prescribed by Products from time to time; and that it will distribute sound records made hereunder only for use with, on or in connection with reproducing equipment which operates properly, reliably and efficiently to reproduce sound from sound records made hereunder, with adequate volume and of quality equal to that obtained by the use of equipment supplied by Products."

Under the heading of "Replacements" in the operating instructions issued by Electrical Research Products, Inc., to theatres, is the following:

"The exhibitor agrees he shall not, without written consent of Products move, alter, change or modify the equipment, nor add anything thereto, nor take anything therefrom—nor operate, use or employ the equipment in conjunction with any record of sound or with any other device in any way related to the production or reproduction of sound, unless said records, devices other than those made under license from Products, shall have first been tested by Products and found by it to operate properly, reliably and efficiently and to reproduce sound with accuracy of quality and adequacy of volume, and approved by the legal counsel of Products as to freedom from infringement patents.

"It is expressly forbidden to experiment with the equipment of Products—by using records of types not authorized by us, as this might result in a situation constituting default of contract."

Exhibitor In Quandary

Just how these discrepancies in the conditions laid down by Western Electric Company will work out, remains to be seen. From the latest statement of Mr. Otterson, satisfactory equipment only is provided for, though it is not specified who shall be the judge of such equipment. Meantime the exhibitor, by the terms of his contract, faces the possibility of the canceling of his contract if he shows product of any company not licensed by Western Electric, unless it is first passed upon by a representative of Western Electric. Until Mr. Otterson issues a subsequent statement as to whether or not product other than that made by Western Electric Company licenses may be shown on Western Electric equipment, and until the ban is raised with regard to what constitutes satisfactory equipment of rival installing companies, the exhibitor will remain in a quandary on these conditions except for the protection afforded by the use of copyrighted music. It seems, however, that the exhibitor cannot go wrong in showing product on any satisfactory device, provided the company serving him with the records has the permission of the Music Publishers' Protective Association to reproduce the copyrighted music.

Problems Summarized

This situation may be summarized by the following statement:

1. There is apparently nothing in the Recording License Agreements between Electric Research Products and motion picture producers which prevents such producers from reproducing their sound pictures on apparatus made by others than Electric Research Products, provided such apparatus gives quality and volume equal to that of the Products system.

2. There is nothing in the Recording Contracts between R. C. A. Photophone and its licensees which prevents such licensees from reproducing their sound pictures on apparatus made by manufacturers other than Photophone, provided the apparatus operates efficiently and reliably and gives quality of reproduction that is not detrimental to Photophone's reputation.

3. Mills has issued a definite statement to the effect that he will not invoke Clause 3-A in the Western Electric and Photophone License Agreements under which Western Electric and its licensees were permitted to reproduce Mills copyrighted music only on apparatus produced by Western Electric (this clause was not invoked from the very beginning in the case of R. C. A. Photophone).

In reviewing the situation, this paper sees no cause for any further alarm over the interchangeability situation, unless some understanding exists between motion picture producers and their licensors that has not been disclosed by any documents made available to date. Keep in mind, however, the patent situation. That is another question.

"Green Hat", Formerly Banned, Produced By M-G-M in New Version

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 24.—It is reported that representatives of the Hays organization have tentatively approved the M-G-M version of Michael Arlen's play, "The Green Hat," which was, for some time, banned by Will H. Hays.

Following the purchase of the picture rights by M-G-M, Arlen wrote a new version for screen production under the title, "A Woman of Affairs." The picture was produced under this title by M-G-M with the close co-operation throughout the scenario preparation, production and cutting, with the Hays Hollywood representative.

However, final approval of the picture rests with Mr. Hays. The production was directed by Clarence Brown and stars John Gilbert and Greta Garbo. Following a preview in Pasadena, studio officials rate it as one of their best box office bets this year.

No Negotiations on for Merger of U. A. and M-G-M, Say Officials

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 22.—Reports that negotiations were under way for the amalgamation of United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were emphatically denied by both Joseph M. Schenck and Douglas Fairbanks of United Artists Corporation to a Motion Picture News representative.

Expressing surprise that the amalgamation story linking the two companies was again current, Schenck said, "There is no deal on for merger of United Artists with M-G-M and there has been no thought of such a transaction. We are well satisfied with the present standing of United Artists and have no reason for considering consolidation with M-G-M or any other company."

Fairbanks, when questioned concerning the report, declared, "That story returns periodically just like the asthma," and further explained there had been no discussions on any merger deal with any other company in the business, and United Artists would continue along present lines without affiliations of any kind.

Persistent reports have again been current in Hollywood for the past few days linking the two companies in a merger that would provide for United Artist producers releasing through M-G-M, and also allow for interchange of talent.

Roach Gets All Victor Artists in New Deal

Victor Equipment also to be Furnished; Harry Langdon to Make Roach Musical Comedy Series

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 23.—Hal Roach has effected a further tieup with Victor Talking Machine Company whereby the Roach organization will not only get Victor equipment, but the use of all Victor recording artists, including soloists, jazz orchestras, concert artists and performers under other classifications, all to serve as Roach stock players. Harry Langdon is also staging a comeback under the Roach banner. He will make a musical comedy series under a three-year contract.

Through an agreement made this month between the nucleus for a permanent musical stock company, Roach and the Victor Company, the latter will assume full charge and responsibility for the creation of appropriate musical scores and the recording of all synchronized productions of the Hal Roach studios.

Harry Langdon has signed a contract to make full-length talking pictures for Hal Roach, who has hitherto been identified only with the production of one and two reel comedies. Under the terms of this new affiliation the coast producer and cinema comedian will become pioneers in the field of the feature-length talking comedy.

While Roach came East several weeks ago to complete arrangements with the Victor Recording Company for the synchronization of one and two-reel pictures, the announcement of his new venture comes as somewhat of a surprise. No announcement has been made yet by the producer, or by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, through whom his comedies are released, as to the number of films Langdon will make during the coming season, but it is expected that at least two will be made.

Langdon first made a name for himself, like Harold Lloyd, in a series of two-reel comedies. He was referred to by one critic as "the comedian of glorified wistfulness," and was starred in a series of full-length pictures, of which "The Strong Man" and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" proved popular. These and later vehicles were released through First National.

At present Langdon is making a series of personal appearances in theatres throughout the country. In about two months he will be free to begin the first of his talking comedies for Roach. The comedian is an alumnus of the vaudeville and legitimate stage, and voice tests are said to have demonstrated exceptional ability for sound film work.

M-G-M to Drop Eva Von Berne Contract Option

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, October 24.—Eva Von Berne, German discovery of Irving Thalberg and Norma Shearer, who imported her for M-G-M, will not continue when her contract option expires in December. The M-G-M claim is that since they are making all-talkies they cannot use her because of her dialect. They will pay her passage back to Germany should she return. In six months Miss Von Berne appeared in one picture.

"Interference" Opening at Carthay Circle

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, October 23.—"Interference" opens at the Carthay Circle Theatre November 5, being the first Paramount picture booked in that house. It follows "Mother Knows Best," which closes there after only a six weeks' run.

"Lilac Time" preceded "Mother Knows Best," running ten weeks. The house record is held by "What Price Glory," which ran 24 weeks. "Seventh Heaven" is second with 22 weeks. "The Volga Boatman," which opened the Carthay Circle is third with 19 weeks.

Sammy Cohen to Leave Fox Organization

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, October 24.—Samy Cohen will not continue with Fox at the expiration of his present contract which has three months to run. It is his intention at that time to start free-lancing. Fox had planned co-starring him in comedy pictures, but since the death of Ted McNamara has been unable to secure a suitable partner or vehicles.

Doug May Continue as Academy President

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, October 24.—Despite repeated refusals of Doug Fairbanks to accept reelection to the presidency of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, pressure is being brought to bear by his friends which it is thought will result in his continuing in the office.

Mary Nolan Signed for New Gilbert Film

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, October 23.—Mary Nolan, the former Imogene "Bubbles" Wilson, has been signed by M-G-M as John Gilbert's leading woman in "Thirst," on the strength of her performance opposite Lon Chaney in "West of Zanzibar."

Harry Cohn Plans Two for Columbia Abroad

By L. C. MOEN

(European Correspondent, Motion Picture News)

PARIS, October 24.—Harry Cohn, of Columbia Pictures, after looking over the situation here, has decided that production for his company in France is impractical for the present.

He plans to make two pictures in England, beginning probably in March.

World Wide Selling Begins in January

THE opening of the selling season by World Wide Pictures has been set back to January to allow the inclusion of several important productions not available before that date.

RCA Photophone Acquires K-A-O

Holding Company Will Be Created and Extensive Expansion Is Planned in Entertainment Field

FORMAL agreement has been arrived at between RCA Photophone and Keith-Albee-Orpheum whereby the latter organization will pass under the practical management of RCA Photophone as soon as a plan is completed to create a holding company to be known as the Radio Keith-Orpheum Corporation. The deal is not one of the Radio Corporation of America, but of its subsidiary, RCA Photophone. A letter has been sent to the stockholders of Keith-Albee-Orpheum advising them of the plan.

David Sarnoff, vice-president and general manager of Radio Corporation of America, has accepted the office of chairman of the board of directors of the new company and RCA will have substantial representation on the board.

Stock of the new company will be issued to acquire the common stock of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and the capital stock of the FBO Productions, Inc., and stock will be issued to the Radio Corporation in return for the use of various patents, and exchange of services and co-operation in research in the amusement field. Keith-Albee-Orpheum operates about 250 theatres.

According to the plan outlined, control of the new company will be vested in the stockholders of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, considered as a group, for Class A and B stocks of the new company, which have equal voting rights but vary as to dividend policy, will be distributed on the following approximate basis: 1,100,000 shares to Keith-Albee-Orpheum, 500,000 shares to Radio Corporation, and 200,000 shares to FBO Productions.

The assets of the new holding company will be approximately $100,000,000, including the assets of Keith-Albee-Orpheum and FBO Productions alone, as the present constitution of the Radio Corporation is not affected under the plan and in no wise will that company become a part of the new organization set up. Radio's relation with Radio-Keith-Orpheum will be merely contractual.

The consolidation of the producing and distributing companies in the motion picture and theatrical business, having the full benefit of the present discoveries and future research of the Radio Corporation with which to compete actively in the talking-motion picture, broadcasting and allied fields, will bring into existence one of the most important factors of the "amusement" industry in this country.

With the signing of the agreement between RCA Photophone and Keith-Albee-Orpheum Joseph P. Kennedy passes out of both K-A-O and FBO. His resignation from both organizations has already been submitted and he will probably confine his motion picture activities to a connection with Pathe and in unit production.

Just what the plans for expansion are in the entertainment field under the new organization has not yet been determined, but they are elaborate and extensive though still in a formative stage. RCA Photophone has already announced that it will go extensively into motion picture production and that such production will get under way in the near future. The company at present has an option on a studio in New York for eastern production, but is still on the outlook for a more suitable studio.

For the present Photophone is busily engaged in making installations in motion picture theatres of their sound reproduction equipment. They started these installations only on the 18th of this month, but are now producing equipment rapidly and expect within the next six months to have their equipment in close to one thousand houses. The company only recently closed a contract with K-A-O for the installation of equipment in all houses of the circuit as well as affiliated houses. These installations alone will number about 700, but K-A-O installations will not be made exclusively. Other orders on file will be installed in between and all orders will be cared for as rapidly as possible. At present Photophone has eighteen experts in the field making surveys of picture houses to determine upon the proper equipment to be installed.

M.P.T.O.A. Re-Elects Woodhull

National Board Includes Several Chain Executives; Each Film Zone to Be Represented on New Committee

R. F. WOODHULL was re-elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on the final day of the ninth annual convention held at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, October 18.

The National Board of Directors was reduced from 29 to 10 members, and the new personnel contains several important executives of producer-distributor chains.

The Board is: Fred Desberg, temporary chairman; M. E. Comerford, Harold B. Franklin, Jack Miller, Colvin Brown, Harry Crandall, Sam Dembow, Joseph W. Walsh, Fred Wehrenberg and Fred Dolle. A. Julian Brylawski, chairman of the board for the past year, declined renomination.

Other officers chosen were: J. C. Brady, R. R. Biechele, Harry Marks, Charles Piquet and M. A. Lightman, regional vice-presidents; Jay Emanuel, treasurer; and M. J. O'Toole, secretary.

Woodhull on Tour

Shortly after his return to New York from Toronto, President Woodhull left on a visit to several state conventions, including the Western Iowa and Nebraska meeting at Omaha, whence he will go to Memphis, Tenn., where a tri-state exhibitor unit embracing Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee is being formed. He will also visit the Oklahoma convention at Oklahoma City, December 4.

It was decided by the new Board of Directors, before leaving Toronto, that another meeting of the Board would be held immediately after the Presidential election—probably about November 15.

At this meeting, the thirty-two members of the new Conference Committee will be chosen, one from each film zone.

There were no fireworks at the Toronto convention and President Woodhull declared that it was the most practical and successful of any M. P. T. O. A. annual session.

Herbert Hoover, Republican nominee, sent a congratulatory message to Mr. Woodhull when he was re-elected at Toronto. The Hoover telegram declared that it was a fine thing "for the relationship between the two countries that your convention should be held in Toronto this year. Such visits of important industrial representatives result in development of good will.

A graceful tribute was paid Canada's war dead when the ladies accompanying the American delegates to the convention assembled at the Toronto City Hall to lay a wreath at the foot of the Cenotaph. The ceremony took place on the lawn in front of the Toronto administration buildings where the exhibitors' wives were met by Acting Mayor Joseph Gibbons.

Fred Desberg of Cleveland, gave a valuable talk at the gathering on the subject of sound pictures as viewed by chain theatre officials.

"No Sound Monopoly"

"There is no chance in the world of a monopoly in sound pictures," Mr. Desberg declared in his opening remarks. The small theatres would not be prevented from getting sound equipment and the big companies would play fair.

"We are the talk of the world and our success is the concern of all," he declared. "We reached a pinnacle with silent films but then came sound pictures. You may discount them, you may not like them but "Interference"

Exclusive Review of Paramount's Talkie

By Edwin Schallert

Editor of The Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News

HOLLYWOOD, October 24. (By Wire).—Possibilities for intimate drama in sound are amply demonstrated in Paramount's first all-talking picture, "Interference." This represents perhaps the most interesting effort to date to add the note of quality and class to synchronized development, presenting a melodramatic plot much above the average. The production discloses, in the work of principals and direction, exceptionally smooth and well-knit results.

I have only seen the dialogue version of "Interference." It has been made as a silent film also. The talking version was directed by Roy J. Pomeroy, Paramount's technical expert on sound devices; the silent version by Lothar Mendes.

Speaking from observation of the one form, which is probably materially different from the other, I would say that "Interference" would attract especially a highly intelligent audience to the talkies. I listened to it in a new departure in recording, the double film method, which will be used at the Carthay Circle showing in Los Angeles. The film is also to be issued with disc recording. The double film recording, which means that sound is photographed on a separate strip of celluloid from the picture, seems to have the manifest advantage of smoothness and quality. The voices of all the leading players, including Evelyn Brent, William Powell, Clive Brook and Doris Kenyon were remarkably natural. Miss Brent's voice records quite exceptionally.

"Interference" belongs to the Enoch Arden class of stories—the husband, believed dead, returning after the wife has remarried. Philip Voaze, played by Powell, is reported missing during the war. After a due lapse of time, his wife has wed a prominent British doctor. Voaze has been something of a rotter, his wife having had an indiscreet romance with him prior to her marriage. Letters which she had written during this affair have fallen into the hands of a former sweetheart of Voaze's, who, upon his reappearance, decides to use them for blackmailing purposes. Nearly all of this takes place prior to the beginning of the story as told on the screen, which concerns the suffering and dread of the wife; the efforts of her husband, the doctor, to shield her; Voaze's murder of the blackmailer, and his sacrifice in confessing the crime so that the blame would not be placed on others.

Easy in action and filled with dramatic punch in well-contrived situations, "Interference" holds magnetic interest. It possesses elements of pathos and clever character-building with a story that had a sustained appeal because it is so skilfully worked out.

Altogether, this appears as a marked step forward.

Pickford Tax Hearing On

Actress and Fairbanks in Washington to Settle Vast Differences in Computation of Income Figures

MARY PICKFORD and Douglas Fairbanks were in Washington, D. C., Thursday to appear before Internal Revenue Bureau officials with regard to the income tax of Miss Pickford and the Pickford Company. The hearing will also have a bearing on Mr. Fairbanks' income tax, and the entire controversy is reported to involve a matter of $3,500,000.

The question involved with regard to Miss Pickford's tax, which was the only one up for hearing Thursday, is said to be whether or not the tax should be based on all of her productions as a group instead of listing incomes individually. The former method enables her to deduct losses of unsuccessful releases from the totals made by successful ones. Another angle in the controversy is said to be over the fact that picture production costs were listed as expenses rather than investments.

Miss Pickford contends that she has overpaid the government, while the government's contention is that vast sums are due according to the method of computation. The conference is being held in connection with the effort to settle the estate of Miss Pickford's mother, Charlotte Pickford, who died last March, and who is said to have had an interest in the Mary Pickford Company. The estate, it was said, could not be closed until the matter of taxes was settled.

The government contends that Mr. Fairbanks is $1,090,273.56 in arrears, covering the years 1927, 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1925. His case has been appealed from the Commission of Internal Revenue to the United States Board of Tax Appeals, and therefore is not included in the present controversy.

It is said that the principles finally governing in Miss Pickford's case may serve as a precedent in the final decision of Mr. Fairbanks' case. The controversy is said to be somewhat similar to that in the Charles Chaplin income tax issue which was adjusted some time ago.

Chaplin Chooses New Girl Player for "City Lights"

Virginia Cherrill, a 20-year old Chicago girl who has never before appeared before a motion picture camera, has been chosen by Charlie Chaplin to play the character of the blind girl in "City Lights," his next production for United Artists. The young miss was one of more than a hundred aspirants for the role. In ten days she will begin acting in the Chaplin picture.

Miss Cherrill is a blonde, blue-eyed and five feet four. She was educated at Kemper Hall Convent, Kenosha, Wisconsin, and at the Starrett Finishing School for Girls, Chicago.

Paramount Dinner Dance Welcomes Chevalier

Maurice Chevalier, the newest of the Paramount stars, who arrived in the United States several days ago, was royally entertained and feted by the Paramount organization last week by a dinner dance given in his honor at the Ritz Carlton, New York, and attended by 300 dinner guests who included scores of well known personalities in metropolitan circles.

Short speeches of welcome were made by Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky and other Paramount executives.

Mrs. Thomas D. Soriero Dies Suddenly

Mrs. Thomas D. Soriero, wife of the managing director of the Rochester Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., died suddenly last Sunday. The funeral was held in Providence, R. I., on October 24.

Besides Mr. Soriero, two sons survive, one of whom is in the Junior Class at Dartmouth.

A wide circle of friends in the industry extend sympathy to Mr. Soriero and his family.

Movietone Plant a Gibraltar

Remarkable Indications of Confidence in Future of Sound Films Found in Fox Establishment in Westwood

By EDWIN SCHALLERT

Editor of The Los Angeles Times review and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News

HOLLYWOOD, October 22. — Should there seem to be need of a definite sign to prove Hollywood's thoroughgoing belief in the future of talking pictures, it can be found today in the tributary community of Westwood. It is there that the new Movietone plant of the Fox Film Corporation is located, the most unique establishment unquestionably that has grown out of sound film fever to date.

The dedication of this plant is to be celebrated October 28. It will be in operation probably some time between November 1 and November 15. Officially it is the later date that is set for the start of activities, but unofficially it is conceded that the beginning may be a full two weeks sooner.

I visited the locale a day or too ago. One needs to take his visualizing powers with him fully to appreciate what is going on. It is a little difficult fully to grasp its significance at first sight.

On approach one beholds three dominating gray stone buildings. Two are duplicates—the stages, oblong and red-roofed. The third is more nearly square and amply provided with windows. It is for administration.

Hills Cleared Away

One comes upon them through a mass of sets that are used on the Fox Hills tract for exterior locations. Ground which formerly was hills has been sweepingly cleared away. The whole aspect of the country has been changed.

The plan of this studio will, I think, be a remarkable thing. It will be the last word in adornment and in utility as well. The two stages that one sees virtually complete are in reality four stages. Each separate building houses two. A third building for stage No. 9 is in process of erection. Two others with double stages are to be built, corresponding to those already virtually completed. There will be nine stages in all.

It is to be a veritable city, for in addition to stages and administration building, there are a dozen smaller structures, that will comprise synchronizing rooms for music, test laboratories, dressing room buildings, a recital and rehearsal hall, to name but some of them.

Utmost Precautions Taken

I talked to Keith Weeks, a construction engineer, who gained his experience on big projects in South America, and who has been in charge of the construction for the Fox corporation, and he explained some of the novel features of the establishment. One of the most striking, I believe, is that one of the stages is to possess a pipe organ complete, one of the largest ever built. This will be used where organ accompaniments and organ effects are deemed advantageous.

The ventilating system for the stages seemed to me one of the most remarkable achievements. Talkie stages are not renowned for their comfort. The earlier ones built were so stuffy and hot especially in mid-summer as to be a trial upon the nerves.

At Fox Hills, outside of sound-proofing and the perfection of acoustics, an absolutely controlled temperature seems to be one of the chief things sought. Its effect upon the spirit of picture-making can be imagined. The air is washed, cooled and will be maintained at an even temperature winter and summer.

Least Sound Ruinous

Superficially considered, this might seem a simple accomplishment, but then with a talking stage there are entirely different factors to be reckoned with. The least sound whether it should come from the accidental tap of a carpenter's hammer, or should be echoed through a ventilating shaft, would be ruinous to a scene. The utmost precautions have been taken to insure the silence of the system installed, and where the smoothness of the shafts themselves, their depth underground, and their distance from all mechanical apparatus might not seem sufficient, principles of insulation have been employed to render assurance doubly sure.

The stages are built with an amazing solidity. I am told that the effect of an earthquake would hardly be felt unless it happened to be right under the building. The floors are so constructed as to avoid

Story Cost Arouses Officials

Several Discover They've Been Paying Thousands for Paper Covered Yarns That Sell for Fifteen Cents

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

REOrganization of story reading departments in several studios may take place shortly as a result of the discovery by the producers that they have been paying from $5,000 to $15,000 for stories which could be purchased for 15 cents. The 15 cent outlay would be necessary to purchase paper-backed novels and standard classics at second-hand book stores, which now develop as the base of supplies for ideas of many high-priced "original" writers.

There are a number of scenarists in Hollywood who have been cleaning up by furnishing plots of any and all requirements within anytime from a day's to a week's notice. One recent case was the purchase of a serial by an independent from a prolific screen writer. When the first episodes were shot a film cutter recognized them as a "blood-and-thunder" series published by firms dealing in paper-backed novels exclusively. The producer could have bought the entire serial for under $2.00 instead of $3,500, had his reading department been proficient.

The most fertile market for "originals" are the standard classics and European authors. Scenarists are rewriting and rehashing the works of George Eliot, Schiller, Hugo, Balzac, De Maupassant, Poe, Dumas, Anatole France, Pushkin, Oscar Wilde, even Charles Dickens and Shakespeare without being checked by reading departments.

There are a few producers who are taking the opposite angle, that of producing standard works on which copyrights have expired. This gives the picture the double value of a standard title and famous author, without any initial outlay for screen rights. Among such recent productions are "The Man Who Laughs," "Resurrection," "Redemption," "Les Misérables," "The Three Musketeers," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and new productions of that type are "Evangeline" and "The Man in the Iron Mask."

There have been a few instances in which producers paid for copyrights shortly before they expired and neglected to renew them to protect their interests. One recent case was with "A Cigarette Maker's Romance." The old Goldwyn Pictures Corporation was reported to have paid $37,000 for the rights to this F. Marion Crawford story and when the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer merger took place the rights went over to that firm. The story hasn't been made and recently, Frank P. Donovan, a two reel producer, announced it as part of a program of classics he was making. M-G-M notified him immediately that he couldn't make it inasmuch as they owned the screen rights. Donovan informed them that they must be mistaken since the copyright expired within the past two years and has not been renewed. He intends to make it and M-G-M is evidently left without any legal recourse. The only producers who cannot remake an uncopyrighted classic are those belonging to the Hays' organization, in cases where another member has registered his intention of making it.

Producers feel that they should be protected in all such cases by a thoroughly efficient reading department. According to one executive, that department should function not only on the reading of scripts, but should be able to tell immediately whether a story has been published before or not.

Italy Establishes Film Institute in Rome

Plans for the establishment by the Italian Government of an International Educational Cinematograph Institute in Rome under the direction of the council of the League of Nations were approved at the last meeting of the Institute of Intellectual Cooperation, according to the monthly summary of the League of Nations, copies of which have just reached the United States.

The offer of the Italian Government to found and to maintain the institute was accepted by the council and assembly in 1927 and a statute covering the organization was framed by representatives of the Italian Government and the Secretary General. The statute defines the object of the new institute as being to promote production, dissemination and exchange of instructive films on education, art, industry, agriculture, commerce, public health, social questions, etc.

French Theatre Magnate Visits Astoria Studio

Louis Aubert, president of the Film Chamber of Commerce of France and owner and manager of the largest chain of moving picture theatres in Europe, last week visited the Paramount studio in Long Island. He is in America to study methods of production and to look into talking pictures, especially. He arrived in New York in company with Maurice Chevalier, Paramount's French star.

When he visited the Astoria studio, Mr. Aubert was greeted by two fellow countrymen, Jean de Limur, now directing "The Letter" there, and Robert Florey, who recently finished directing "The Pusher-in-the-Face." He also met Monta Bell, production executive, and John W. Butler, executive manager.

Mr. Aubert is to go to Hollywood on Saturday for a visit of two weeks. He plans to return to France late in November.

RCA Reported Ready to Buy Warners; Deal Denied by Albert Warner

THE Radio Corporation of America may shortly acquire Warner Bros., according to reliable information just received. It is said that in the negotiations by which RCA-Photophone gained control of K-A-O, Warners figured prominently. At that time it was said that Warners were in competition with RCA for purchase of the vaudeville circuit, but the latest information is that efforts were being made to include Warners in the deal by which K-A-O passed to the radio company.

According to the story as related the Warner Vitaphone contract with Western Electric is far from satisfactory, with the status of the companies in arbitration, and Warners are willing to dispose of their holdings to RCA as soon as satisfactory terms are arrived at. It is said that these terms will be reached probably within the next two or three weeks.

Albert Warner, of Warner Bros., emphatically denies that his company is now for sale or that it will be in the future. He said Warners has spent a lot of money in newspaper advertising announcing the company was not for sale and that that still goes.

Fox Deals for 160 Houses Reported Closed

Now Has Greatest Exhibiting Strength in Metropolitan Area; Moves in Progress to Acquire More Holdings

WILLIAM FOX' negotiations for the acquisition of more than 150 New York houses to be known as Fox Metropolitan Theatres with approximate capital of $80,000,000, are reported closed. Contracts have been passed, initial payments have been made and actual occupancy of the large group of houses, will take place on or about December 1, it is said.

With this chain of theatres in his possession, Mr. Fox is undisputedly the largest theatre-owner in greater New York and the foremost exhibitor in that territory. He is out now to strengthen his position, it being said that he will use the holdings of the Metropolitan Theatres as the foundation for a powerful chain of theatres in the east. Negotiations are now progressing to acquire theatres in other sections.

The Schine circuit in New York State and Ohio, operating a large number of houses; the Netoco company, which is strong in the New England district, and others have been approached, it is reported, by A. C. Blumenthal, representing the Fox interests. There will be no restrictions as to the locations or numbers of the theatres sought.

It is planned to have the houses of the Metropolitan Theatres immediately wired by Electrical Research Products for the presentation of sound pictures. About 40 of the 160 will show films and vaudeville and the remainder straight pictures. The Movietone News, showing twice a week at these theatres, will mean about 500 more booking days for this Fox newsreel.

First National Releasing 4 Features During Nov.

Headed by "Lilac Time," the company's special, four First National productions will make their appearance at the First National exchanges as general releases.

On November 4, "The Haunted House," with Thelma Todd, Larry Kent and Chester Conklin, will be released. November 11 will mark the release of "Outcast," Corinne Griffith's newest vehicle. On November 18 will come "Lilac Time," now in its thirteenth week as a roadshow engagement at the New York Central. The final feature from First National during the month will be "The Ware Case," an English drama with Stewart Rome and Betty Carter in the leads, which will be issued on November 25.

"Noah's Ark"

Exclusive Review of Warner Production

By Edwin Schallert

Editor of The Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News

HOLLYWOOD, October 24. (By Wire).—Whatever has been wanting in spectacular thrills this year will be afforded in a sensational manner in Warner Brothers production of "Noah's Ark." In sheer magnitude it is a unique picture, and unquestionably it will prove a great popular attraction.

The deluge scenes are as terrific a climax as has been seen in ages, and the scope of the entire Biblical portion is pictorially tremendous. The building of the Ark; the destruction of the pagan city by the herculean rush of water; the congregating of the beasts of the earth, skilfully depicted, are among the many high spots, besides the moving story built about Japheth, the son of Noah and the girl, Miriam.

One is naturally drawn to compare this feature with Cecil B. De Mille's "The Ten Commandments." Like that earlier and very successful film, it combines the modern and the Biblical. However, the Biblical episode is not presented as a prologue but as the culminating event, which is an effective expedient. While the modern story is not momentous in itself, its interest is enhanced by frequent talking sequences and humanness of incident.

There is a theme of patriotism, blended with the love motif, which together will enlist the favor of audiences. It is a romance of an American student in Paris and a German girl that is portrayed. The outbreak of war induces the girl to hide her identity and remain in France. Her lover and a Russian intelligence officer are the only ones who are aware that she belongs to the enemy. The plot revolves around these three, with brotherly devotion between the girl's lover and his buddy as a supplementary phase.

Comparison is made between the World War and the Biblical account of the Flood, the war being described as a deluge of blood. The thought projected is that as the Biblical deluge was the last great cataclysm of Divine Cause visited upon earth, so the war should be the last great disaster of human cause. A message of peace is therefore suggested.

Undoubtedly, "Noah's Ark" has an inspirational meaning, apart from unusual entertainment qualities. It is a picture that consequently should have two-fold appeal. The fact that it is the biggest spectacle of the year will give it exceptional pulling power. For those theatres that are not equipped for sound this can be increased, I believe, very materially by back stage effects during the deluge scenes, because with full uproar the power of these is intensified.

The leading players in both the modern and Biblical stories are George O'Brien, Dolores Costello, Noah Beery, Gwynn Williams and Paul McAllister. Louise Fazenda appears in the modern sequences. Nominally, Miss Costello is the star, although the film is so elaborate in pictorial detail that major credit is perhaps reflected on those identified with direction and supervision, including Michael Curtiz and Darryl Francis Zanuck.

Woodhull Re-elected

you cannot ignore them." The present popularity of sound pictures was due to their novelty "but the industry is big enough to make them permanent."

His advice to exhibitors using sound pictures was, he said, to be patient, to watch the equipment—it needed care always—and to refrain from misrepresentation in designing whether a sound picture had musical accompaniment or spoken dialogue. "Do not let the screen whisper and do not let it shout," he said. "Do not apologize for any sound picture—always emphasize its good points."

Mr. Desberg urged exhibitors not to kill the goose that laid the golden egg and added: "There will always be millions of patrons for silent pictures." But to use a common expression, "you ain't heard nothing yet," he concluded.

One of the most important addresses on sound picture developments and prospects before the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at Toronto was given by M. A. Lightman of Eldorado, Arkansas, the title of his talk being "Sound Pictures on Main Street."

"Sound pictures should be welcomed with open arms," Mr. Lightman declared. "Sound pictures mean more to the exhibitors on 'Main Street' than to any other because they will bring great orchestras and the voices of great men to the small towns. In place of a thousand different orchestras we will have music befitting the picture. Main Street will have to wait for sound pictures but Main Street is patient and it will really benefit by the delay in installations."

Silent pictures would have to be better to hold their own, Mr. Lightman continued. The menace to the business is that silent films may be neglected in which case Main Street would suffer. As few titles as possible should be used to interpret the sound picture, he believed, and those titles should be spoken. While small town theatres would be prevented from having sound equipment for some time, the small town exhibitor should help in the development in every possible way because the "Main Street populations" would be the most affected by the adoption of sound pictures.

Eberson Gives Address

A valuable discussion regarding types of theatre buildings was heard when John Eberson of Chicago, well-known theatre architect, delivered an address on the subject of "How to build and equip a theatre."

Mr. Eberson declared that the average architect did not use his own talent or originality and many theatres were built on similar lines. It was not the lavish expenditure of money that made a theatre successful, he said, but a well-conceived, warm and friendly interior, with a homelike atmosphere to suit the environment and tastes of the particular community that counted. In such houses of entertainment and recreation, people could get the most out of clean and wholesome performances, he declared.

T. D. Goldberg of Baltimore wanted to know if the M. P. T. O. had any facts regarding the interchangeability of sound equipment and the interchange of sound pictures. Members went to the convention to get all possible information and this was a subject that should be taken up, he believed. He did not have his suggestion in the form of a resolution, however, and it was intimated by President Woodhull that this was a matter for future consideration.

Oscar A. Price in N. Y. With New Production

Bearing with him a print of his new picture called "Forbidden Grass," Oscar A. Price returned to New York from Hollywood last Tuesday, October 16. Evelyn Nichols, sister of Anne Nichols, the playwright, is responsible for the story of "Forbidden Grass," the theme of which is the efforts of a western state to rid its plains of wild horses in order to provide sheep and cattle with grazing grounds.

"Driftwood" a Columbia October Release

Columbia's first feature release for October was "Driftwood," which was available for exhibitors beginning October 15. Don Alvarado, borrowed from United Artists, is co-starred with Marceline Day. Artists, is co-starred with Marceline Day.

In and Out of Town

BETTY BRONSON, Warner Bros.' star, has cancelled her steamship reservations for Europe and has returned to Hollywood following instructions from Studio Chief J. L. Warner to play the lead in "She Knew Men."

JACK R. KEEGAN, special Vitaphone Field Representative, left this week on an extended trip, which will take him to the Warner Bros. Vitaphone branches in Philadelphia, Atlanta, Dallas and Chicago. He expects to be gone for about five weeks.

ARTHUR J. ZELLNER, personal representative for Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, arrived in New York on Sunday, October 21. He will confer with United Artists heads in connection with forthcoming productions.

ON Monday, October 22, Edwin Carewe arrived in New York on the S.S. Leviathan. He remained but a short while and then left for Hollywood where he will complete preparations for the production of "Evangeline," the next Dolores Del Rio vehicle for United Artists.

AL JOLSON and his bride, Ruby Keeler, returned Monday on the S.S. Leviathan from their European honeymoon. While in London they attended the first performance of "The Jazz Singer." Jolson, who has no immediate plans for the future, says his next production will be called "Mammy."

DOLORES DEL RIO and her mother, Senora Asunsolo, sailed for America from Paris on the S.S. Paris on Wednesday, October 24.

GEORGE PEARSON, managing director of the British Screen Productions, Ltd., London, arrived in New York during the early part of this week on the S.S. Leviathan. He is here primarily to investigate the talking movies situation.

PHIL REISMAN, general sales manager of Pathe, is back at the home office following a tour of the Pathe exchanges taking him to the West Coast and the Northwest.

DAVID LOEW departed from New York recently on the Ile de France. He will attend the opening of the Empire theatre in London.

DR. PAUL FEJOS, director, and Glenn Tryon, star, who have been in New York taking atmospheric shots for Universal's production of "Broadway," have returned to California leaving Arthur Cosine, New York location manager and production executive, to finish the New York shots necessary for the picture.

ED. J. SMITH, general manager of Tiffany-Stahl, has just returned from a trip to Toronto, where he attended the convention of the M. P. T. O. A. He later visited exhibitors in Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and Albany.

MAURICE CHEVALIER, European stage star imported for talking pictures to be produced by Paramount, left for Hollywood Thursday, October 25, for the West Coast, where he will immediately commence work. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Chevalier and his daughter, Francis.

RAYMOND HACKETT, who has been playing in "The Trial of Mary Dugan," left last week for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, where he will play in the picturization of that play.

Talkies for Australia

Sound Installations and Construction of Atmospheric Theatres Occupy Centre of Stage

SOUND picture installation and construction of modern, de luxe atmospheric theatres occupy the center of the stage in Australian motion picture circles at the present time, according to communications from Pat Campbell, of United Artists (Australasia) Ltd., Sydney, and Millard Johnson, of Union Theatres, Ltd., Sydney.

Union Theatres are pioneering introduction of Vitaphone and Movietone in Australia. Stuart Doyle, managing director of this company is in New York at the present writing, arranging for installation of twenty sets to be in work early in the new year, and attending to other company business in line with expanding present theatre holdings.

Censorship and accent may offer something in the way of a problem when talking pictures make their debut in this country but Union Theatres and Hoyts, the two largest circuits, although well aware that installations will cost a lot of money are both earnestly going ahead with equipment plans. Union has already arranged for the granting of twelve licenses from the sound companies and nine more are to follow.

For their theatre expansion program, Union Theatres have retained John Ebersson, well known Chicago architect who was first featured in MOTION PICTURE NEWS "Buyer's Guide." Mr. Ebersson introduced the atmospheric type theatre to Australasia three months ago when the Capitol theatre, Sydney, was opened. This house seats 3,500 and has been a pronounced success from the start. The State, another Australia house nearing completion in Sydney, is the most ambitious theatre project Australia has yet seen. It will cost five million dollars and will combine twelve floors of shop arcades and a 3,000 capacity Louis type theatre. In Melbourne, Union will open a 4,000 seat duplicate of the Sydney Capitol in January, while at Perth another 2,700 seat atmospheric house has just opened. Union either owns or controls the largest number of theatres in Australia, and last month increased their capital by the issue of two million dollars worth of shares at par which was in the nature of a bonus distribution for the three million dollars worth of shares already issued, as the latter are at 50 per cent premium.

Shows are run somewhat differently in Australia than in the United States, according to Mr. Campbell. Only one show is given at night and it lasts from two to three hours. There is a supper show between five and eight P. M., but dinner time cuts the attendance. During regular shows, a law also provides for a ten-minute intermission. Mr. Campbell glowingly praises the hospitality of the Australians: "a great country and the people are great. Nothing is too much trouble for them to make you as comfortable as possible and to show you a good time."

"Marriage by Contract" Previewed in Philly

Tiffany-Stahl's special production, "Marriage by Contract," was previewed last Sunday evening, October 21, at the New Carman Theatre in Philadelphia, under the auspices of Al Blofson, manager of the Philadelphia exchange of the organization. Exhibitors from the Philadelphia territory and clubwomen attended the showing. The invitations were worded in the form of a wedding announcement. The lobby of the New Carman was decorated with different colored posters that dealt with the exploitation possibilities of the picture.

"The Love Charm," a Tiffany-Stahl Color Classic, preceded the showing of the feature.

Columbia Signs Forbes for "College Coquette"

Ralph Forbes will play the leading male role for Columbia in "The College Coquette," which Christy Cabanne is directing with Marceline Day in the title role.

Talking Trailers to Take Place of Stars at Theatre Openings

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, October 22.—Personal appearances of stars at theatre openings will be supplanted by Movietone trailers of the players. Several studios are now engaged in making reels from 100 to 500 feet in length, in which featured players or stars give greeting to the audience, or make speeches dedicating openings of new theatres. Fox is reported to be making an entire series of such trailers which will be placed in stock and which are adapted for use by any theatre requiring a personal appearance.

The Movietone personal appearance will save producers several hundreds of thousands yearly. In the past the custom has been to send feature or stock players around the country, the producer bearing the brunt of transportation and hotel expenses.

The "canned" personal appearance was inaugurated by Norma Talmadge some months ago, to gratify requests of several exhibitors. The invitations had conflicting dates and Miss Talmadge couldn't accept one without offending the others. She "Vitaphoned" a personal appearance and gracefully got out of her delima.

First National Disc Pictures Not to Be Released as Vitaphones

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 22.—Although plans have been made to sound and dialogue, a number of First National productions at Warner Studios via the disc method, the pictures will not be released as First National Vitaphone productions. Just what sound brand the pictures will carry has not yet been decided, but it was said that Warners consider the trade name of Vitaphone too valuable to place on pictures of other organizations or even on product of First National in which the Warners hold control.

It was intimated that Warners would not allow the Vitaphone trade mark to be used by First National unless at some future date they were able to purchase all stock of that company and thereby have complete ownership.

Beats Texarkana Blues

Texas Exhibitor Wins Notable Victory Over Blue Law Element; Other Points Settle Question

TWO settlements of the Sunday show question and one discontinuance appear to be last week's highlights of the eternal controversy between exhibitors and the Blue Law element in some sections of this country.

In Texarkana, Texas, Arthur and Mrs. Eva Hardin, operators of the Saenger and Strand Theatres, inaugurated Sunday shows which resulted in capacity business. No trouble was expected, but both were shortly placed under arrest, charged with violation of a city ordinance. The first jury took six minutes to free Mr. and Mrs. Hardin but the second panel turned them loose in exactly two minutes. The Ministerial Alliance threatens to appeal the verdict.

In defense of his movement, Mr. Hardin stated:

"In opening these theatres to the public on Sunday we feel that we are not only filling a demand but are doing what we can, in our way, to fall in with the spirit that is characteristic of the new Texarkana.

"No one wants to injure the Sabbath. The people have decided that for themselves, and they have also decided that it is not necessary to be idle and lugubrious in order to be religious. Good citizens and prominent business men have urged me to put on these shows. Good men and women I know travel ninety miles to see Sunday movies."

R. E. Falkenberg, Lexington, Iowa, owner and manager of the Majestic, has announced that Sunday shows will be discontinued owing to the fact that popular approval seems to be lacking. Business for seven days was no better than for six.

In Ames, Joe Benjamin Gerbracht, manager of Commonwealth Theatres' Capitol Theatre appears to have settled the argument for the downtown section of the city but the New Ames Theatre, in the college section, is still in doubt as to Sunday showings.

Censor Act Modified

Minneapolis Mayor Objects to Police Interference; Men Assigned Must Stick to Actual Violations

THE lid of censorship, which was clamped suddenly down on Minneapolis theatres last week by the city council, was partially lifted this week by Mayor Leach. The Mayor announced that he would not permit Minneapolis policemen to act as censors for the theatres and that the two detectives who had been assigned to the job would have to confine their activities to actual violations of the law.

"There will be no policemen censoring the theatres of this city, Mayor Leach asserted. "If operators of theatres are violating the law, Detectives Kittridge and Kaufman can arrest them under the ordinance. If the detectives have a case, I'll back them to the limit of my authority."

The Mayor explained that the police department can do nothing that is not provided for by statute, and that the city ordinance provide very definitely for questions of immorality and indecent shows.

The city council had decided on censorship after the charge had been made that the Gayety Theatre, a burlesque house, was offering shows of a low moral tone. Following their decision, Detectives Kittridge and Kaufman had been assigned to the rather difficult task of censoring all the shows in the city—stage and movie both—every week.

On the heels of the Mayor's decision came the announcement of Alderman Victor Johnson that he would propose an ordinance to the city council providing for permanent police censorship of theatrical productions. Such an ordinance, he pointed out, would supplement the present disorderly conduct law and would make it mandatory on the Mayor to keep theatres free from objectionable performances. The ordinance, he said, would propose raising the license fees of all theatres in the city a few dollars each to pay the cost of censorship, which would require the full time of one man.

Meanwhile the question of revoking the Gayety's license still hangs fire. A hearing before the city council has been postponed on request of Al Steffes, president of the Northwest Theatre Owners Association, who was in New York and who wanted to attend the meeting in person.

Fox-Movietone Plant a Gibraltar

the slightest tremor, and to offset that which cannot be avoided.

In a year from now this Movietone plant will be something to behold for its decorative beauty, as well as its practical value. When I saw it no equipment had yet been installed, but the provisions made for its housing were the most ample and complete. Each stage unit will be an institution to itself, with plenty of space for shooting the large as well as the very compact scene, amid a prevailing silence like that which could be found within a bank vault.

A Rock of Gibraltar

The entire establishment will be surrounded by a wall, probably of the Spanish stucco type. Entrance will be gained through the administration building, except by the player, the director and others concerned on the sets. This administration building is a feature in itself. It has spacious corridors and attractive offices. Some of them, it is kiddingly said, are sound-proof, so much of a habit did it become to build everything that way while the spell of construction was on.

It is a striking thing to see this rock of Gibraltar—for that is what it most resembles—rising where there were nothing but bean fields a few years ago. It is a mute argument for the future of talking pictures—one of the strongest I have seen. And the most remarkable part of it, considering the tons of concrete that had to be poured to make it a fact even as far as it has gone, the leveling of the ground that had to be done, the huge scope of the enterprise as a whole, is that it will be in operation in scarcely more than ninety days since the first excavating was done, and the first stone laid.

Additions to Casts

"She Goes to War" (U. A.) Edmund Burns; "No Defense" (W. B.) Lee Moran, William Tooker; "Madonna of Avenue A" (W. B.) William Irving; "Kid Gloves" (W. B.) John Davidson; "The Lawless Legion" (F. N.) Paul Hurst.

Columbia to Distribute "Dawn" Starting Nov.

"DAWN," the English-made production of war which is now road-showing throughout the country, has been acquired by Columbia for national distribution beginning November 11. Starring Sybil Thorndyke, the picture was made in Belgium with the consent and cooperation of the government.

The Voice of the Screen

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

Expert Stresses Presentation Needs

Points Necessity of Proper Handling for Equipment in Theatres

RUDOLPH MIEHLING, Electrical Engineer and Supervisor of Projection for Publix Theatres, Inc., New York, gave an important and highly appreciated address before the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and Canada, at Toronto, Ontario, on the subject of "Our Industry Meets a New Problem," in which he dealt with the sound picture feature. Mr. Miehl said, in part:

"Ordinarily we are not concerned with the problems of manufacture prior to delivery at the theatre but we are very much interested in everything that concerns the presentation of the entertainment of the public. Sound pictures can either be developed to tremendous commercial returns or decline to mediocre returns according to the efficiency of merchandising. If you wish to make this investment pay, as so many others have already done, you must present this new form of entertainment to your patrons in a most creditable manner.

"When you have had the equipment for the presentation of sound or synchronized pictures installed, you must realize that it is not automatic in its operation. Also certain other distinct conditions must be fulfilled, in addition to the mechanical and electrical equipment, and the human element must be seriously considered.

"Preparatory to the installation of the apparatus, the sound engineer comes to your theatre and makes a survey for his company and from this survey certain recommendations are made in order that you may have perfect sight and sound reproduction; these recommendations should be carefully weighed and not cast aside; some of them may seem unreasonable but if the

Baltimore Sees Need of All Talkies to Maintain Sound Interest

FULL talking pictures are now the need of the theatres in Baltimore equipped to show sound productions, according to a prominent exhibitor who is a pioneer and is the head of a company operating about ten theatres.

The novelty of the sound synchronized productions has worn off, according to this exhibitor with the public and now the patronage is dwindling and it is necessary to spur interest further by giving them full talking productions.

When the houses in his circuit went into the sound policy, the crowds were great but since then they have been steadily decreasing. It is understood from this exhibitor that it is necessary for each sound equipped house to take in $500 more each week than formerly to give them a decent profit and many houses have increased their admission prices at night.

There is no question about the advent of the sound and talking pictures in the business having been a life saver to it in Baltimore. But it is noticeable that with the renewed interest the silent houses have been doing better also.

engineer's views and yours do not agree, you can talk it over and a mutual agreement arrived at.

"Your projection staff, the keystone of the operation, should be given your co-operation so that they may receive adequate instruction in the proper handling of the equipment. You must see to it and insist that they obtain full information on all phases, and you must offer encouragement and establish a close relationship. We give them information on the methods and principles used so that their minds will be in a more receptive mood to absorb any future knowledge on the subject. In other words, we expect them to know enough about sound equipment to put on a 100 per cent performance. In the event of a breakdown, we expect them to make temporary repairs or adjustments to keep the show running, leaving the permanent repairs to the engineers of the company which has installed the apparatus. We do not mean by this that they are to tear down or take any part of this equipment apart just to see what is inside.

"I will give you a few comments on the high spots which will indicate to you how much lies back of maintaining the quality of sound projection.

"Some person must be trained to judge the volume and quality in the auditorium during the performance. While it is a fact that the projectionists have a monitor horn in the booth, they are not able to judge how the sound is coming through.

"The correct distribution of sound throughout the house is of vital importance and should have your careful attention.

"The proper draping of the horns and units to keep the sound in the direction you wish it to go and no other is another important item.

"The usual defects of auditoriums are three things, namely, echo, dead spots and reverberation. Each has its particular method of elimination.

"Your projection equipment must be given attention. I have seen projectors in such a sorry condition that it was a wonder to me that any film ran through it. When overhauling was suggested, the manager just threw up both hands. Here was a theatre investing thousands of dollars for sound equipment and when the matter of a small expenditure came up, he was horrified. Your present projection mechanism should be thoroughly overhauled or, if necessary, replaced with new equipment. Doing this will give you smoother operation, eliminate stops, damage to film and other defects which can be attributed to neglect.

"I have enumerated just a few of the major problems which will confront you. Each must be taken up and solved so that this new phase of the motion picture industry will enjoy all the benefits which may accrue and to which it is justly entitled. If you do not do your part and inject yourself wholeheartedly into this proposition, you will be the one who will suffer."

Irene Franklin Signed for Talkie Skit

Irene Franklin, well known as a comedienne and singer of the variety and musical comedy stage, will be seen soon in a Vitaphone presentation.

Warners Sign Meighan as Vitaphone Star

THOMAS MEIGHAN has joined the imposing array of stars under the Warner Bros. banner. He has signed a contract to star in Vitaphone talking pictures, according to announcement by Harry M. Warner. Meighan will appear in a talking picture for the first time when his first Warner production is seen and heard on the screen.

Among the stars, in addition to Meighan, who are enrolled with Warners to appear in Vitaphone are: Al Jolson, Dolores Costello, John Barrymore, Fannie Brice, Monte Blue, Pauline Frederick, George Arliss, Sophie Tucker and Texas Guinan.

Gotham Bristolphone Holds First Branch Managers' Convention

GOTHAM BRISTOLPHONE has completed its first sales meeting and sixteen branch managers from all parts of the United States have returned to their home territory thoroughly acquainted with the workings of the Bristolphone device.

The entire assemblage, including the home office staff visited the Bristolphone plant at Waterbury, Conn., and witnessed a performance of "Times Square," the company's first synchronized picture with Bristolphone dialogue and sound effects.

Among those who made the Waterbury trip were the following: L. G. Berman, Chicago; Phil Monsky, Omaha; Claude Townsend, Detroit; Donn Hayes, Los Angeles; William Hurlburt, Detroit; Jess Fishman, Cleveland; B. Rosenthal, St. Louis; Charles Bessenbacher, Kansas City; J. S. Berkowitz, San Francisco; R. G. Romney, St. John; M. Trueman, St. John; Herk Webster, Buffalo; Morris Fitzer, Buffalo; L. Korson, Ben Amsterdam, Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Grauman, Milwaukee; Mr. and Mrs. Strauss, Milwaukee; Al Steffes, Minneapolis; Col. Cole, Dallas; S. Kaplan, Dallas; and Charles Rogers, Budd Rogers, Sam Sax, John Weber and Harold Shumate of the home office.

First National Extends Sound Program to 37 Pictures

FIRST NATIONAL has extended its sound picture program from thirty-one to thirty seven for the 1928-29 President Group, according to announcement made by Ned Depinet, general sales manager. There will be twenty-six dialogue pictures and eleven additional ones with sound synchronization. These will be aside from the silent pictures.

Included in the program of all-dialogue pictures are eight specials and eighteen feature productions. The specials are; Three Colleen Moore's including "Synthetic Sin"; "The Divine Lady," "The Barker," "Stranded in Paradise," "The Squall" and a Billie Dove special still untitled.

The feature productions will include three starring Corinne Griffith, two of which are; "Paid For" and "Saturday's Children"; three starring Richard Barthelmess, including "The Man and the Moment"; three starring Milton Sills, "Captain of the Strong," "The Eagle's Trail," and "The Spotter"; one with Dorothy Mackaill, "The Girl in the Glass Cage"; two co-featuring Miss Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, "Children of the Ritz" and "Two Weeks Off"; two starring Alice White, "Hot Stuff" and "On The Air," and two mystery features, A. Merritt's "Seven Footprints to Satan" and the Broadway stage play, "Sh! The Octopus."

There will be three specials with sound synchronization including the Colleen Moore-George Fitzmaurice special, "Lilac Time" and Mack Sennett's "The Goodbye Kiss."

Eight feature productions will have sound synchronization; Corinne Griffith in "Outcast," Richard Barthelmess in "Scarlet Seas," "Billie Dove in "Adoration" and "Night Watch," Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall in "Waterfront" and Alice White's two pictures, "Show Girl" and "Bad Baby."

The program as announced by Mr. Depinet is an elaborate one and will keep a large staff of sound experts busy throughout the entire season. Production will be rushed with all speed commensurate with the quality of the pictures to be produced.

Vilma Banky Will Speak in Her Next

Vilma Banky will speak in her next picture. That decision was definitely arrived at after long distance telephone conversations between Samuel Goldwyn in Hollywood and Arthur Hornblow, supervisor, and Director Alfred Santell, in New York.

Mr. Hornblow, Director Santell, Casting Director Robert McIntyre, Cameraman George Barnes and Mr. Goldwyn's entire technical staff are now in New York making arrangements for the shooting of the picture, to begin when Miss Banky arrives in about two weeks. The talking sequences are also to be made in New York, with Arthur Richman writing the dialogue.

Mr. Santell and Mr. McIntyre are casting two parts for the story, which was written by Hope Loring and is as yet untitled. Both parts are to be filled in New York with stage players.

Al Abbott, Variety Star Signed by Vitaphone

Al Abbott, comedian of the variety stage, will be seen and heard in a Vitaphone presentation, "Small Town Rambles." Abbott has been on the variety stage for the past twenty-five years and is a headliner on all the major circuits. He has been in motion pictures before, having once made a number of comedies for Essanay with Ben Turpin.

Barthelmess Talks, Sings in "Weary River"

Richard Barthelmess will talk and sing in his next First National starring vehicle, "Weary River," the Courtney Ryley Cooper short story. "Weary River" is the story of a pianist and song writer who is a convict, and who leads the prison orchestra in broadcasting from the studio in the penitentiary town.

Production will start soon after "Scarlet Seas," the star's present vehicle, is completed.

British Talkies Will Be Shown in America

British talking pictures are to be seen on the American market in the near future. British Sound Film Productions have started an ambitious production schedule, and their product will be released here by General Talking Pictures Corporation. The De Forest Phonofilm system of recording is used. The British Phonofilm company has been engaged in short subject production for the past three years.

Two noted English authors, Arnold Bennett and Eden Phillpotts collaborated on the first feature production for British Sound Films. It has been given the title of "Sinews of War" and will be completed within the next six weeks, when a print will immediately be forwarded to America.

Fannie Brice Completes "My Man" Trailer

Fannie Brice has completed the Vitaphone trailer for her starring vehicle, "My Man," and it will be available to exhibitors at cost, according to announcement from Warner Bros. In the trailer the noted comedienne tells about "My Man" in plain English and dialect. She also sings.

Sound Fade-Out Latest Griffith Effect

D. W. GRIFFITH, who gave to silent films the close-up and fade-out, now contributes to sound pictures the sound dissolve and the sound fade-out. These effects will be presented in "The Love Song," in which William Boyd, Jetta Goudal and Lupe Velez appear.

In the sound fade-out the voice rises to its normal pitch and then fades out as the scene dims and dissolves into another. Lupe Velez, it is announced, will sing seven times during the length of the picture.

Orchestra Didn't Draw So House Adopts Sound

THE Capitol Theatre Orchestra, Dallas, which was organized a month ago to test whether or not the Dallas Theatre going public would support a symphony orchestra in a theatre, and also as a protest against "canned" music, made its final appearance last Monday night. Ray Stinnett, managing director of the theatre, stated that the orchestra made little or no difference in the Capitol's receipts, and proved that the receipts depended upon the picture being offered. The musicians comprising the orchestra were practically all former members of some Dallas theatre orchestra and who were unemployed because of recent theatre changes, and the discontinuance of orchestras due to the installation of mechanical sound devices in the Dallas theatres. Mr. Stinnett stated that the Capitol will install both the film and record types of sound devices, and expects to have the installation completed by December 15th. Until that time the organ will be used to score all pictures.

Whiteman Signs Universal Contract

Jazz King and Band Will Interrupt Tour to Make Sound Feature

PAUL WHITEMAN, jazz king, has been signed to a contract by Universal Pictures Corporation. The deal was concluded between Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, and Whiteman only after lengthy negotiations had been carried on. It will bring to the sound screen a new personality and, according to Universal executives, a new form of screen entertainment. The financial terms of the contract were not divulged, but Whiteman is known to be one of the highest priced artists now on the vaudeville stage, and as he will interrupt his present tour for a period of eight weeks to make his first Universal picture, it can easily be figured that his picture contract carries figures of heavy importance.

By virtue of this contract, Whiteman and his jazz orchestra will interrupt their tour of the country on February 1st for eight weeks to make a production at Universal City that will embody a great many of the interesting and dramatic incidents in the life of Paul Whiteman.

Immediately upon the signing of the contract a screen writer for Universal was assigned to accompany Whiteman on his tour of the United States. During this tour he will write the screen story, working in the elements that have made Whiteman so popular, and which will adapt themselves to the new form of screen entertainment to be offered.

The final story for screen presentation will be accompanied by many of the musical compositions that Whiteman has made famous. His entire organization of thirty musicians will be used in the portrayal of these compositions. In addition to this initial picture Mr. Laemmle has a series of options for following pictures that will doubtless be produced as Whiteman's time permits.

The present contract was taken to Atlanta by Nat Goldstone, Universal sound supervisor in the East. Whiteman has been appearing in that city during the past week. It was signed there and returned to New York for Mr. Laemmle's signature. Upon completion of the contract Mr. Laemmle commented as follows:

Mary Pickford Tests Heard in N. Y.

MARY PICKFORD'S voice was reproduced on the screen in New York, at the United Artists projection room, at a private showing to company officials on Monday of this week.

The tests were made by Miss Pickford, under the direction of Sam Taylor, at the Paramount Studios in Hollywood, prior to Miss Pickford's purchase of the screen rights of "Coquette" for her first all talking picture.

The tests were about 400 feet in length, made under the dual film process. The scene was one from "My Best Girl," which Taylor, who will direct Miss Pickford in "Coquette," also directed.

Christies Adding Second Sound Unit to Metropolitan Studios

CHARLES and Al Christie have decided to add a second sound unit to their Metropolitan Studios on the coast. In fact, plans have been prepared and construction is already under way. This first unit is being rushed to completion and will be ready for production within a few days. Christies recently signed with Western Electric covering the use of sound film and also disc recording methods.

In conjunction with Metropolitan, Christies have hastened their plans to build a large stage at Studio City for sound location work, so that both Metropolitan and Studio City will be available for production to those companies, as well as the Christie organization, who are tenants of Metropolitan Studio.

Occupying the Metropolitan Studios at present are Harold Lloyd, Caddo, Douglas Mac Lean, Charles Hutchinson, Carlos Productions, Trem Carr, Burton King, First Division Pictures, Cliff Broughton, Batchelor Productions, Mascot, Varco, Spitzer and Anchor companies.

"To have the privilege of presenting to moving picture audiences and music lovers throughout the world the unique and unrivalled personality of Paul Whiteman is a great privilege. I sincerely feel that it is one of the greatest privileges which I have ever had. To have captured the king of jazz, the very musical spirit of these modern days for Universal pictures, gives me one of the thrills of my life. When we determined to our own satisfaction, through the marvelous reception which has been given to such pictures of ours as 'The Melody of Love' and 'Lonesome,' that talking pictures were bound to be a permanently great factor in moving pictures, we immediately laid our plans to secure the biggest factors which this new invention permitted. The first one we chose was Paul Whiteman.

"It has taken us some time to persuade Mr. Whiteman that he would be even greater on the screen than he is at the present time, but I am happy to say that we have persuaded him and that he now feels, as we do, that this is a great opportunity for him. You may rest assured that Universal will provide in its first Whiteman picture a production which will in every way be a credit to Mr. Whiteman and to Universal."

Issue Special Paper for FBO Sound Films

To aid the exhibitor in advertising and exploiting FBO sound pictures, the advertising department of the company, under the direction of Hyatt Daab, has gotten out two one-sheets on each sound picture. The paper sells sound, concentrating on the musical synchronization, the talking sequences and the sound effects.

In addition to these one sheets, a special folio of publicity stories, advertising copy and special exploitation, all designed to sell sound, are being sent the exhibitor playing FBO sound and talking pictures.

M-G-M Signs Talent for Movietone Shorts

Vincent Lopez, Cliff Edwards and Tom Waring are included in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new list of artists engaged for the production of Movietone shorts. More than thirty names had previously been announced as artists for M-G-M's talkies.

In addition to Lopez, who will do a group of piano numbers in Movietone, Edwards, widely known as "Ukelele Ike," and Waring, popular tenor, the newly-signed players comprise Maxine Lewis, singer; Earl and Bell, guitar specialists; Derickson and Brown, singing team; Zelaya, pianologist; Miss Patricola, singer-violinist; Emil Boreo, formerly of the "Chauvre Souris"; Frank Gaby, ventriloquist; Ersi and Ayer, singing team; and the following comedy acts: Yorke and King, Fuzzy Knight, Kramer and Boyle, Hurst and Vogt, Dooley and Morton.

Zuro Starts Recording "Annapolis"

Josiah Zuro, musical director of Pathe sound pictures, has started the Photophone recording of "Annapolis," at Sound Studios, Inc., in New York, while Morris Manne is synchronizing the sound effects. A brass band and drum and trumpet corps, as well as a symphony orchestra are being used for the musical accompaniment to the feature.

M-G-M Buys "5 O'Clock Girl" for Davies

Marion Davies has had the musical comedy production, "The Five O'Clock Girl" purchased for her by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The company plans it as a production with singing and talking sequences.

Will Talkies Pay in a Very Small Town?

VIRTUALLY all small town exhibitors of Kansas are watching with interest the experiment of Sam Blair, Belleville, Kans., exhibitor, who is installing sound equipment in his Blair theatre. Belleville, it is said, will be the smallest town in the United States offering sound pictures, the town having a population of 2,271. There has been much discussion as to whether or not sound pictures would be a paying investment in small towns.

Pathe News Will Inaugurate Sound Edition on Birthday

PATHE NEWS will inaugurate its sound edition on its eighteenth birthday, the week of November 11, according to announcement from Colvin Brown, executive vice-president of the company. Pathe News anniversary week will start that day and it will then go sound. The first issue will be followed by releases every fortnight.

As the date will also be the tenth anniversary of the signing of the armistice the first issue will contain subject matter attuned to the spirit of the day. Pathe Sound News will be a full and complete reel, it is announced, containing as wide a diversity of subject matter in news and news features as the standard silent reels of the day. A number of new elements of sound and talking picture technique are promised.

Pathe Sound News is recorded by the R C A-Photophone system.

Sol Lesser Back in Industry as Talkie Producer

SOL LESSER, who founded the West Coast Theatres is back in the motion picture industry as a producer of talking pictures under the William H. Bristol patents. Lesser, who hails from Los Angeles, has joined forces with Franklyn Warner, also of Los Angeles and the two have organized the American Picturephone Corporation. The plan is to immediately start construction on sound studios in both New York City and Los Angeles.

The new company intends to go in for production on an extensive scale. It is privately owned and is said to start with a production budget of $5,000,000. Its first talkie, an adaptation of the stage play, "The Great Power," is nearing completion in the studios of the W. H. Bristol Talking Pictures Corporation at Waterbury, Conn.

Two additional productions will be made at the Bristol plant in Waterbury, after which it is expected the company's own studios in New York City and Los Angeles will be ready for occupancy. Not only will these studios be used by American Picturephone Corporation, but they will also be available to producers who wish to make dialogue pictures by the Bristol process.

Mr. Lesser has been identified for many years with the motion picture industry. Not only did he found West Coast Theatres, but he was president of the organization until his retirement three years ago. He also figured prominently in the production end of the industry. He was the producer of the first Jackie Coogan series of films.

Details of the production activities of the company have not yet been revealed, but it is likely that Mr. Lesser will be in charge of production on the coast, while Mr. Warner will serve in a like capacity in the east.

In the launching of the new company Nathan Burkan represented Lesser and Warner as attorney in the negotiations with Mr. Bristol.

"U" Builds Organization for Sound Films

With Universal's first sound-proof stage unit nearly completed, President Carl Laemmle is losing no time in building up an organization of technical experts and artists. Within a few weeks Universal will launch into a program of feature-length and short subject "talkies."

The signing of Benny Rubin, to appear in Movietone short subjects and features is announced by Mr. Laemmle.

Monte Carter, producer of numerous plays in Los Angeles, also was signed by Universal. He will be attached to the Movietone department.

All Chamberlain Houses Wired for Sound Films

All the larger houses of the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, Inc., operating a chain of theatres in the hard coal regions, with home office in Shamokin, Pa., are now equipped with Vitaphone and Movietone apparatus. The first house of the chain to be equipped in this way was that in Shamokin, but the plan was subsequently extended to houses controlled by the company in Mount Carmel, Mahanoy City, Tamaqua and Lansford. Each of these theatres is known as the Victoria. The Lyric, a smaller house controlled by the same interests in Kulpmont, has been provided with Photophone.

"Desert Song" On New Vitaphone Stage

The new Vitaphone stage completed at Warner Bros. coast studio is now housing the production of "The Desert Song," the first Vitaphone operetta, which is being directed by Roy Del Ruth. The stage, a complete Vitaphone unit in itself is 200 x 300 feet in area and is 50 feet high.

In the cast are Carlotta King, John Boles, Louise Fazenda, Myrna Loy, John Miljan, Johnny Arthur, Marie Wells, Edward Martindel, Otto Hoffman, Agnes Franey and a chorus of 100. The picture is adapted from the stage play by Otto Harbach, Otto Hammerstein 2nd and Frank Mandel, with music by Sigmund Romberg.

Clark-McCullough Start Movietone Comedy

Bobby Clark and Paul McCullough, Broadway comedians, have started their fourth Movietone comedy for Fox Film Corporation. It is called "The Diplomats," and is being directed in Hollywood by Norman Taurog. Besides the comedians, who have the title roles, other principal parts are taken by Marguerite Churchill, Theatre Guild school graduate, and Andres De Segurola, Metropolitan Opera baritone now in pictures. Others in the cast are Cissy Fitzgerald and John Sainpolis.

Charles King Signs for "Broadway Melody"

Charles King, who had leading roles in "Hit the Deck" and "Present Arms," has been engaged by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the male lead in "Broadway Melody." He left New York last week for the coast.

Harry Beaumont will direct "Broadway Melody" from an original story by Edmund Goulding dealing with metropolitan night life. Anita Page and Bessie Love are the only other players so far selected for the cast of this film, which will have singing and dialogue sequences.

Arthur Byron Will Make Vitaphone Debut

Arthur Byron will make his Vitaphone debut in "A Family Affair," an original playlet written by himself. He has been a leading man in Broadway productions for many years. Byron has appeared as leading man for Ethel Barrymore, Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, Maude Adams, Margaret Anglin and Grace George. This is his first appearance in motion pictures.

"Marriage by Contract" to Be Road Show

"MARRIAGE BY CONTRACT" first Tiffany-Stahl special is in the process of a synchronization, the sound effects and music being recorded by RCA Photophone. It is a John M. Stahl production with Patsy Ruth Miller in the starring role. Plans are now under way by Tiffany-Stahl to play "Marriage by Contract" as a road show attraction in the leading cities of the United States.

Two other specials of Tiffany-Stahl have already been completed. They are "The Toilers," a Reginald Barker production, and "The Cavalier." Both of the latter scores were written by Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld.

Fan Magazines Arouse Ire of Nagel

Says Interviewer Falsely Quoted Him In Recent Article

HOLLYWOOD, October 22. — Declaring that the industry must take immediate action on publication of unwarranted attacks on stars and players by fan magazines, Conrad Nagel announced this week that he intends to place the entire matter before the Producers' Association, the Wampas and the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for thorough investigation.

Nagel's attitude is the direct result of a recent fan magazine article about himself. Nagel claims a staff writer of the publication wrote the purported interview in a vein which carried all the earmarks of a personal attack on the player. Nagel feels the writer deliberately went out of his way to slam and criticize him throughout the entire story.

Since appearance of the issue, Nagel says he has repeatedly endeavored to reach the writer for an explanation of the article, but without success. Every time he telephones, Nagel explains, he is told the writer is out and not expected for several hours. Nagel further says he has even attempted to see the writer at his home, but on every occasion the writer has been conveniently out.

Nagel particularly resents the fact that the interviewer quoted him on many subjects which were not even discussed. He states he will fight for the elimination of all fan magazine writers who seem to take keen delight in slamming picture individuals without just cause. He claims that the fan publications and writers are directly dependent on the picture business for their income, and should not launch personal attacks on individuals in the business, when such attacks are not justified.

"There is no complaint against published criticism when that criticism is warranted because of lack of discretion or personal conduct. However, when a writer deliberately misrepresents and misinterprets things said to him or to her in an interview and thereby hurts the individual involved, that writer should not be allowed the privilege of interviewing players," said Nagel, "and it is up to the players to defend themselves against fan writers who persist in taking advantage by writing articles that border on libel."

Several of Nagel's friends in sympathy with his attitude on account of their own experiences with fan writers, recall that there have been many cases of similar personal attacks on individuals by fan magazine writers over a period of several years. Few of those used as targets have wanted to risk the enmity of the fan writers as a group by voicing their complaints to the Producers' Association and the Wampas.

Nagel, however, promises to go through with his fight, and will enlist the support of many of the most prominent stars in pictures. As a group, these players are said to be in a position to force fan magazines to reform insofar as the type of subject matter printed is concerned. The stars could refuse interviews with any fan writers, and decline to pose for the numerous photos which the fan magazines find necessary to print every month.

Lloyd Resumes Work

Harold Lloyd has again begun production activities following an injury to his left arm which laid him up for two weeks. His next picture will have a Chinese setting and in Westwood Hills, where the comedian lives, an eight acre replica of San Francisco's Chinese quarter has been erected. Lloyd will portray the son of a noted city police official. Sound and dialogue will be included but on account of Lloyd's followers outside the English-speaking race, he will depend mainly upon power of story, gags and his characterizations.

Sequel to "Phantom"

Universal will make a sequel to "The Phantom of the Opera" for release next year under the title of "The Return of

Dentists Cashing in on Talkie Craze

THE talking picture hysteria has reacted in various ways on all walks of life in Hollywood. One small group of dentists are said to be cleaning up financially with the claim that by fixing the teeth of actors, they can improve their voices and enunciation. They claim, by grinding certain molars down, spacing bicuspsids certain ways, and even extracting natural teeth and substituting artificial ones, actors can be made to speak more efficiently. They are being paid as high as $750 and $1000 for work which would ordinarily bring from $3 to $25.

the Phantom." Conrad Veidt will play the "Phantom" which was portrayed originally by Lon Chaney. Paul Leni will direct the sequel to the version Rupert Julian made.

Hoffman, "The Climax" and "U"

Renaud Hoffman has completed arrangements with Universal whereby he will make "The Climax" for release by that firm. Hoffman purchased the screen rights to the E. J. Locke play some time ago and has been negotiating with several companies since. Jean Hersholt will play the leading role.

After "The Five O'Clock Girl"

Marion Davies will follow "The Five O'Clock Girl" with "Mary of Vassar" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. "The Five O'Clock Girl" will be an adaptation of the musical comedy by that name and "Mary of Vassar" is an original by Sarah Y. Mason.

Movietone Dedication

Formal dedication of the new Fox Movietone Studios in Fox Hills will take place Sunday afternoon, October 28. The new plant has been over a year in construction and represents an investment of ten million dollars.

Darling and "Listen Baby"

W. Scott Darling has been assigned by Paul Bern to do the adaptation for "Listen Baby," an original by Elsie Janis and Gene Markey. Darling also will be responsible for the dialogue in the synchronized version.

New Phrases Coined in Hollywood

THE terms "variable area" and "variable density" have been appropriated by Hollywood production forces as personal characterizations for fellow-workers.

The phrase "variable area" not only refers now to the sound recording margin on negative and positive films, but is used for brevity in referring to players whose corporeal areas and weight are getting close to the danger line or maximum specified in their contracts.

The phrase "variable density" is used to characterize mental capacity and is becoming extremely popular at story conferences.

Hollywood Vaudeville Market on Decline

Producers Conclude Screen Players Are Far More Adaptable

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)
HOLLYWOOD, October 22.—While New York representatives of producer-distributor organizations are rushing about madly to engage vaudeville and musical comedy artists for sound shorts, there has been a sudden falling off in enthusiasm for vaudevillians and stage artists in Hollywood. Producers have come to the conclusion that it is much better to purchase the material from the other fields and do their own casting in Hollywood.

After using a large number of artists from vaudeville, musical comedy and legitimate fields, they have found that what counts in most instances is not so much the individual as the actual material. Experiments during recent weeks in Hollywood have shown that screen actors can be directed at smaller expense to deliver lines or business just as effectively as the imported vaudevillians. Another conclusion reached by producers is that even a fairly well established screen actor in a talking short means more to a motion picture theatre box-office than a large per cent of vaudeville stars.

There are some few exceptions to this. Actors in a class with Al Jolson, Fanny Brice, Clark and McCullough, and the like, cannot very well be displaced by screen personalities. In such instances it is simply because the individuality of the star is greater and means more than any material he may use. These, however, are in a small minority, and do not warrant the promiscuous signing of acts as the producers have been doing.

One result of this will be in the making of one-act playlets by the Christie Studios for Paramount release. Instead of engaging vaudeville or legitimate actors, they intend to stick close to screen personalities. They feel the material contains the major portion of merit and the screen experience of those who have been in pictures, plus their box-office value, overbalances what qualifications that actors from other fields may possess.

Columbia Signs Hersholt for Jazz Special

For the foremost role in "The Younger Generation," which Columbia plans as a special similar in size and scope to "Submarine," Joe Brandt has engaged Jean Hersholt, through the courtesy of Universal to whom the Danish actor is under contract. "The Younger Generation," which is to be a picturization of Fannie Hurst's play, "It Is to Laugh," will be directed by Frank Capra.

Don Alvarado Will Play Columbia's "Apache"

Don Alvarado, young leading man who played recently in "The Scarlet Lady" and "Driftwood" for Columbia, will again appear in a vehicle for that company, this time in the title role of "The Apache," which Phil Rosen is directing from the story by Harriet Hinsdale and Ramon Romeo.

Dotty Jottings

THERE was an old story about two cloak-and-suiters meeting on the street . . . one saying . . . "Did you hear about Cohen in Chicago? He made $400,000 in furs within six months!" . . . and the other replied . . . "Yeh, I heard, but you're a little bit wrong in your facts. It was not Chicago; it was Cleveland. It wasn't furs; it was cloaks and suits, and it wasn't $400,000; it was $4,000, and he didn't make it; he lost it, and, besides, it wasn't Cohen . . . it was Lercy!"

WHICH leads simply to the recently published story in a trade paper that Cecil B. Walsh Recovering

Raoul Walsh has recovered sufficiently from the recent accident which almost resulted in the loss of one eye, to resume direction of "A Caballero's Way." He will not, however, be able to take up the role he was playing in the picture and to which Warner Baxter has been assigned. Irving Cummings was to finish the picture when it was feared that Walsh would lose one eye.

Darmour to Make Survey

After twenty consecutive months of shooting, the Darmour Productions will discontinue making shorts until Dec. 31. During that period Darmour made seventy-three shorts, which were released through FBO. Larry Darmour left for New York last week to visit exchanges in key cities en route. On his return at the end of December, he will resume production. He is considering the advisability of synchronizing his product, the decision depending on his survey via the exchanges.

Mr. and Mrs. La Rocque

Rod La Rocque, whose contract expired with Pathe-DeMille recently, may play opposite his wife, Vilma Banky, in a feature for Samuel Goldwyn shortly. This report persists despite the fact that La Rocque told friends last week that he intended to retire from the screen immediately. He did add, however, that should an offer prove particularly attractive, he would take an engagement now and then.

Sam Has Been Busy

Sam Mintz, Paramount writer, has six pictures to his credit with that studio since January 1. Two of these are originals and four collaborations. The two are "Warming Up" and "Number Please" and the quartette "Moran of the Marines," "Avalanche," "Fools for Luck" and "Three Week-Ends."

Keeping Down the Overhead

One result of the Warner Brothers-First National deal, affecting production, will be inaugurated in the purchasing and rental departments of both studios. While both departments are to be maintained as individual units, they will give preference to each other on all things. Instead of going to other sources, as has been the past custom, each studio will rent props, costumes or any other necessary accoutrements from each other. There is also a possibility of a mutual purchasing agreement being worked out to save both plants money in the buying of new equipment of any sort.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

CLEARING HOUSE FOR

BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

Interstate's Organization

Made a trip recently into Boston and thought it a good time to renew acquaintance with Mr. Stoneham and Mr. Anson of the Interstate Theatre Corp., whose offices are located in that city. I first met them when they were dickering for the Levinson & Eldridge houses in Connecticut, and at that time I hoped to see much more of them.

They now operate ten or twelve houses, and all fine theatres located in good live towns, but they do it in a neat and efficient manner without any more staff than is necessary to conduct their business properly. I have an idea that Ed. Anson makes a corking boss and one that the managers on their circuit are always glad to see. Possessed of a great personality, backed with a real sense of humor, he fits into any place like a glove. Have visited several of the Interstate houses; I am qualified to say that they reflect the organization behind them.

They recently took over several more houses near Boston and are rapidly, but quietly, expanding and I believe that before very long they will be recognized as a real factor in New England's theatre history.

Now that the golf bug has taken a husky bite of my anatomy, I hope to be able to record, in the very near future, that I've finally broken that tough hundred at the expense of Ed. Anson. Being near Boston for the time being should afford me many opportunities to try it anyway. But if I do succeed, no hard feeling Ed. O. K.?

"Oh, Kay" With R. L. Nellis at the Helm

R. L. Nellis, Publicity Manager for the Strand and Arc Theatres in Crawfordsville, Ind., comes forward with two stunts which, as he describes, clicked 100 per cent. The first was a full page newspaper tieup which only the lack of space prevents us from reproducing in its original form as the paper was published. The attraction was Colleen Moore in "Oh, Kay" and Mr. Nellis tied up with 10 different merchants in town, each one taking an ad with the expression "Oh, Kay" worked into their copy. The theatre ad appeared in the centre of the entire page and with the heading in bold faced type spread clear across the entire page: "THESE ADVERTISERS ARE 'OH, KAY.'"

Tie-ups such as this are worth their weight in gold and clearly demonstrates, once again, that live-wire managers can

"Pulse of the Nation"

A SHORT time ago the MANAGER'S ROUND TABLE CLUB selected certain members, located in various parts of the country, for the purpose of getting their views about Sound pictures. The purpose of this survey was to present, first hand, the thought that is running through the minds of exhibitors spotted in different sections. It is our purpose to print their letters without any omissions or changes so that all interested may read and perhaps they can be guided by the sober expressions of these letters.

utilize their local newspapers in many ways. Only a little thought and then the ability to go out and put it over are required. In this case the merchants, according to Nellis, were more than willing to co-operate and he could have sold twice the space. How can any picture help but click with such advertising. And we are tickled to tell you this one because it again demonstrates the saying which we created months back that a good idea can be fitted to any picture just as any picture can be fitted to the idea. It's all in the game, boys, and if you are not cashing in on these suggestions and descriptions of tried and proven exploitation stunts then it's your own fault. We keep harping and harping on the CLUB slogan, "Use The News" and these ideas are reproduced here for your benefit. Hundreds of CLUB members insist they are business producing ideas and these hundreds of exhibitors cannot all be wrong.

Mr. Nellis' second stunt was the use of a three by six inch tag on "The Mating Call." This tag was widely used by tying them to auto door handles, door-knobs, street cars and in fact every place that opportunity afford the distributors the chance of so tying them. This is a simple, inexpensive advertising stunt that if not used too often will surely attract attention to some particular picture which you may want to plug. One thing is certain, and that is the fact that everyone who finds these tags will surely read them before they take them off or untie them. If you were reasonably sure that every piece of advertising you print received such attention you would, no doubt, be well satisfied.

Mr. Nellis promises us something on "Just Married" backed by a real stage wedding and knowing his ability to put over a stunt means we all have something to look forward to in the near future.

Some More About Theatre Programs

Heading what we have had to say in the past, about theatre programs, prompted W. A. Levey to send me a copy of his. Mr. Levey is the resident manager of the Beacon Theatre in Port Washington, L. I., one of the Schwartz Circuit theatres on Long Island.

We find his program printed in a neat and original two color front page and containing an interesting editorial about the first anniversary of the Beacon Theatre. I had so much to do with the preliminaries of this theatre's construction that I can almost feel at home reading about it. But just the same all this does prove that Mr. Levey does believe in listening to what others are doing and turning every trick to the benefit of the theatre he runs.

The inside spread of the Beacon program announces the First Anniversary attractions and they present a great array of fine pictures for the movie fans in that section of Long Island. Members wanting a suggestion on something different in the line of theatre programs for a special week or anniversary week, can well afford the two cent stamp that a letter will cost to write Mr. Levey for a copy of the one he sent me. Its simplicity is refreshing and the lack of crowded copy insures positive results if you are one who wants to be sure your patrons read your programs.

What Whyte Thinks of Sound Pictures

My dear Mr. Lewis: This is the first opportunity I have had to answer your letter of the 5th inst. regarding my views on "Sound Pictures." I have been as busy as a bee working out stunts for "Our Dancing Daughters," "Hallowe'en Night and other things. But, anyway, here is what I think of "Sound Pictures." I have seen several pictures of late, some of which were shown with synchronized score and effects and others including dialogue and songs. Most of these have been Vitaphone releases, others Movietone. At present, I think most of Vitaphone but that is only a personal opinion and perhaps formed because I have not heard enough of Movietone.

Regarding the box-office, I really think that unless an exhibitor cannot really afford to equip himself for "talkies" he will be out of luck. What a difference sound makes! I have seen "Dancing Daughters" with and without sound and it breaks my heart to know that I have got to sell it to my patrons without sound. I first saw this

December Shutdown

With only four pictures to be made for the completion of their entire year's product, the Warner Brothers will be able to close down their studio early during the coming December. The four, which round out the announced program for 1928-29, are "She Knew Men" starring Edward Everett Horton directed by Archie Mayo; "Alimony Annie" directed by Michael Curtiz, starring Dolores Costello; "No Defense" co-starring Monte Blue and May McAvoy, directed by Howard Bretherton, and one other not titled.

The studio will be "dark" only as far as the making of features is concerned. Production will continue on Vitaphone shorts during the period, which will be from six to eight weeks. Meanwhile the Warners are negotiating with other studios to keep their contract players busy during the shut-down period.

"U's" New Serial

Universal has a new serial in production, "The Diamond Master," from a story by Jacques Futrelle. Louise Lorraine has the leading feminine role and Hayden Stevenson is also featured. George Plympton and Karl Krusada adapted the story. William Lord Wright is supervising and Jack Nelson is directing.

Gibson Signs Ruth Elder

Ruth Elder, aviatrix, has been signed by Hoot Gibson to play feminine lead in his next Universal Jewel production, a combination western and aviation film.

Three Finished, Three in Work

FBO has finished a talking prologue, "The Joyride," for "Taxi 13" under the direction of Bert Glennon who, with Robert Kane, is busy casting for "Stepping High," the latter FBO's first all-talkie. This work has been in the New York plant. Out on the coast George Seitz and his "Blockade" company, with Anna Q. Nilsson, are on location; George Melford is in the second week of "Love in the Desert," with Olive Borden and Noah Beery; Tom Mix has started with Director Robert DeLaey on "The Drifter"; Ralph Ince has completed editing "Hardboiled," starring Sally O'Neil, and production has been completed on "The Jazz Age," directed by Lynn Shores and featuring Marceline Day and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Title Writers and Vaudeville

Two screen title writers are sponsors of the new vaudeville act which Fanny Brice will present at the Palace, New York during the week of Nov. 4. They are Joseph Jackson, under contract to Warners, who also did the dialogue for her picture "My Man," and William Brokaw Jutte. The act is a burlesque on talking pictures called "Spoils of Lust."

Hammons in Hollywood

Earl Hammons, president of Educational Studios is due in Hollywood this week. He will outline plans for the new season with the local studio officials and also confer regarding the construction of sound stages on the Educational lot.

Meeting Postponed

The annual meeting of Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences scheduled for October 29th has been postponed to November 3rd on account of Douglas Fairbanks' sudden trip East. Fairbanks is president of the association.

Shifts Directors

Ray Enright replaces Archie Mayo for direction of "Kid Gloves," a Warner Bros. production. Mayo will be held in readiness for another assignment.

particular picture without sound and I enjoyed it very much. Later I saw the picture over again with the synchronized score and effects at another theatre and I came out of that house all pepped up, humming the theme numbers and wanting to tell everyone I met what a wonderful show it was. As for Jolson in "The Singing Fool," I could write you pages on how that marvelous picture hit me and it will hit everyone in the country who sees it the same way. It takes a lot to move some of us boys but I think if I were equipped I would stand out on my marquee and shout it to the world. That's what I think of "Sound Pictures."

Very soon I am to play "Uncle Tom," "Street Angel" and "Dancing Daughters" and these have played the town in equipped houses and I am more than anxious to see what will happen when I play them. Of course, we are not laying down on these pictures because we cannot sell them as did the first run houses. On the contrary we are plugging them to the sky. However, this is the first year there has been a deluge of "sound pictures" and it will be interesting to note the effect on second run houses that are not wired.

I will write you later, telling you how these particular pictures went over and will also tell you of a few stunts that are now being worked out.

Very truly yours,
Signed, W. H. Whyte,
Mgr. Rialto Theatre,
Hartford, Conn.

Lew Preston on Sound Pictures

Mr. Preston, manager of the Small & Strausberg Circuit's Republic Theatre in Brooklyn, answers our request for his opinion on Sound pictures as follows:

Dear Mr. Lewis:

Your letter dated the sixth received, and I want to thank the Managers Round Table Club and yourself for giving me a chance to say a line in regards to Sound.

Sound Pictures are here to stay and it will be necessary for every house, sooner or later, to install it.

The days for sitting in your office waiting for business is past. Look the truth in the face. SOUND is here. The parade is passing your door, don't look at it and wonder what it is all about. But get in line and join them, remember the slogan—"Follow the Crowd."

Very truly,
(Signed)—Lew Preston

The reason we have singled out Mr. Preston's letter from amongst the others received on the subject of sound, is that you can read between the lines and find the answer to more than just Sound in his letter. What he says about 'sitting in your office' can just as well apply to everyday showmanship as to Sound. And what he says about "the parade," is good practical advice. Just take his letter as plain everyday good sense and keep it in mind when practising the code of good business.

Key City Reports

New York City

THE same pair of pictures that topped the headlines the previous week must again be credited with the honors for the present writing. Not since the Capitol's opening has that house had such a demand for seats as during the past two week's booking of M-G-M's "Dancing Daughters." Crowds taxed the usual Capitol system of a ticket chopper at the second door, and the shunting of orchestra and balcony patrons was taken care of at the main entrance, where evening shows saw solid lines, patiently waiting for their chance to gain admission. This picture appeared to draw all types with perhaps the flapper element slightly more in evidence. The other big draw in this town was just across Broadway at the Winter Garden, where Al Jolson in Warner Bros.' "Singing Fool" is duplicating the tremendous success this picture is having in all key cities—smashing records for capacity at top prices, and even running "way ahead of" "The Jazz Singer." Indian Summer weather contributed its part to motion picture theatres for the week.

Without doubt, both the Paramount and Roxy felt the pull at the Capitol the past two weeks. Last week these two houses turned in just regular weeks, and it was that way the previous week. Paramount had "Moran of the Marines" (Par.) for just average returns, and "Air Circus" and Movietone at the Roxy just about held even with "Mother Machree." These last two are rated as specials, but hardly make the grade. They both, however, gave the Roxy a comfortable week's returns.

The Rivoli with "Wedding March" is still way out in front as compared with its sister house, the Rialto's offering of "Battle of the Sexes." The von Stroheim picture has taken hold in a strong way, in spite of some derogatory remarks from picture-wise folk. No kick at all here. But the Griffith offering is not getting any too good a break. Newspapers have dwelled somewhat on the fact that it was made from a ten-year-old picture, and this has undoubtedly hurt. The Strand with "Women They Talk About" (W. B. Vita.) hardly kept up the pace recently set by this house—just a fair week. The Colony is through with "Lonesome" (U.) and a three weeks' run may be summed up as pretty good for this house, (Ben Bernie helping). "Melody of Love" (U.) another sound offering is in. The Cameo is doing regular Cameo business with an Amikino, "Three Comrades."

Paramount's veteran "Wings" at the Criterion, after a stay of one year and three months on Broadway, will at last call it quits but only to move over to the Rialto next Saturday. Undoubtedly "Wings" could continue to make substantial profit for Publix for the rest of the year, but Paramount's first all-talking picture, "Interference" is living up to its title and the successful aviation film must go to let the talkie in. Last Sunday, First National's "Lilac Time" reached its one hundred and seventy-fifth performance, and has been one of the leading attractions all this time. An extension of lease on the Central is announced by First National to take care of the continued showings of this picture.

M-G-M's "White Shadows" continues to hold its satisfactory pace at the Astor, and Fox' "Four Devils" at the Gaiety is running a similar gait. Warner's "The Terror," at Warners, after a good run has made way for "Home Towners," the latter opening Tuesday of the current week, and advanced reports indicate that this all-dialogue Warner picture is going to make good. Columbia's "Submarine," at the Embassy, is dropping a bit, but will probably finish out this month, making it, in all, a comfortable run of nearly three months.

Chicago

ANOTHER week of satisfactory business was experienced by loop theatres, "The Singing Fool" at McVickers again being the leader as a box office attraction.

"While The City Sleeps" was the screen attraction at the Chicago, with "Babes on Broadway," as the stage presentation and Spitalny's orchestral production, "Lannhauser," the musical leader, the program drawing well, business being above the average.

Business at the Oriental was somewhat improved over the previous week with "Beggars of Life" on the screen and Paul Ash and his gang in "Broadway Blues" on the stage. "The Man Who Laughs" continued its run at the Roosevelt where it is doing well.

"The Battle of Sexes" gave way on Friday to "The Woman Disputed" at United Artists Theatre, the latter getting off to a good start on its run after a rather quiet week.

"Our Dancing Daughters" went over big at the Paradise where Mark Fisher and his band was the stage attraction. The same feature also made a good record at the Uptown and the Tivoli, the former featuring Verne Buck and the latter Bennie Kreuger.

The Capitol offered "The River Pirate" as its screen attraction with De! Lampe heading the stage show. The Avalon program included "Craig's Wife" as the feature picture and on the stage, Roy Dietrick and a big new review, both houses having a satisfactory week.

The first all talking picture "Melody of Love" was featured at both the Granada and Marbro. The stage shows at both houses continued to be big and the headlines were name acts, at the Granada, Patricola appeared in person and Raymond Hitchcock was at the Marbro.

Kansas City

WITH a line of patrons more than one-half block long standing in front of the Newman at virtually all hours, that theatre with Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" did the greatest business it has done since the earlier days of its existence. Three full pages of newspaper advertising were used in as many days in an exploitation campaign which was confined almost exclusively to the newspapers. The admission price was boosted to 60 cents for adults, the usual charge being 50 cents.

At the Pantages "The Street of Illusion" also played to good crowds, but not very much more than normal, as that house consistently enjoys a large attendance, it being centrally located. "Mother Knows Best" at the Globe did a fair business, as did "The Water Hole" with Jack Holt at the Uptown. "The Cameraman," starring Buster Keaton, played to crowds a bit larger than usual at Loew's Midland, which also featured personal appearances of members of "Our Gang" comedies. "The Good Bye Kiss" at the Mainstreet drew well all week.

Minneapolis

BUSINESS was exceptionally good at Minneapolis theatres last week, and as a result two houses smashed records. The State, for example, did such a tremendous second week's business with Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" that it was necessary to hold this film over for still a third week, something that has never been done in the State's eight years of existence. A few pictures have stayed at the State for a fortnight, but never for three weeks.

At the Strand "Wings" continued to shatter all precedent by doing a whale of a business on its fifth week and holding over for a sixth. No picture has ever stayed at the Strand for more than four weeks previously. Four times now Finkelstein & Ruben has announced that this film was entering its final week, and four times it has been necessary to extend its engagement. Its showing is all the more remarkable because "Wings" was shown at the Metropolitan last winter as a road show for two weeks.

Lon Chaney in "While the City Sleeps" was the attraction at the Hennepin-Orpheum, and this picture helped the theatre show a very nice business for the week.

At the Minnesota Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman in "Two Lovers proved a good box-office attraction.

"Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" was the film at the Pantages. It is doubtful if this picture helped much to pull in the patrons, but it might have had some influence.

The Grand, a second-run loop house, showed "Glorious Betsy" with good results, and Jack Holt in "The Water Hole" drew the western fans in the Lyric.

Even the neighborhood houses reflected the general trend toward better business, with the Granada, Loring, Lagoon, Rialto, American and Lyndale showing such pictures as "Lilac Time," "The Patriot," "Four Walls," "Doomsday," and "The College Widow."

Last week was Homecoming Week at the University of Minnesota, and this always brings a large number of visitors into town. Saturday night, following the Minnesota-Chicago football game, all the theatres did a landoffice business.

Birmingham, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM theatre business the past week was off. The general report was, "only fair."

The Ritz, with William Fox' "Air Circus," together with a Keith vaudeville bill, had fair business.

The Alabama, with the second week of no stage shows, turned a break-even proposition on "The Fleet's In." Critics liked the picture, but the public did not pay to see it in sufficiently large numbers.

The Empire, with "Show People," with Marion Davies and William Haines, did not make money.

The Strand, with repeats on two Warner Bros. Vitaphone pictures, "Glorious Betsy" featuring Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel, and "Lights of New York" featuring Helene Costello, got by fairly well.

The Trianon, with Colleen Moore, in "Oh Kay," had reasonably good business.

Theatre men were at a loss to understand the reason for a poor week, as weather conditions were ideal and there was not unusual opposition to show business, save some political rallies.

Dallas

DALLAS first run theatres rounded out another week of good business, despite the strong competition offered by the State Fair of Texas. The unusual pleasant weather and the large number of visitors in Dallas have kept receipts up. More than capacity business was reported only by one theatre, and this was due to the extraordinarily good picture offered.

At the Palace "The Singing Fool," featuring Al Jolson, kept the lobby jammed and the sidewalk in front of the theatre entirely blocked with patrons at every performance. This attraction has been the subject of more discussion than any picture that has been shown in Dallas for a long time, and brought tears from practically every one who saw it. This picture was billed for only one week, which included two midnight shows, and the last night checked off full houses. This feature could easily have made money for another week at the Palace, as the word of mouth publicity had far outclassed all the heavy billing. The gross for the seven-day run was exceptional.

"The Terror," an all-talking film with May McAvoy and Louise Fazenda, was responsible for good receipts at the Melba. This was the second all-talkie shown by this theatre, and was well liked.

At the Majestic "Plastered in Paris" with Sammy Cohen and Jack Pennick was successful in securing a good attendance and receipts for the week were good. A good Interstate Vaudeville bill, featuring Roscoe Ails, proved to be a business getter.

"The Michigan Kid" with Conrad Nagel and Renee Adoree registered fair business at the Capitol the past seven days. The title and the unusually strong competition kept business down.

At the Old Mill "Take Me Home" with Bebe Daniels and Neil Hamilton accounted for only fair business.

At the Ritz "The Lights of New York" with Helene Costello enjoyed good business for the week. This picture had already been shown at the Melba Theatre and was a second run in Dallas, and also was the first picture to be offered to the public by The Ritz since opening under its new policy and name. This theatre will feature second run synchronized pictures altogether at reduced prices, and is said to be the first theatre of this kind in the United States.

At the Arcadia "The Crowd" with Eleanor Boardman and James Murray, "Out of the Ruins" with Richard Barthelmess and Marion Nixon and "The First Kiss" with Fay Wray and Gary Cooper turned in a good gross for the week.

Cleveland

FOR no good reason at all, the average first run business at the local downtown houses fell off. A couple of big pictures did big business, but totalling it all up, the high standard that has prevailed here for the past several weeks was not maintained. Weather was one of the determining factors. It was a rainy week. Legitimate theatres had interesting things to offer. Lecture courses have started. The Cleveland Symphony began its season's activities. While none of these things in themselves were determining factors in a decrease in movie business, as a whole, they added to the general condition.

"Mother Knows Best," the opening sound pictures at Keith's Hippodrome, played to capacity-plus houses all week.

"Wings" played to satisfactory business during its second week at the Stillman, where it was shown for the first time at popular prices. The picture opened to tremendous business the first week. After that business settled down to consistently good crowds.

"The Battle of the Sexes," with a cast of all star players each of whom does remarkable work, played to big houses all week at the Allen.

"Beggars of Life" did just fairly well at the State theatre.

"Craig's Wife," the week's attraction at Keith's Palace, did only fair business. A character drama of a highly intelligent sort, it lacked audience appeal for the masses.

"Waterfront" and "Dry Martini" divided the week's honors at Keith's East 105th St. about equally. "Waterfront," a bright, snappy vehicle, clicked with the younger generation as well as others not so fortunate. "Dry Martini" was also well liked and well patronized.

"The Fleet's In," made a fine showing the first half of the week at the Park where it played its first-run neighborhood engagement, and "Sawdust Paradise" did fairly well the last half of the week.

Neighborhood houses, and houses out in the territory report that business is beginning to pick up. While most of the houses are following a passive policy, watching sound movies, and waiting for sound installation they are encouraged over the prospects of normal business.

Atlanta

WITH Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" as the box-office attraction extraordinary, the Howard Theatre rolled up the biggest box-office gross in its entire history, and far out-distanced all other theatres in gross and net business. "The Singing Fool" was the talk of the town drawing more enthusiastic word-of-mouth advertising than any picture ever inspired in Atlanta. It opened with a midnight performance Sunday night and throughout the week the Howard advanced its opening hour to permit an extra show to take care of the crowds. So great was the demand for holding the picture over that a last minute decision resulted in scheduling it for the Rialto beginning Monday, October 22, since the Howard, being committed to a weekly-change policy, could not retain the picture a second week.

At Loew's Capitol "Excess Baggage" proved itself a good box-office attraction.

Richard Dix in "Moran of the Marines" was an excellent draw at Keith's Georgia, where an unusually pleasing vaudeville bill rounded out a strong program.

The Metropolitan gathered momentum as the week advanced with "A Grain of Dust" and the final check-up showed the best business in several weeks.

"Win That Girl" brought the Rialto Theatre out in fairly good shape, though it obviously did not appeal to all ages and elements.

The Tudor registered only fair business with two action pictures: "With Sitting Bull at the Spirit Lake Massacre" the first half, and "The Air Patrol" the last half.

Des Moines

"THE Singing Fool" at the Des Moines Theatre broke all and every Iowa theatre record for attendance last week. Up to Thursday 70,000 people had seen the show. The picture is being held over for another half week, which has not been done at the Des Moines Theatre for about a year. Practically every show the S.R.O. limit was reached.

The Capitol Theatre, next door, took the first licking that they have had since the inauguration of the stage show there. No fault was found with the show which was "The Night Watch," and stage offering "Cameos," but it was not strong enough to meet with the De Moines competition.

At the Strand Theatre with Warner Brothers "Reno Courtship" for the first half and "Steamboat Bill, Jr." with Buster Keaton, for the last half, the week was on the average good.

At Fort Dodge, Iowa, the theatres have been alternating on their big weeks with "Street Angel" at the Plaza, "The Singing Fool" at the Rialto and "King of Kings" and "Lilac Time" at the Strand.

San Francisco

WEATHER conditions and everything else being favorable, the first run and residential houses, generally speaking, reported good business for the week.

The picture that seemed to be the most popular was "Two Lovers," shown at the St. Francis Theatre with Colman and Banky as the stars. This was its second week and drew remarkable crowds.

Loew's Warfield, a much larger theatre than the St. Francis, of course, drew much greater crowds, but those seeing "The First Kiss" at the Warfield and "Two Lovers" at the St. Francis could not keep from praising the latter picture, while "The First Kiss" was considered too much of a kissing affair. However, this theatre reported very good business due to Harry Langdon's appearing in person.

The Granada Theatre was well filled all week with Barthelmess in "Out of the Ruins."

"White Shadows in the South Seas," shown at the California Theatre, did not do good business.

"The Pantages Theatre reported good business with its talking picture, "Melody of Love," together with vaudeville acts.

The El Capitan, the city's largest theatre, did good business in the evenings with the Bushman picture, "Say It With Sables." The afternoons were not so good.

"You Can't Be the Law" and "Scarlet Love," together with vaudeville acts, attracted many to the Union Square Theatre, although business would have been better had not a new building been started next to this theatre.

Jack Holt in "The Vanishing Pioneer" attracted many to the Alexandria and the Coliseum was crowded as long as Harry Langdon's picture, "The Chaser," and Marian Nixon in "Jazz Mad" were shown.

Seattle

BUSINESS generally was good in the first run houses last week, with the suburban and neighborhood theatres also showing a small increase in receipts with the coming of fall weather. The Fifth Avenue Theatre was probably high house for the week, with "While the City Sleeps" on the screen. This Chaney picture was well received by audiences that kept the 2500 seats well filled at all times. Business very good.

At the Seattle Theatre, "Take Me Home" proved a weak film that didn't register very well, but Fanchon-Marco's "Dream Idea" on the stage scored a distinct hit and put the bill across for a week of pleasing business.

The Music Box Theatre continued to play to capacity houses day and night with the second week of "Singing Fool." This 900-seater had lines out every afternoon and evening, and present business indicates the longest run a film has ever had in this city.

Hamrick's Blue Mouse, also, packed the customers in with "Two Lovers" on the screen. Both of these houses use Vitaphone shorts as well, and are doing a tremendous business.

"Honeymoon Hate" at the Coliseum Theatre pleased the fans at this 25c house, but failed to draw a particularly strong box office gross. The same may be said for "Fools for Luck" at the Columbia, which is once again in the slump that apparently cannot be overcome. Business was poor here.

"A Woman Against the World" was the screen feature at the Embassy, and business was comparatively good.

The Orpheum used "Power" as the screen attraction and got by quite well. The film at Pantages, "Court-martial," was also well liked by audiences and critics.

Cincinnati

BUSINESS for the week in Cincinnati, although quite satisfactory when considered as a whole, was somewhat spotty, without any definite reason for the fluctuation from day to day.

The Albee with William Boyd in "The Cop" had heavy patronage, which was attracted by both the picture and the vaudeville bill which contained acts above the average.

Keith's, showing "The Butter and Egg Man," did a nice business, which, however, would have reached a considerably higher mark were it not for the fact that the same attraction was presented simultaneously by a local stock company, which pulled the movie attendance down.

The Capitol had an excellent week with "The Wedding March," with sound synchronization, and the picture will remain for an additional run of seven days.

"Two Lovers," held over for a second week at the Lyric, had a nice following for the extended engagement, which, however, did not measure up to the initial week.

The Strand, presenting "Plastered in Paris," played to fair returns, which is also true of the Family, playing "Rinty of the Desert," for first half, with "The Kick Off" for the balance of the week.

Sound pictures have increased attendance at the Orpheum, a neighborhood house, while the Forest, also suburban, is gaining rapidly with the presentation of several first run pictures.

Other neighborhood and suburban houses reported business only fair.

Milwaukee

ARAINY week resulted in rather poor business in the down town theatres as compared with that of previous weeks. The neighborhood theatres fared somewhat better but in the down town houses a marked decrease in patronage was noticeable.

"The Melody of Love" played for one week at the Alhambra to very good houses.

"Four Sons" finished a four weeks stay at the Strand where business kept up an even gait for the run of the picture.

"The Singing Fool" remains at the Garden, where it still draws unprecedented crowds.

"Our Dancing Daughters played a second week to fair houses at the Majestic.

"Lilac Time," which had a week's run at the Wisconsin two weeks ago, was returned to the Merrill this week where it did moderately well.

"Plastered in Paris" won fair patronage at the Wisconsin.

The Orpheum had very good patronage throughout the week, with "The Whip." The Riverside featured "Gang War." Business was fair.

Neighborhood theatres had a fairly good week despite the poor weather. "Glorious Betsy" had a successful run at the Garfield, Modjeska and Uptown theatres. The Colonial fared well with "The Night Watch."

"State Street Sadie" was well received at the Oriental and Tower.

"Love Over Night" brought good patronage to the Venetian.

Pittsburg

LOEWS Penn again had a big week's business with Lon Chaney in "While the City Sleeps." This is a crook drama filled with action, and seems to be the type of entertainment the fans want at this time.

The Stanley Theatre reported a good week with "The Fleet's In." Clara Bow scores in this one and does not disappoint her fans.

"The River Pirate" proved to be a photoplay with a punch, and drew good business at the Aldine for the week.

"The Singing Fool" was moved to the Grand after its first run at the Stanley. (The Grand is also a Stanley house.) Business was very good, and the production has been held over for a second week.

"Heart to Heart," co-starring Lloyd Hughes and Mary Astor, a delightful little love comedy, pleased average audiences at the Liberty and Davis.

The Regent offered "The Whip" to average business for the week.

Both the Cameraphone and the Alhambra theatres (first-run houses of East Liberty) played third-run on special productions and got satisfactory business, the former playing "The Street Angel" while the latter had "Lilac Time."

Harrisburg, Pa.

CONDITIONS continued favorable for the theatre business, and the picture houses, provided with good attractions, scored heavily at the box office.

Lillian Gish in "Wind," at the Loew's Regent, brought good business all week, and the patrons were well pleased. The press critics were unanimous in their praise of the picture.

The Eric von Stroheim picture, "The Wedding March," was well advertised at the Victoria and proved a thrilling spectacle.

The Colonial enjoyed good patronage with Victor McLaglen in "The River Pirate," a gripping drama full of tense action.

At the State for half of the week the film feature was "Why Sailors Go Wrong," which is brimful of real comedy and gave large audiences a big kick. The last three days the State showed "Win That Girl."

The Broad Street offering was John Gilbert and Renee Adoree in a second run showing of "The Cossacks."

The Rialto did quite satisfactory business with Edmund Lowe in "Dressed to Kill." The Grand gave Harrisburg a repeat booking of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come."

The Capital showed Clara Bow in "Hula," making the third time the city has seen this sprightly show, Clara having a big following in the Pennsylvania capital city.

The Russell theatre put on a double feature program consisting of "The Siren," with Tom Moore and Dorothy Revier, and Buffalo Bill, Jr., in "Coming and Going."

Salt Lake City

FAIRLY successful attendance records have been had by most of the Salt Lake City downtown theatres this past week. Weather conditions have been fair and a few special features have been presented.

The Capitol Theatre had a very good week with their showing of "The Street Angel" and Fanchon and Marco's stage presentation "Hi Spots."

"The Scarlet Lady" with Lya de Putti, Don Alvarado and Warner Oland, was the picture offering at the Pantages theatre, and crowded houses prevailed throughout the week.

Warner Brothers' second 100 per cent all-talking Vitaphone picture "The Terror," was received at the Victory by packed houses.

Richard Dix in "Moran of the Marines" with Ruth Elder, played to fairly packed houses at the Paramount Empress theatre throughout the week.

The American theatre reports fairly satisfactory results with the showing of "The Cavalier," featuring Richard Talmadge, Barbara Bedford and David Torrence.

"Forgotten Faces" was the feature picture offering at the Gem this week, and good crowds responded, especially during the evening performances.

Richard Barthelmess in "Out of the Ruins" was shown as a second run at the Rialto, and was a very good drawing card.

The suburban houses, as well as the second run houses here, have had very satisfactory weeks.

Portland, Ore.

IT was Greater Stage Season for two of the largest houses, which helped to maintain the high records in attendance, and practically all houses registered well as there were 11 first-run pictures, which was rather unusual.

At the Broadway "Our Dancing Daughters," with Joan Crawford, was on the screen, but drew only fair. John Gilbert in "Four Walls" brought house receipts up to a higher level.

"Hold 'Em Yale," with Rod LaRocque, proved good comedy at the Oriental and seven professional vaudeville acts were put on the opening night to greatly increased business.

Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" makes the Music Box even more popular and will hold on indefinitely with long lines the rule at every performance.

Francis Johnson, new manager at the Blue Mouse, reports a good week's business with "Caught in the Fog."

"Street of Illusion did good business at Pantages.

United Artists played "The Disputed Woman" to fair business.

Big runs are reported from all Pacific Northwest cities on Al Jolson's "Singing Fool," which opened here at Hamrick's Music Box to big business and an indefinite run.

At the Blue Mouse in Tacoma, Wash., the picture is now in its second week, and in Music Box, Seattle, the third week is going big.

At Ray Grombacher's Liberty in Spokane, Wash., a premier midnight showing was given October 12th with all seats reserved at $1.00.

Oklahoma City

AGAIN a good lineup of pictures at the first run houses of Oklahoma City was rewarded with a brisk weekly attendance.

At the Capitol, Warner Bros. Vitaphone picture, "Lights of New York," the first all-talkie feature ever made, delighted full houses all week.

George Bancroft in "Docks of New York" on the screen and the National Players on the stage packed 'em in at the Criterion for the entire week.

"Good business was reported at the Liberty Theatre with Glenn Tryon and Barbara Kent in "Lonesome."

The Empress presented Colleen Moore in "Oh Kay" for an excellent week's business.

The Orpheum with five acts of good vaudeville pleased its audience for the entire week, and Sousa and his band drew big audiences to the Shrine Auditorium.

Albany

TWO excellent pictures with a war background divided the honors and likewise the business in Albany last week with a toss up as to which of the two brought the greater amount of money to the respective theatres.

The Mark Strand used "Lilac Time" and had the crowds standing afternoons and evenings. In addition to the feature, the theatre used for the first time in Albany, the Fox Movietone and several Vitaphone presentations.

In meeting this competition, the Leland used "Four Sons" with seven shows a day and playing to crowds hour in and hour out. In addition, the arrival of the Graf Zeppelin was shown.

The Mark Ritz, in Albany, found excellent business during the week with "The Waterhole."

The Capitol, given over to legitimate, offered stiff competition in "The Trial of Mary Dugan," which had a local appeal in view of the fact that it was written by the father of an Albany resident, who until recently was the manager of the Mark Ritz Theatre.

Clinton Square Theatre in Albany ran well with its double feature program of "The Divine Sinner" and "The Sporting Age." Proctor's Grand used "Forgotten Faces."

In the neighboring city of Troy, Clara Bow was used for four days in "The Fleet's In." Strange to say, this picture which played to packed houses in Albany, drew only ordinary in Troy.

During the last half of the week, "Beggars of Life" did not score heavily at the Troy Theatre.

At the Lincoln in Troy, "Four Walls" ran the entire week to very good business. Neighborhood houses report business as having been only fair in Troy during the week.

Ottawa

GOOD pictures, both from a production and box-office point of view, were seen in leading Ottawa, Ontario, theatres during the week of October 15th.

The unanimous verdict, from throngs of patrons at the Regent Theatre, was that "Tempest" was one of the best of the season. The Regent bill was further strengthened by an excellent Laurel-Hardy comedy, "Should Married Men Go Home?" This was good from a strictly comedy viewpoint.

A most popular attraction was "Oh Kay," starring Colleen Moore, at the Centre theatre. Additional interest was aroused by a special newspaper combination page, although the picture did not need extra exploitation.

"Danger Street" at B. F. Keith's Theatre was well-liked by the large crowds, although it did not create unusual excitement.

The name of Rex Beach helped in the presentation of "The Michigan Kid" at the Imperial Theatre, where crowds were above the average. It was the sturdy outdoor type of picture that is liked by Imperial patrons. The revamped Capital Theatre got away to an auspicious start with second run of "The Gaucho" for the first half and "Two Arabian Knights" for the second half, the first named being by far the better box-office picture.

Among the neighborhood houses, the Fern Theatre scored heavily, first with second run of "What Price Glory" and then with "Pioneer Scouts." What helped the latter considerably was the final chapter of the "Masked Menace" serial. The kids were out in force for this.

The Rex registered big business with "Across to Singapore" for the first half and "Chain Lightning" for the last three days; patronage being good all week.

At the Columbia, business was fair for "She's a Sheik," starring Bebe Daniels, and

"The Rough Riders," the latter proving the better attraction for the Columbia community.

Baltimore

BUSINESS at all the houses, including the first-runs was poor during the first part of the week beginning Oct. 15, due to unseasonable hot weather, but the latter part of the week cooled off and people swarmed into the streets.

Outstanding for high averages for the week were Warners' Metropolitan with "The Singing Fool," starring Al Jolson, in its second week, where they had them standing at all performances, and had three special policemen to handle the crowds; and next in line was Loew's Century with "Take Me Home," starring Bebe Daniels. Business for the week was fine.

At the Keith-Albee New Garden, "The Foreign Legion" played along with vaudeville. The vaudeville was good, but this could not be said of the picture.

"The Air Circus," with sound accompaniment proved a fairly good drawing card at the New Theatre, but did not go over as big as was expected.

"The Hit of the Show" proved a pretty good patron puller at the Rivoli, with sound and dialogue.

D. W. Griffith's "Battle of the Sexes" was tendered just fair business at the Stanley when excellent patronage was expected. This house, however, has 4,000 seats to fill, and there were 11 first-run pictures in opposition.

At Ford's theatre, "Submarine" was offered at $1 top afternoons, and $1.50 top at night. The picture flopped heavily during its second week.

"The Red Mark," proved an entertaining but gruesome film at the Hippodrome. Patronage went from fair to good.

"Baby Cyclone" turned out to be a flop at Loew's Valencia.

"Son of the Golden West" was offered at the Palace burlesque house, with the latter type of show, and business was poor.

Tampa

TWO theatres, the Tampa and the Franklin, located directly opposite each other, broke house records for the year last Sunday. The second anniversary of the opening of the Tampa was celebrated last week and some mighty clever publicity was put over to sell the week to Tampa fans.

Starting the week with a midnight matinee Saturday night, at which a pre-view of the feature of the first half, "The Fleet's In," was given, as well as a fine array of local talent on the stage, the house was jammed and packed to capacity. Then they topped it off Sunday by breaking the record of the previous Sunday, which up to that time held the record for the year. There seems to be no doubt about Clara Bow being the greatest card with Tampa fans. Another female star, Bebe Daniels in "Take Me Home" was the attraction of the last half and it went over very good, giving the Tampa a week that was a wow.

The Victoria also had a whale of a Sunday business with the all-talkie feature, "The Terror." This picture completed a ten-day run this week and the business all through has been big, crowding the record of "The Jazz Singer."

"Virgin Lips" drew better than average for the Strand, Sunday and Monday. "Chicken A La King" looked like a hot bet, but failed to pull, the three days running just about average. "Beyond London Lights" completed the week, with average returns.

"Seventh Heaven," second run, was the picture that hung up the Sunday record for the Franklin, and it put Monday over average, too. "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" and "Les Miserables" were the other second runs shown this week, neither showing up very strong at the box office.

Milwaukee

(Previous Week)

WHEN practically every theatre in the down town section is packed it is hard to estimate which picture was the most popular. Two features are being held over for a second week because of their popularity. Business in general in the down town theatres was not equal to that of last week because of poor weather. Several rainy evenings slowed down receipts to some extent.

"King of Kings" received such excellent patronage that it is being held over for an additional week at the Alhambra. "Four Sons" will play for a second week at the Strand. The picture kept the house well filled at practically every performance. "Lilac Time" was exceedingly well received at the Wisconsin. "Excess Baggage" at the Majestic did fair business. "Docks of New York" drew fair houses at the Merrill. The Garden had a very successful week with "The Terror" as a feature. The Orpheum featuring "Out of the Ruins" and a well balanced program found the house packed for every evening performance and very good matinee business. The Riverside's feature was "Midnight Life."

Neighborhood theatres enjoyed very good business, not quite as good as the previous week's, but good nevertheless. "The River Pirate" was featured at the Garfield, Modjeska, and Uptown and business at these houses was very good.

"Lights of New York" was offered patrons of the Tower and Oriental. Here, too, things were very lively. The Venetian with "The Foreign Legion" had a very successful week and "The Open Range" brought good business to the Egyptian.

Salt Lake City

(Previous Week)

THE first run downtown pictures of Salt Lake City enjoyed very satisfactory results as a whole this past week with exceptional success for a few.

The Victory Theatre, which has been continuously enjoying house-breaking records for the past few months, since the installation of the talking pictures this week exceeded all records with "The Singing Fool."

The Capitol Theatre has had a fairly crowded week during their presentation of "The Good-Bye Kiss."

The Paramount Empress has experienced an improvement in business since the inauguration of the new policy, including a short dramatic act in connection with the feature picture, which this week was "The Whip."

The Pantages Theatre has had a very good week with "Detectives" in conjunction with their vaudeville.

"The King of Kings" has packed the house at the Gem throughout the week and is continuing to do so.

The American Theatre has had satisfactory results with "The Toilers."

Conference week is also being observed in this city at this time.

"Interference" at N. Y. Criterion Nov. 16

"INTERFERENCE," the first all-talking feature to be produced by Paramount, will have its New York premiere at the Criterion Theatre on Friday evening, November 16.

"Wings," Paramount's aviation spectacle which has made the Criterion its home for over a year, is closing Friday night. The house will then be darkened for wiring and installation of sound devices that will be required for the presentation of "Interference."

Opinions on Pictures

While the City Sleeps

Chaney Has a Fair One Here

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE stories don't change much for Lon Chaney. Not being a romantic type, it is his usual task to carry a character role of sharp contrasts. He's either a dyed-in-the-wool freak or a straight—with the motivation of the plot pivoting around self-effacement. The cripple or clown dies and the youngsters marry. Here he effaces himself with his customary breaking heart in order that youth may be served.

Chaney plays a sleuth this time, adorned with grotesque make-up. And a smart bull he makes. He isn't the usual police type registering stupidity. His mobile face indicates a yielding to sentiment and pathos. And so it develops that he sacrifices his own happiness in seeing to it that his sweetheart joins the gangster. He even sets the youth on the straight and narrow.

The types are excellent as portrayed by Anita Page as the girl, Carroll Nye as the weakling gangster, Wheeler Oakman as a tough crook and Mae Busch and Polly Moran in character roles. There is plenty of gun play, as well as some tip-top scenes of police life atmosphere. Its an obvious yarn which Chaney puts over.

Drawing Power: Popularity of star. Title and supporting cast. For all types of houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up atmosphere of title. Bill as exciting story of the law versus crime with the talented Chaney in one of his graphic roles. Play up Anita Page.

THEME: Crook drama of detective who loves girl who has stronger affection for gangster. The sleuth unites the couple and helps them to happiness.

THE CAST

Dan	Lon Chaney
Myrtle	Anita Page
Marty	Carroll Nye
Skeeter	Wheeler Oakman
Gussie	Mae Busch
Mrs. McGuinness	Polly Moran

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, six reels. Released October, 1928. Director, Jack Conway.

Take Me Home

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE hardest-working actress on the Famous lot was given another story which is no great shakes. It can't be called anything else but just average though it permits the star to furnish her own special brand of humor. For once she isn't given to cutting up didoes and athletics. As a result the story doesn't look so much like a vehicle.

This time Bebe plays a chorine—an independent member of the ensemble who is against flirting with the smart roadster boys who might make her walk home. She is well-schooled in how to take care of herself—and backs up her independence with a healthy line of slang. Her background is a theatrical boarding house. The romance is woven around a rustic who leaves the farm to perform as a juggler. His stuff isn't so hot, but he wins the sympathy and admiration of the chorus girl. When her show needs an act—she sees to it that the boy gets a job. So it develops that the star of the musical has a yen for him. And this precipitates an argument which turns into a healthy hair-pulling contest.

That's about all there is to it—the piece relying on the incident and the atmosphere. It is draggy in spots, but Neilan, the director, had very little to work with. He has managed to make it fairly interesting. Bebe has had hotter stories—and has done better work. Lilyan Tashman is the temperamental star of the musical show and does very well. So does Neil Hamilton as the bucolic youth. This young man doesn't seem to get very good breaks, but his work here should provide him with better assignments.

Drawing Power: For average houses. Star is popular and should attract them.

Exploitation Angles: Tease the title and bill as romance of the theatrical world. Play up as romantic comedy of chorus girl who gets her man. Mention Neil Hamilton.

THEME: Romantic comedy of chorus girl who wins youth of her heart away from leading woman.

"Fighting for Victory"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THEY'VE done something quite out of the trend of the usual Collegians in this release, and that is they've given Trent (Eddie Phillips) a chance to do some of the medal grabbing, which role is usually relegated to Ed Benson (George Lewis). After stacking the cards so that Benson won everything in sight during the course of the different Collegians series, it is only fair both to Phillips and the spectator to let Phillips have a chance to bring home the laurel wreath of victory to dear old Calford.

The college boys and girls go in for boxing in this one, Phillips representing Calford against Midvale. On the eve of the fight, the Midvale "sportsmen" egg Phillips on to strike one of their number. Then they tell the Calford boy that he has seriously injured the man and that he had better get out of town quickly. This produces a mental fear in Phillips and during his fight the following day, he is taking a licking because he is afraid to let a healthy punch go. Lewis escapes from the Midvale boys and tips Phillips off about the frame-up with the result that Phillips goes out and knocks his opponent cuckoo with a few hefty punches.

Nat Ross turned in the direction.

The Melody of Love

Weak Story in This All-Talkie,

Just So-So

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ONE need not be greatly alarmed over this first all-talkie which flies the Universal banner. With Movietone as the background, it does its stuff, but is unduly hampered by the weakness of the story and the inability of the talkers to put over their stuff.

The idea projects a song-writer who is deep in a war romance. He goes to France with his outfit and is chased by a French singer (who to carry out the obviousness, is named Madelon). Naturally, when he returns to America to discover his erstwhile sweetheart carrying on with his old employee, he straightway plays the trump card by getting in touch with the French singer.

Recourse is had to war-time melodies to add emphasis to the story, but the players don't do justice to the songs and dialogue except where Mildred Harris is concerned. Double exposures are used and the war incident doesn't register any too well. It bears the mark of being rushed through in a hurry. Might please those who haven't become too discriminating in their taste for talkies.

Drawing Power: An all-talkie should interest them. Suitable for average houses that are completely wired. Exploitation Angles: Put all your campaign on fact of its being all-talkie inasmuch as the cast is not so well known. Bill as romance of the late war.

THEME: Romantic drama of song-writer who after going to France to fight, discovers French girl loves him more than the absent sweetheart.

"Hold that Monkey"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A MILD fun fest is had in this new Mermaid comedy, featuring Monty Collins, with Kit Guard in the chief supporting role. There's old material in its sequences and too much of repetition. A fair number.

Monty and Kit fall hard for an attractive dame and follow her to her father's circus where they put on a bluff, claiming that they are animal trainers. They are hired on the spot and assigned the task of taming a monkey, named Lily, but as gentle as a cyclone. Monty and his pal try to fool the circus owner by transferring Lily to another cage and having Kit impersonate the monkey. However, the scheme doesn't work and the monkey pummels the two roysterers.

From thence on, the comedy only echoes scenes that have been picturized innumerable times in other comedies. The monkey chases Monty into a Turkish bath, where the negro attendants are terrified out of their skins.

Me, Gangster

Realistic Crook Drama, Should Do Business

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

CARRYING a decorative title which fairly shouts its meaning, this crook drama gets under way with realistic touches and maintains them through a series of punchy scenes to the very finish. The idea is built up from a sort of diary exploiting the criminal life of a convict from his first days of crookedness until he seeks and finds redemption through the aid of a girl who believes in him.

Not so new, is it? But it is forcefully presented and sticks to its pattern without trespassing over into sentimental pastures, aside from the necessary romantic interest. The hero is a bad chip of a bad old block and after a series of shady crimes he wins an election to prison. But the girl who loves him exercises her charm and understanding. And the youth's redemption is effected.

The piece is strongest in its atmosphere, the scenes comprising prison shots, police court sequences, and some tenement tidbits. The story is well told, punctuated with adequate incident and acted competently enough even if the players are not always convincing.

Drawing Power: Title and popularity of the work type of story. For average houses. Exploitation Angles: Push the title. Play up the force in the word, gangster. Mention June Collyer and Fox's new male lead, Don Terry. Exploit author whose stories are good sellers. Play up director.

THEME: Crook melodrama with bad egg reforming under kindly guidance of girl.

The Cavalier

Stunt Action Becalmed on the Sea of Romance

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

IRVIN WILLAT, the director, has set a sweeping background of old Spain transplanted to the new world—a background which is highly effective in pictorial detail—as a romantic environment for the fast action type of melodrama and the acrobatics in which Richard Talmadge, interpreter of the name role, has specialized during a long career in the "action pictures." The picture has its exciting moments, but the edge is taken from much of the action by a tendency to overemphasize minor characters and incident, a procedure which slows up the movement considerably.

Nevertheless, here is a romantic melodrama with a good deal of especially well executed stunt performing. Talmadge swings by his lariat from treetop to roof, by chandelier from staircase to balcony, vaults over walls and into the saddle, fights off dozens of antagonists, and all in the interests of oppressed Indians and the fair lady who rebels against the fulfillment of a "bartered bride" negotiation between her mother and Ramon Torreno. To accomplish his deeds as knight errant the hero enacts two roles, that of a meek, submissive Indian, and the dashing El Caballero.

"The Cavalier" is equipped with a Phototone synchronization of music—a lively, and perhaps too dignified an arrangement by Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld—and some "sound effects." There is an interpolated song—which by the way gives the audience an opportunity to "hear" what it does not "see." This because Taki is not singing in synchronization with the rich baritone voice which is heard. Of course, the music and sound effects were put in after the picture was filmed. The barking of the dogs heard in the scene where El Caballero is to be given a start of only five-hundred paces on the pack of vicious hounds as punishment for not capturing El Caballero—greatly enhances, we dare say, the melodramatic effect of the incident.

The acting is capable. Talmadge does his stunts well, and that is all the acting that one should require from him. Barbara Bedford has nothing much to do, but she is decorative. The other actors are adequate to all that is required of them, which is not much.

Drawing Power: At its best in the house which caters to the action lovers, but so well set up that it will make a fair attraction for the big house.

THEME: The adventures of a knight errant who risks his life to thwart the oppressors of the Indians in a Spanish colony in the new world, and who saves a Spanish beauty from a distasteful marriage, the reward being her love.

THE CAST

El Caballero.....	Richard Talmadge

Adapted from "The Black Rider" by Max Brand. Director, Irvin Willat. Continuity by Victor Irvin. Photographed by John Stevens and Harry Cooper.

"Fisticuffs"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

HERE is something really funny, comedy turned in with skill. The laughs keep pattering away. There's no lack of them. From the chuckle to the loud belly laugh, they are all there. The series of clever burlesques that Lupino Lane has been making is continued in "Fisticuffs" with good effect.

Wallace Lupino supports his brother, playing two roles. Additional players are Harry Dunkinson and a girl, whose name is not given. Henry W. George directed the cast and Jay Turner took care of the photography.

The old days of boxing, when the Britishers thoroughly enjoyed the game of bare knuckled slugging and when rival blacksmiths would settle their scores in an enclosed arena are utilized for the comedy. Lupino and Wallace are apprentices of a smith, who has bet his all that Wallace will best a certain batter in a slugging bee. Wallace is kidnapped and Lupino takes his place. A most enjoyable fight takes place, the Lane brothers giving a variety of falls as they knock each other down.

It is all very good fun. Your clients will like it.

The Home Towners

First Talkie Stage Play Scores

(Reviewed by Oscar Cooper)

WARNER BROTHERS, having led the way with other types of talkies, pioneers in another direction with "The Home Towners." Here is your play, put on the Vitaphone, with the original lines pretty much as they were in the George M. Cohan stage production.

It is 100 per cent talking, with the exception of a minor shot or two. The whole action is carried by the dialogue, and very fine it is. Besides, it is the first talkie comedy-drama, so the picture, from several angles, bulks large in sound pioneer work.

In this effort, the reading of lines is put to the severest test it has yet received. All the typical motion picture action that one got used to before the talkies were heard of at all, is gone. So it's the players, plus, of course, the direction and technical handling, but mostly the players and lines that are to make or break the picture.

The result is a big step forward for the talkies. Robert McWade, Richard Bennett, Gladys Brockwell, Robert Edeson and Doris Kenyon—their talkie ability being in the order named, according to our viewpoint—furnish fine entertainment that cannot fail to register at the box-office.

The comedy is entirely of the stage situation brand. There are no picture "gags." None needed, either. The speeches carry the thing, and with admirable effect in the scenes between McWade and Bennett, and only a little less so when the others are on the sound set. Make no mistake about it, the Warner production people know how to make talkies; and each succeeding picture shows great improvement. Of course, there is much to be done yet. There is still too much abrupt chopping off, like a curtain being suddenly lowered, at the end of sequences. But, even here, in one or two places the blow is softened by long shots when transitions are to be made.

McWade as the grouchy old friend from South Bend, who disarranges everything beautifully for his pal (Bennett) on the eve of the latter's wedding, all but walks away with the picture. It is fine trouping. The cast, as a whole, gets into the spirit of the thing, and uses its evident stage experience splendidly.

Drawing Power: First class, for wired houses. Exploitation Angles: A chance here to capitalize on the hundred per cent talkie angle, as well as the fine cast, and the excellent comedy-drama.

THEME: Home town friend, in New York to be best man at his pal's wedding, upsets all the arrangements by his suspicions of the bride-to-be and her family. All is ironed out and ends happily.

THE CAST

"The Boundary Battle"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE plot material for these western featurettes is becoming frayed and as transparent as can be, so often are the same old events hashed and re-hashed to make what apparently goes under the guise of a "new" western story. To judge by this story which is stretched out for two reels and which at times is quite asinine and absurd, there must be nothing new under the sun, especially in westerns. These stories must be rubber-stamped as they have been seen innumerable times in pictures telling of fearless rangers, brave young heroines, lawless villains and the rest of the rigamarole.

You can look over this short western, comb it thoroughly and all you will find in it is the old bunk, in this case, not even presented with any conviction. It's old-fashioned stuff and a reminder of the days of Bronco Billy.

Edmund Cobb stars under the direction of Joseph Levigard. The tale is that of a villain who steals the boundary monument to place it in a location that will add to his property. The man whose land he is thus stealing objects, is kidnapped. The nearby ranger is warned of this perfidy. He comes to the shack where the man is kept prisoner, frees him and defends the man's daughter from the attack of the villain. The general melee follows with help coming for the ranger when the villains are about to shoot him.

"Foot Prints"

(Universal—One Reel)

A SOMEWHAT novel idea is played up in this issue of the Laemmle Novelty series. It is the story of an old shoe, which tells a fellow pair of shoes his melancholy tale. It is a fairly interesting bit of entertainment.

The shoe tells of his bright happy days, when he was first purchased and when his owner's status in life was respectable. By means of flashes of a pair of feet the information is conveyed that the owner of the shoes has met with financial reverses. Soon he is like any tramp and the shoes show it. But in a few seconds of drama, the owner of the shoes saves a well-to-do man from death and he is fittingly rewarded.

As for the shoe, he is cast aside with his fellow. He is regarded as a useless bit of leather that has seen its best days. He is seen settling to the bottom of a stream where his owner has thrown him as the picture ends.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"All in Fun"

(Educational—One Reel)

NOT lacking in pep and breezy action is this Cameo introducing Jerry Mandy, a comedian new to the "spice of the program" comedies. He belongs to the group of comedians, who go in for sheer nuttiness. The goofier their antics, the better is their motto.

Jerry gets fired from his job after raising a racket with the boss and from thence on he tries to determine his future by following the advice on a fortune-telling ticket. None of the things predicted for him come to pass except a rainfall of trouble. It's a snappy type of fun and it's quite effective in its harmless way.

Jerry's aides in the cast are Al Thompson and Dan Peterson. The megaphonic burden was handled by Francis J. Martin.

"A Taxi Scandal"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A SLOW-PACED, quite gag-less comedy which only gets limbered up in the last few hundred feet is this one of the "Dan, the Taximan" series, produced by Mack Sennett and starring Jack Cooper. The reels unwind, but there is mighty little material in them to cause the sought for laughter.

Cooper affects an old-fashioned comedy make-up, a Bergerac nose, a walrus mustache. Indeed, he looks as if he had stepped out of one of the old Keystone casts. He portrays a witless fellow, whose heart palpitates whenever a pretty girl smiles upon him. He is a friend of a tough cop, who finds him in compromising circumstances with his wife.

It is not until this latter incident is reached that the comedy begins to snap into it and liven up a bit. Cooper and Bud Jamieson mingle in an amusing contest in which Cooper gets much the worst of it.

Virginia Vance, Bud Jamieson and Andy Clyde are the supporting players. Of these, Jamieson does the best work as the jealous husband of Miss Vance. Del Lord did the direction and John A. Waldron supervised.

"Monkey Love"

(Pathe—One Reel)

MONKEY business in which most of the jungle folks join is effectively set forth in this Aesop fable, cartoonized and animated with a succession of rapid gags. A monkey's loved one is ruthlessly kidnapped by a lion. Mr. Monk sets out to attempt a daring rescue when his adored one is carried aloft by the lion in an auto equipped with soap-bubble tires. With his trusty bean shooter he pops his enemy's tires one by one until he brings him down to earth where a bull buffets him about while the monkey lovers rejoice in his discomfiture.

This one is exceptionally lively.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Gridiron Demons"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE Aesop mice can supply "Chick" Meehan with a few new plays for his Football Sense" series on the strength of the brand of football they display in their latest animated cartoon subject. Their football is such as has never been played on any earthly gridiron, and it is quite amusing. The valiant mice form an invulnerable machine and they mow down Al Falfa and his aides, deftly employing bean shooters, lassoes and other implements to tackle their opponents. They have a fine time and their pleasure is felt also by the onlookers.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Glorious Adventures"

(Educational—One Reel)

SUMMER sports are presented in this Hodge-Podge, with animated work for the children and a more appealing and interesting type of entertainment for those who have passed the childish years. The selection includes some fair views of water sports and offers a splendid snatch of scenic in a glimpse of Ausable Chasm in northern New York. Some of the other views could be improved upon and brought more up-to-date.

More snappy scenes and "live" titles would benefit this Hodge-Podge.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Big Game"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE indefatigable Al Falfa and a little canine romp through the wilds of Africa in the latest of the "sugar coated grains of wisdom" from the studio of Paul Terry. You can mark it as up to the standard of the usual "Aesop" cartoon.

It tells of Al and his dog being chased by a whale, landing and mounting a camel and visiting the lion country to nail a few of the big cats. Al is a fizzle as a lion hunter and he gets poked around by a lion daddy when he tries to steal a litter of kittens.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"A Fair Catch"

(Pathe—One Reel)

ANOTHER of "Chick" Meehan's instructive A celluloid discourses on the great game of football, this reel provides some interesting plays on which devotees can feast their eyes. The man who receives the ball, his maneuverings and pivoting to avoid a tackle, his clever defense in avoiding falls—his strategic plan of offense and defense are clearly demonstrated in this reel devoted to the pigskin and containing enough football to satisfy those who delight in the sport.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Paddling Co-eds"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE adventures of Ed Benson at Calford read very much like those of the Dick Merriwells, Fred Fearnots and other heroes of boys' fiction. He never loses. In this new Collegians he and Dorothy Gulliver defeat Eddie Phillips and a fair partner in a canoe race.

On the whole, "Paddling Co-eds" is a better than average "Collegians," in story value anyway. It recounts the activities of a determined little co-ed, who is anxious to vamp Benson and get his frat pin. But Benson has already promised his pin to June, the young lady played by Miss Gulliver. The vamp employs guile and, making believe she is drowning, she has Benson rescue her and carry her to the dormitory. Here Benson is on forbidden ground, and June sees him tip-toeing out of the place and immediately jumps at conclusions. In a huff, she refuses to race with him but at the last minute relents.

"Pathe Review No. 44"

(Pathe—One Reel)

NO. 44 starts off with some really fine views of London in the early morning. Views of a great city are always interesting, these exceptionally so as they show the hurrying throngs crossing London bridge and the early traffic in the Thames. The photography is fine.

Sumatran farmers in a celebration, exhibiting their oxen, racing them and pitting two of them in a head to head struggle are recorded in the second subject, fair in interest. The reel winds up with scenes of a Broadway belle going through the exercises which keep for her her sylph-like figure.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Hay Wire"

(Educational—One Reel)

TWO new Educational comedians, Gene Stone and Billy Dale, are the co-stars of this Cameo. They are fairly funny and they play around with a lot of old-time gags. Nearly all of their stuff is slapstick. A pretty girl, Ruth Eddings, appears in support and so does Ford West. Francis J. Martin directed.

Their capers are on a farm. As they are city youths, they do everything wrong, causing the farmer who hired them a few heartaches. Their efforts may produce some hilarity among the neighborhood houses, for which type they are best suited.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"The Defensive Ends"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE defensive tactics of the ends are outlined in this new issue of the "Football Sense" series of interesting short subjects dealing with the autumnal national game. You follow an end as throughout different plays he crashes, retreats, feints and maneuvers, tackling the ball carrier and protective teammates. The idea is very plainly brought out through the use of white uniforms for the subject under discussion. The captions are phrased snappily and the demonstrations of various plays follow rapidly one upon the other. A good subject.—RAYMOND GANLY.

New "U" House to Open Soon in Phoenix

A new Universal Theatre, seating 1650 people and called the Orpheum, will throw open its doors in Phoenix, Arizona, about December 15, 1928. It is one of the Rickards and Nace houses, which organization is affiliated with the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc.

A SUDDEN decision on Thursday night to hold over "The Singing Fool" for a third week at the Great Lakes Theatre in Buffalo, necessitated some fast work of exploitation and announcement. In the emergency H. M. Addison, managing director of the house ran true to the form he has been displaying as a showman since assuming his post at the Great Lakes, and announcements were rushed to the newspapers of the town. Also, the theatre issued its own "extra," a special tabloid carrying the screamer: "Al Jolson Held Over," printed in 120 Gothic type, and with secondary heads stressing the fact that another feature on the same bill was a movietone presentation of Ruby Keeler, Mrs. Al Jolson, in her celebrated tap dance. Fifty-thousand of these tabloid papers were distributed.

On Friday night, 5,000 copies of the Saturday morning paper were purchased, and this dodge pasted on the front page: "Compliments of Al Jolson, who with Mrs. Jolson is playing seven days more at the Great Lakes Theatre." These papers were passed out to people coming out of opposition houses without cost.

The marquee of the theatre were decorated for a holiday. On the upright front sign on the theatre, facing Main Street, was put a paste-up of Jolson's face, taken from the 24 sheet paper. The background was painted a dead black and at night a baby spot picked up the likeness as if in the air against the black sky. The picture could be seen for six or seven blocks and recognized for four. Besides, there were American flags, bunting and special lighting stunts used on the marquee, which also carried a special canvas drop boosting the picture.

For the front entrance, a cut was made of the life-size figure of Jolson in the three-sheet upright. This was placed before a Brunswick panthorpe, playing "Sonny Boy" and "I'm sitting on Top of the World," the voice apparently coming from Jolson's open mouth.

For the Fox-Movietone special of Mrs. Jolson, the theatre obtained a special trailer, reading along the line that the Great Lakes, which had been featuring Al Jolson for two weeks and now running a third, was happy to be able to present for the first time in Buffalo and for the first time on the same screen with her husband, Ruby Keeler, the present Mrs. Jolson. It went over big with the audience.

Marquee signs were also made to read that the Great Lakes was the first theatre ever to present both Al Jolson and Mrs. Al Jolson on the same screen program.

Short Subjects Heavily Billed on New York's East Side

COMPETITION for patronage among New York's East Side theatres is so keen that many forms of exploitation, somewhat overlooked in other parts of Manhattan, are being used to attract every possible dollar into the box office.

Most notable of these efforts is the exploitation with which these houses back their short features. And one of the leaders playing up Short Subjects is the "M. and S." Hollywood Theatre, Sixth Street and Avenue A, under the direction of David J. Lustig.

During a recent week, both sides of this theatre's marquee featured Jerry Drew, Educational comedy star, as a companion attraction to the feature, "Manhattan Knights." Over the entrance, his name was the only one featured. Two displays of stills on the Ideal Comedy, "Girls Behave," in which he is featured, also were prominently shown. A one-sheet frame lay-out at the right of the entrance and a special narrow frame, three sheets high, just to the right of the box office, were included in the exploitation. Other stills from the same picture were scattered among the various frames in the lobby front.

A three-sheet picture lay-out just to the left of the box-office also was devoted to a forthcoming Educational Comedy, "Pirates Beware," in which Lupino Lane is starred. On the play-date of this subject, the marquee display space will be devoted to Lane much in the same manner as Drew was played up. Somewhat original was the display of the front cover of Educational's press sheets on these two subjects in a prominent place in the still lay-outs.

Offers 10 Acts on Amateur Night Program

Amateur acts have been found so conducive to increased business at the Griswold theatre, in Troy, N. Y., that Jack Campbell, manager of the house, has now increased the acts to ten on the one night each week that they are given.

Usherettes Supplanted by Male Staff at Troy

The Troy theatre has supplanted the young lady ushers with smartly uniformed young men, who have been drilled during the past week or so. A similar innovation will take place at the Mark Strand in Albany.

Showmanship

Brief

TO "Now," the weekly house organ of West Coast Theatres, Inc., we are indebted for the following little story which has "showmanship" written above, below and through every word of it:

"Back stage. Never mind which theatre. Time for the first show; just a handful of people in the house. 'Not enough out there to fill a telephone booth,' wailed one of the backstageers; 'shame we can't cut some, Mr. Murray.' But Charlie Murray, touring our circuit in a Fanchon and Marco show, only looked at him with the light of a thousand years in his eyes, 'Sonny,' he said, 'remember this as long as you are in this show business: It isn't the ones who came that we want to cheat. It's the ones who didn't come. We want to show them what they missed. No—we'll give them everything we have. And when I get out there I'm going to say, 'Come On Folks; There Aren't Many of Us Here Right Now, So Let's Be Chummy. Come on Down Front. Let's All Get Together.'"

A DECIDEDLY novel and successful tie-up with a local camera dealer was profitably used to exploit "The Michigan Kid" at the State Theatre, Toledo, Ohio. The stunt drew people to the lobby of the State, where each day were posted fifty miniature photos of Toledoans. The photos were snapped on the streets by an Ansco camera man. The tie-up with the new Ansco Memo Camera which takes 50 pictures without reloading.

JACK LYKES, manager of the Strand, Tampa, had "Brotherly Love" in for a three-day run recently. Jack is mighty clever at catching good tie-up stunts, and this title suggested a hook-up with the "Boy Scouts" as that organization is based upon this sentiment. So Jack worked out a plan, took it up with the Scouts, who fell in with the arrangements, and Thursday a Scout acted as manager, others held down the doors and acted as ushers and boosters.

A FULL page co-operative ad in the Globe-Times was negotiated by the Savoy Theatre of Bethlehem, Pa., with the local music stores when Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" opened in that city. The successes sung by Jolson in this production were the basis of the advertisements which particularly plugged sheet music and records of "Sonny Boy," the theme song, and "Rainbow Round My Shoulder." Even radio stores entered the page telling their customers to prepare for the next time Jolson might broadcast.

THE management of the Shawnee Theatre, Plymouth, Pa., beginning on October 13, inaugurated a policy, to prevail throughout the football season, of having the regular children's Saturday matinees in the mornings instead of afternoons. The purpose is to avoid conflicting with the Plymouth High School football games.

FOR the second time, the Melba Theatre in Dallas, broadcast the talking sequences of an all talking picture, Sunday night, when "The Terror" was put on the air for the radio listeners of station WFAA, Dallas.

Fans Sign Chaney Autograph Album and Give Theatre Live Mail List

WHEN the Lon Chaney picture, "While the City Sleeps," played the Colorado Theatre, Pueblo, Colorado, Manager C. Clare Woods used his imagination and secured a splendid mailing list for future Lon Chaney pictures.

In the lobby of his theatre he arranged a display consisting of a table, a large autograph album, and a 1-sheet card announcing that Lon Chaney wanted autographs of his fans. Over 300 registered and gave their home address. Manager Woods will be sure that each of these 300 receives at least a postal card announcement when the next Chaney picture plays the Colorado Theatre.

Warners to Sponsor Broadcast of Returns Election Night

WARNER BROTHERS will be one of the principal sponsors of one of the most elaborate radio broadcast features on Election night, November 6th, when a coast to coast hook-up of the Columbia Broadcasting chain will be used to give election returns from all parts of the nation in combination with entertainment by Vitaphone stars. This feature will go on the air at 8 P. M. and continue until 2 A. M., a total of six hours of broadcasting.

The radio time taken by Warner Brothers in this event will be divided with the New York World and other big city newspapers, which will supply the election figures and results. Vitaphone entertainment will go on every other fifteen minutes, with the intervening periods devoted to election returns under the auspices of the newspapers.

From the standpoint of the picture people, this broadcast is perhaps the most elaborate publicity and exploitation event thus far employed. The program will be heard by millions, and it is expected that theatres throughout the country, where radio is used as an election night attraction, will be tuned to the Warner program.

In addition to the radio publicity a large amount of newspaper exploitation will accrue to the Warner Vitaphone pictures through announcements and advertising that will be used in advance by the newspapers to be represented in the broadcast. A large amount of space no doubt will be consumed by these papers in exploiting their own connection with the event.

Jacksonville Scouts Walk Mile to See "Moran of Marines"

THE Boy Scouts of Jacksonville walked a mile to see "Moran of the Marines" at the Florida Theatre there, and in so doing they gave Manager Guy A. Kenimer one of the best ballyhoo parades the town has ever seen, mainly because they carried signs which left no doubt as to the purpose of their march.

The Boy Scouts, 100 in number, were lead by their bugle corps and proceeded to march through all the principal streets in the business district on their way to the theatre and during the time of day when most people were on the streets.

The boys also carried three double-faced banners that could be read coming and going. The banners were spaced at different intervals; the first one carried copy reading, "Richard Dix and Ruth Elder in Moran of the Marines." The second banner read, "Starting Tomorrow" and the third, "Florida Theatre."

The parade was staged the day before opening of picture. A similar parade on the second day of picture's engagement at which time, the marchers kept on marching until they were comfortably seated inside the theatre to see the pictures themselves.

A tie-up was secured with the Marine Recruiting Station whereby the Marines erected a small booth in front of the Post Office and passed out heralds containing copy about the title of picture, name of theatre and play dates.

Jersey Circuit to Conduct Harmonica Contests

Elaborate preparations for a series of three Juvenile Comedies-Harmonica Play ing Contests are being made for each of four theatres of the Lou Gold Theatrical Enterprises, which operates theatres in northern New Jersey. D. Green, manager of this circuit's Liberty Theatres of Irvington, N. J., is supervising the work. In addition to the Irvington Theatre, the Gold Circuit houses participating in these events will be the Cameo Theatre at Nutley, N. J., and the New Grand and Robert Treat Theatres of Newark. When the local contests are completed, it is planned to conduct an inter city contest between Irvington and Nutley. The staging of a more pretentious series of contests later in the circuit's most important house, the 2,000 seat Rivoli Theatre in Newark, is also contemplated.

Mr. Green plans to conduct these contests for three consecutive Saturdays beginning October 20. At Irvington, the co-operation of Mr. Philip Le Boutillier, Superintendent of the Department of Public Recreation, who has had experience in organizing harmonica bands, has been promised.

Decide "More Advertising" in Cure for Show Ills

The perplexing question of what can be done to increase the attendance at theatres was discussed at a meeting of exchange managers, salesmen and bookers at the Summitt Theatre, Kansas City suburban house, the other day.

The conclusion was unanimously agreed upon. "More advertising" was the solution, it was decided. In small towns of Kansas there are many motion picture theatres using as much as one-half page of newspaper advertising and doing enough business to warrant that much expense, it was pointed out. Examples of several Kansas City suburban houses recently had increased their advertising space, both in newspapers and billboards, was referred to. Fair trade practices and the discouragement of "knocking" rival product also was urged by those attending the meeting.

Model Planes Displayed in "Lilac Time" Lobby

A lobby display that enlisted a lot of local interest and considerable local pride was used as an exploitation feature in a campaign for "Lilac Time" conducted by Manager T. Y. Walker at the Noble theatre in Anniston, Ala. The main feature of the lobby display was the array of airplane models designed and made by the youths of Anniston.

In addition to the display, Walker tapped the well of local interest through a tie-up with a music store, the cooperative drive being based on the theme song of the picture, titled "Jeannine I Dream of Lilac Time."

Award Buddy Rogers Cup to Stillwell School

Stillwell school of Johnson County, Kansas, has been announced as the winner of the school beautification contest and will be awarded the "Buddy Rogers Trophy Cup" by the Olathe, Kas., Chamber of Commerce, which sponsored the contest in which thirty-two county schools competed. Olathe is the home town of Buddy Rogers, screen star.

Newspaper reviews as a feature of lobby exploitation. Above is display for "The Scarlet Lady" at the Castle theatre, Chicago, showing enlargement of clippings from reviews of the Columbia picture by local critics.

Lam, of Rome, Ga.; Mrs. L. W. Holland, of the Madison Square Theatre, in Madison, Ga.; J. W. Andrews, secretary of Southern Theatres, Inc., Birmingham, Ala.; T. F. Thompson, Palace and Princess Theatres in Cedartown, Ga.

With the W. E. sound installation at Keith's Georgia all major Atlanta theatres now have sound equipment.

Florida

In the recent national contest between District Managers and Managers, Florida came out in the finals with several honors. District Manager Jess Clark, of Publix, captured second prize, winning this recognition of his services in the Florida district. The first prize was awarded to C. B. Stiff, of Texas.

Among managers, the first prize went to George B. Peck, of the Victory Theatre (Publix), while Guy Genimer, of the Florida (Publix), at Jacksonville, won fourth place.

Manager John Thomas, of the Riverside Theatre, a Sparks house, won sixth place, and was highly commended for his work in the Riverside, a neighborhood house.

E. J. Sparks, prominent Florida exhibitor, and Mrs. Sparks returned Monday from Europe.

The Camobello Theatre, an exclusive colored house in the Belmont Heights section of Tampa, which has been dark all summer, was opened last Saturday night with a straight picture program at popular prices.

It is reported from West Palm Beach that the Paramount-Lasky Corporation have purchased a half interest in the Fashion Beaux Arts Theatre at Palm Beach from Stanley C. Warrick, the builder and owner of this fashionable resort theatre. Mr. Warrick will retain the management, it is stated.

District Manager Jess Clark, of Publix, reports that the work of repair is going on rapidly in the district damaged by the recent storm. The Kettler Theatre at West Palm Beach is being rehabilitated as rapidly as possible and is expected to be ready for reopening in 15 or 30 days. The Beaux Arts Theatre at Palm Beach is also undergoing rapid repair. The probable date of reopening this house has not been announced.

It is reported that the Capitol Theatre at Clearwater, Fla., has been taken over by the West Coast Enterprises.

St. Louis

THE Fox Theatre, Aurora, Ill., was damaged about $10,000 by a fire which destroyed the Rialto Theatre building in that city on October 20. The Rialto building was three stories in height and housed six stores, numerous offices and the theatre. The total loss from the fire was estimated at $1,000,000. The origin of the blaze has not been ascertained definitely.

Skouras A stock jumped up several points during the trading of the week closing with October 20 and the final quotation on the St. Louis Stock Exchange as of that date was $51 bid and $54 asked. This compares with an average price of but $38 for this stock a year ago.

St. Louis Amusement A continues in the dumps and remained $20 bid and $30 asked when trading closed October 20. This is many points below the prices offered for this stock a year ago.

The Empress Theatre on Olive street, just west of Grand boulevard, is being fitted up for sound pictures and will open about November 17. Under the new policy the theatre will be known as the Midtown Theatre.

Skouras Brothers Enterprises, owners of the Missouri Theatre, Grand boulevard at Lucas Avenue, have perfected arrangements with the Paramount Theatre, the New Paramount in Brooklyn, N. Y., the Oriental in Chicago and the Michigan in Detroit whereby the master-of-ceremonies in these houses will be sent from city to city at various intervals.

The Progress Amusement Company of St. Joseph, Mo., has been incorporated with $2,000 capital. Stockholders are Edward J. Peskay, 18 shares; Gladys E. Peskay, one share, and William C. Cole, one share.

Tom McKean, president, and Walter Light, vice-president of Progressive Pictures, spent the greater part of the week out in the territory.

Barney Rosenthal, president of Columbia Pictures Corporation, returned October 22 from New York City.

C. T. Lynch, manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and president of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade, returned to his desk October 20 following a brief vacation.

Indianapolis

COLONIAL Theatre, Logansport, Ind., has been closed and work on razing the building has begun. James I. Barnes, owner of the property, has awarded contracts for the construction of a new and larger theatre on the site.

The Lincoln Amusement Company of Petersburg, Ind., has filed papers with the secretary of state in Indianapolis showing the capital stock to have been increased from $25,000 to $40,000.

Surprise, which terrified Mrs. Marion Gilliams, cashier at the Loew Victory Theatre at Evansville, Ind., until she could not move, frustrated the attempt of a bandit to hold up the theatre. As she sat in her cage, the bandit appeared with a revolver hidden under an overcoat and demanded money. She became paralyzed with fright and when some patrons came to buy tickets, the bandit fled.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state here by the J. & B. Theatre Company, 475 Broadway, Gary, Ind. The corporation has an initial capital stock of $10,000 and is formed "to conduct and lease theatres and other places of amusement." The incorporators are Albert Goldman, Harry P. Munns and Jack E. Dwork.

Announcement has been made by Orville Brown, of New Boss, Ind., that he is starting a motion picture show. The theatre will be on State street.

Theatre Projects Announced for Three States

SIX new theatrical projects have been definitely announced for three states, Kansas, Iowa, and Louisiana.

Harry McClure, manager of the Strand Theatre Corporation at Emporia, Kas., has announced the company will build a new theatre in Commercial Street between Eighth and Ninth Streets, in that city. Boller Brothers, well known architects of Kansas City, Mo., have been retained to plan the new house. It will be two-story with basement and seat about 1500 persons. The cost has been estimated at $225,000.

P. W. Sparks of Oskaloosa, Ia., has been awarded the contract to build a new theatre for Elmo Hoffman at New Sharon, Ia. It will be one-story and cost about $20,000.

Construction has started on a new theatre at Belleville, Kas., of which Sam H. Blair will be owner. Pearcy Brothers of Belleville are the general contractors. The plans prepared by Charles W. Shaver of Salina, Kas., call for a one-story, balcony and basement building, 50 by 100 feet of reinforced concrete brick and terra cotta.

Frank Morris has awarded the contract for his new theatre in Cimarron, Kas., to Daulton & Hatch. It will seat 350 persons and cost about $20,000.

Bids will be taken soon on the theatre, store and post office building to be erected in Manchester, Ia., by E. W. Williams. Mark Anthony of Cedar Rapids, Ia., is preparing the plans. The building will be semi-fireproof two story and basement, 80 by 120 feet and cost about $75,000. The Federal Government has leased part of the space for a post office.

Contracts will be awarded soon on the theatre to be erected in Bogalusa, Ia., by Berensen Brothers. Lockett and Chachere, Balter Building, New Orleans, La., are the architects. The plans call for a building one story and balcony 60 by 125 feet to cost approximately $75,000. Equipment for talking pictures and a large organ will be installed at an additional cost of $15,000.

Stanley Co. Building in Philly, New York and New Jersey

THE Stanley Company of America, of which Irving R. Rossheim is president, is now in the midst of a busy period of building. The Mastbaum in Philadelphia is rapidly nearing the finish of construction, the Metropolitan in the same city has been completely renovated, the new Commodore, also in Philly, and the Sedgwick, on Germantown Avenue near Mt. Airy Avenue, are just the Philadelphia projects that the company has in progress.

The Metropolitan has already been opened while the Commodore and the Sedgwick will be opened soon. The Commodore, at 43 and Walnut Streets, seats 1,500 while the Sedgwick also boasts a large seating capacity.

In addition to Philadelphia, the Stanley forces have built a new house in Utica, New York. At Collingdale, Pa., the Villa, in the course of construction, is being erected. This house, in modern French style of architecture, with a seating capacity of 1,000, has necessitated an expenditure of half a million dollars, Mr. Rossheim reports.

Stanley will erect a new theatre in Atlantic City, at Arkansas Avenue and the Boardwalk. The Stanley officials have decided on 5,000 as the seating capacity of this new movie palace. An advance estimate by Mr. Rossheim is $4,000,000 as the cost of the project. It is planned to open the house in the spring of 1929.

The Stanley Company has also put over the Earle Theatre in Philadelphia as a successful vaudeville house, the B. F. Keith in that city having been closed.

Construction Notes and Theatre Openings

The Booker T. Washington, the second colored motion picture house to be erected in Asheville, N. C., opened its doors the first part of last week. The structure housing the theatre cost $82,000 and was constructed by D. S. and N. S. Hildebrand of Asheville. A 42-room colored hotel is above the theatre.

Seating 486, the Booker T. Washington has space for a balcony for 250 additional seats, to be added later.

Evansville, Ind., will have a new $800,000 nine-story theatre and office building in the incompleting Cadie theatre structure, according to plans of the Bowling and Shank firm of architects of St. Louis, Mo., who have taken over the structure. An out-of-town bond issue is said to have been arranged and an agreement made with a local operating company which will lease the theatre for 25 years.

Ground was broken in Bogalusa, La., Tuesday, October 2, for Berenson Brothers' State Theatre, to be built on Columbia Street and to seat approximately 1,500. It will cost $75,000. The building will measure 60 by 126 feet and the theatre will contain a large balcony. The house is expected to be completed by January 1.

Last Wednesday night the Hillside Theatre on Hollywood near Long Avenues, Hillside, New Jersey, opened again after a summer spent in alterations to both the exterior and interior of the house. A benefit performance for the Exempt Firemen's Association marked the opening. The Sobelson brothers, who operate theatre in Elizabeth, Newark and Roselle Park, have leased the Hillside and established M. J. Sobelson as local manager. Kube and Kranixfeld are the owners of the building.

It is rumored that there will be a realignment of the suburban house situation in the Birmingham, Ala., district within the next 30 days. The town, it is claimed, is over-seated and, while the talkie wave persists, many of the outlying houses have suffered considerable loss of revenue.

The Anawalt Theatre, Bluefield, W. Va., was opened on September 8. The house is built on the site of the former Anawalt. Owners are E. C. Rector, Ray Wyland and James M. Woods. The house seats 308 persons and cost approximately $35,000.

"Marriage by Contract"
By Tiffany-Stahl Deals
With Companionate Union

(Specialty to the crowd at the show)
NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Eugene Stahl gave a private showing of their new picture on the theme of companionate marriage, "Marriage by Contract," here today, and it caught the immediate attention and interest of exhibitors.

The picture handled a delicate subject in a particularly able manner and the exhibition here today was a success. The picture is a clean-up for exhibitors and should be a success.

MOTION PICTURES TODAY

Yeah! Box Office!

"Marriage by Contract," the new Tiffany-Stahl special, is a motion picture that may be described as a natural box-office attraction. Its theme is trial marriage and the effective manner in which the disasters of the companionate idea are demonstrated will make it a convincing subject to the general public. The timeliness of the theme is beyond question.

In the picture Patsy Ruth Miller does the finest work of her screen career. With advanced ideas on the subject of marriage she contracts four different alliances and each of these wedded episodes is more disastrous than the previous one. The picture is lavishly produced, with attractive settings, finely photographed and well directed by James Flood under the supervision of John M. Stahl. Robert Edeson is one of the featured members of a strong cast.

"Marriage by Contract" is a success picture and should be a clean-up for exhibitors.

DAILY REVIEW

HERE'S A BET

A screen sensation on the timely theme of experimental marriage is the new big Tiffany-Stahl special "Marriage by Contract," in which Patsy Ruth Miller marries four times in eight reels and gives the audience something with which to bring in the crowd. James Flood directed it under the production supervision of John M. Stahl.

Robert Edeson and other competent players are prominent in a large cast. "Marriage by Contract" is a frank but careful handling of the trial marriage plan showing its working out, its mistakes and disasters.

We recommend this picture to exhibitors as a big exploitation picture.

Marriage by Contract

Good Box-Office Material
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS picture has a moral that women should remain well satisfied with the good old-fashioned marriage ceremony, that precarious as that ceremony is, it will continue to be liberally accepted as the proper and correct standard. However, companionate marriage has become a deal of discussion and because at that there is plenty of box-office material in this feature. It is to be adversely criticised at all, it is because there may be one too many of the marriage sequences.

Patsy Ruth Miller trudges her way sadly through four or five "agreements," each time being satisfied she has hit upon the right man at last. And then she wakes up to find it has all been a dream, that her original companionate agreement with the youth she loves and who loves her has not departed because of a tiff that brought on all the hysteria. But she is smart enough, after all, and so is he, to realize that the old-fashioned marriage ceremony is much the most satisfactory.

Miss Miller is very convincing in the handling of a somewhat difficult role which takes her from the young modernist wife through the various marriage episodes until she comes to the border of middle age and with it there is the desire to retain her youth. It is somewhat a relief to know all of these hardships have not been hers when she awakens from her troubled sleep. Lawrence Gray also does some creditable work, as do the other members of the cast. It is a picture that has quite an unusual appeal and it should do well at the box office.

Drawing Power: The subject is one that has had much attention, and with a well molded story, well done, it promises to click in nearly any house. Exploitation Angles: The companionate marriage subject lends itself to ready exploitation, the good story, the well balanced cast.

THEME: Thoroughly modern girl and youth decide upon a companionate marriage; they quarrel and she leaves in a huff. She drifts from one marriage contract to another, only to finally wake up and realize it has been a dream, which, however, has a happy ending.

Produced and distributed by Tiffany-Stahl. Length, 77:36 feet. Released December 1, 1935. Cast: Patsy Ruth Miller, Lawrence Gray, Shirley Patten, Robert Ellis, Duke Martin, St. Pierre, Clare McDowell, Patsy Latanga. Director, J. Edgar Hoover. Story, J. Edgar Hoover. Continuity, J. Edgar Hoover.

A Picture

EXCITEMENT hit the office a smack last night. It was like this. In came the head reviewer, bubbling over about something or other he had just seen. That, in itself, was unusual. So we inquired what it was all about: Said reviewer had hurried officeward directly after seeing "Marriage by Contract," a Tiffany-Stahl release. Nobody could hold him. We then figured that if this picture was that good, we had better pass on the word as fast as possible.

So we then asked him to point out what the why and the wherefore. And this is what he said—in essence, not in toto, because we had to trim his rave to space requirements:

Built on companionate marriage theme. Shows step by step how modern girl embarks on such a marriage, but how conventions, etc. break it up. She tries it again. It fails again. Big punch is in showing that a woman has no protection in this companionate marriage stuff. The man walks off, picks another gal but the woman is hooked. Age does the trick. A natural for feminine support from all clubs and church organizations.

Very sexy, but discreetly handled by director James Flood, under the title "Marriage by Contract." Class production from a good script, timely theme, enormous woman interest in marriage problems which are dramatized vividly. Worth a saving fight and it was a picture. Tomorrow, and the next, our attention back on it just as it was absent from the screen. We were glad to see it.

WHO'S WHO?

In 1916 the first recognized "Who's Who in the Film Industry," was published by Motion Picture News. It was called "The Studio Directory."

For years it served as an aid to photoplay editors in preparing news sections and as a ready reference in answering questions.

Every subsequent edition increased in service through the helpful suggestions received from the men using it.

A letter giving proof of the fact that the book occupies a prominent and lasting place in newspaper offices:

Gentlemen:

I have been using "The Studio Directory" you issued in 1924 constantly in my work as it gives the histories of those engaged in the industry briefly and covers all salient points.

Yours very truly,

Is It Entertainment?

Sound or Silent, That's the Big Question

By William A. Johnston

SHOWMEN will find a valuable lesson in the fact that, two weeks ago in Los Angeles "The Singing Fool," a sound picture, and "Dancing Daughters," a silent version, ran first for popular favor. . . . The question today, as always, is not: is it a talker? or, is it a silent? . . . The question is: is it entertainment? . . . With the revolutionary advent of the talker, let us not forget some simple truths. . . . Good motion pictures—silent or otherwise—are entertaining. . . . Talk alone doesn't make a picture entertaining. . . . A good talker must be just as artfully made as a good silent picture. . . . At Atlantic City, the other day, I saw successively "The Singing Fool" and "The Docks of New York". . . . Both were enjoyable. . . . It is easily conceivable that the public, broadly, will want to see each. . . .

In "The Singing Fool," moreover, it is quite apparent that pictures do more than words ever could to tell the story and build the characterizations; pictures in other words, skillfully devised, are indispensable to good entertainment in picture houses. . . . If I were an exhibitor and lacked a sound installation today, I would not be buffaloed. . . . A great lot of people today are going to continue to like silent pictures, and maybe, with increased satisfaction. . . . We are going to have, unfortunately, a good many talkers put forth because they contain talk rather than entertainment. . . . from these there is going to be a rebound in favor of the house with good silent pictures. . . .

The more we see of the situation, the more we believe in the deduction of Exhibitor Jarodsky in his well discussed letter previously published, namely, that everywhere there will continue to be a place for the talker house and the silent picture house. . . .

The smaller houses near the larger centres have feared that the latter's talker houses would pull heavily from their small town clientele. . . . That, according to our field reports, has not been true. . . . I might add that our conclusions, as above, are held by a good many exhibitors who call at our office. . . . Some are as anxious as ever to get installations: but they feel now that they can well hold their own until the installations arrive and furthermore that when the latter does arrive both the reproducing devices and the sound pictures themselves will be greatly improved. . . .

True to the tradition of the show business producers are rushing pell mell into talkers. . . . Just as there has been a wave of war, underworld, jazz, etc., pictures because one good one first went over, so there will be talkers just because a Jolson picture led the way. . . . But, talkers or not, they won't be any better than the story, its actors and its technic. . . . and now we've got a brand new technic to learn. . . .

And a word, too, to the electrical giants. . . . Just because a new—and wonderful, device has been added to popular entertainment it doesn't follow that the device will control the entertainment. . . . Animation was wonderful, and so is sound. But the show is still the thing. . . .

The great unknown quantity remains—the public. The public asks: is it entertainment?

Mergers and Salesmen

REDUCED efficiency among film salesmen is an economic menace resulting from recent and current mergers and rumored mergers of producing and distributing companies.

Motion Picture News this week received a letter from a salesman travelling a territory not far from New York for one of the companies whose name has been linked recently with several stories of mergers, changes of ownership and executive personnel. This salesman's frankly expressed opinions and feelings are important to every general sales manager in the business and to every branch exchange manager because, as he says, they not only are his personal comments but they reflect the state of mind and diminishing enthusiasm and confidence of other film salesmen whom he encounters in his travels.

He says, in part:

"Because of the constant shifting of background in the distributing combines, I do not believe a salesman can feel the same enthusiasm for his product and the same confidence in his own future that he previously did. Before mergers were so largely a part of each week's important political news in the business a salesman felt that his product was an individual thing with an individual identity, and permanent in its trademark or trade name value.

"If the big fellows in New York actually knew of the uneasiness, the uncertainties, and the doubts that today constantly beset many of the salesmen traveling for them, they would realize that any reduction in the number of contracts and amount of business in proportion to individual quotas is not entirely a matter of inferior pictures. I know of several instances of fellow salesmen who have become dispirited, utterly without enthusiasm, and who recite their sales rituals with about the same fire and spirit and confidence that

Mr. Televox could give, and all because they feel that their positions with their respective firms no longer are paths of opportunity. Instead, they feel that their positions are merely jobs and that actual or impending changes in company ownership and management may quickly have a personal effect on them.

"Naturally, the men out on the firing line exaggerate possible consequences because they haven't facts or official assurances to contradict their fears.

"If the big guns in New York gave a little more attention to the calibre and bore of their sidearms in the field, I know it would help restore some of the old enthusiasm and confidence and enable us fellows to be much quicker, more confident and accurate on the trigger."

Highlights

WITH the news that the controversy over the Bristolphone device is settled, comes further news that Acoustic Products and its subsidiary, Sonora Phonograph Co. are to acquire the rights and interest of all the parties concerned. . . . A new corporation is to be formed which will license Asher, Small & Rogers, Gotham Bristolphone and the Lesser-Warner Co. . . . Charles R. Rogers will actively manage the new company to be formed, which will combine the Sonora and Bristolphone names. . . . This is an important development in the sound picture field. . . .

Rayart is coming right along. W. Ray Johnston announced this week the news of his affiliation with the outstanding British interests headed by George Pearson. . . . Reciprocity . . . on a business basis. . . . The only reciprocity, as we have maintained, that means anything. . . . A feather in Rayart's cap and a real step toward internationalizing the industry.

A New and Big Event in Trade Journalism

Scenes of World Premiere of "Noah's Ark" in Hollywood Last Night Transmitted by Telephoto and Reproduced in Motion Picture News Today

FOR the first time in the history of the Motion Picture Industry, Motion Picture News presents Telephoto advertising, a brand-new idea in trade paper Journalism.

In Hollywood last night, (November 1), the world premiere of "Noah's Ark" was held with the elite of the Coast present. Today, (November 2), only a few hours after the premiere itself, pictures of the crowds; flash-lights of the celebrities; and comments on this great production by film personages who were there are spread before the industry exclusively in this publication.

This history-making idea was originated by Motion Picture News. The entire service facilities of the large Coast staff of this paper were called into play.

Warner Brothers, the pioneers in talkies, of which "Noah's Ark" is the highest point of achievement to date, availed themselves of the opportunity to pioneer again, this time in a form of advertising that marks a big step forward.

Through the Telephoto and Fotogram processes of Western Union, New York sees today what happened at Grauman's Chinese Theatre in Hollywood last night; and reads, in actual facsimile of their own handwriting, the comments of celebrities as they came out of the house after the premiere.

Sun Arcs Make "Noah's Ark" Premiere Blaze of Glory

Hollywood Ablaze With 92 Lights Trained on Grauman's Chinese; Thousands Attracted Around Los Angeles

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 1. (By Wire) — Hollywood was literally ablaze through the efforts of Warner Brothers and Sid Grauman with the world premiere of "Noah's Ark" at Grauman's Chinese Thursday night. While it is barely possible that crowds equally large in size have turned out to witness former openings here, it is certain that none have ever had the pyrotechnical glory in conjunction with them as that which accompanies "Noah's Ark's" bow to Hollywood's populace. All evening, one hundred and twenty electricians in charge of ninety-two multi-colored sun arcs turned the blackness of night into varied hues of purple, green, red, blue and yellow.

From the windows of the Motion Picture News' office in the Roosevelt Hotel diagonally opposite the Chinese, the milling crowds are visible, being handled by hundreds of reserve police. Traffic for several blocks surrounding the theatre was diverted, only those holding special police badges issued in conjunction with seats were permitted within lines.

Frank Murphy, Warners' electrical genius, is responsible for the display of lights, some of which are planted in Hollywood Hills, a few miles behind the theatre, attracting thousands from all over Los Angeles.

As for celebrities in attendance the only ones not present are either ill, working out of town or don't rate.

Sid Grauman set a new record for himself and Hollywood with a prologue which lasted less than five minutes. It consisted merely of one solo by a boy soprano and one ensemble number by a singing chorus of sixty men and women. This was staged against a beautifully lighted background of ark exterior and interior with Noah and his sons, plus groups of live animals in tableaux for background. Grauman, who is generally credited with being the father of prologues, brought gasps when the curtain was brought down on the tableaux and the picture flashed immediately afterward.

The News has already reviewed "Noah's Ark." Further evidences of the impression it made can be secured from telephotoed statements from celebrities in their own handwriting secured by News representatives as they left the theatre at the close of the performance.

Sound Outdraws Silent Movie In Key Cities—Survey Shows

Average Weekly Figures Far in Excess of Totals for Mute Pictures; Talkies Are Biggest Money Makers

FIRST-HAND survey of key city houses by Motion Picture News this week shows that average weekly grosses of sound pictures are far in advance of corresponding grosses on strictly silent pictures.

This is the situation in general. There are some exceptions, of course, but the supremacy of sound at the box office is clearly established. One significant fact is that the talking picture is definitely the big money-maker. Pictures which are merely synchro-nized with scores, or those which carry sound effects are not in the same class with the talkers.

This is the first survey of the kind ever undertaken by a film trade paper. The results in detail as gathered by the News' own corps of correspondents follow:

INDIANAPOLIS

Box office receipts in downtown first run houses have been boosted 25 per cent to 60 per cent with the inauguration of sound pictures.

Sound pictures of quality make a noticeable showing in business. Weak pictures fail to draw unless they have something besides sound.

Receipts at the Circle jumped from $15,500 with "Forgotten Faces," week ending August 31, to $26,352, week ending September 21, with "Lilac Time." "The Patriot" the following week brought in only $18,246. The Circle stage band policy was abolished with the presentation of sound pictures.

At the Indiana, another Skouras-Publix house, sound pictures have not made a noticeable difference because Charlie Davis' stage band holds up the gross, according to George D. Tyson, advertising manager.

The average at the Indiana was $24,000 with silent pictures and $25,000 with sound.

Wallace Allen, Loew's Palace manager, says sound boosted average from $8,000 (with stage band) to $11,000 (without band). "Dancing Daughters" drew $17,000.

The Apollo, Fourth Avenue Amusement Company house, jumped from $4,000 to $10,000 with sound.

MINNEAPOLIS

Finkelstein & Ruben report that dialogue pictures have greatly increased business at all theatres, in some cases doubling, trebling and quadrupling it. Sound pictures without dialogue have helped greatly in small town theatres and these without regular orchestras, but have improved business little in Minneapolis, St. Paul and other large cities, and in some cases have actually resulted in a falling off of attendance where audiences seem to prefer straight orchestral accompaniment.

Dialogue pictures have been a big smash everywhere. The State in Minneapolis has found them a tremendous drawing card, breaking the all-time record with "The Singing Fool." The Minnesota has shown but one and that to fine business. The Strand's business also has been greatly stimulated.

PORTLAND, ORE.

With sound, the Blue Mouse Theatre has increased box office receipts 50 per cent in spite of the increase in admission price from 25c to 50c. "The Jazz Singer" established the house record of seven weeks. "State Street Sadie" ran five weeks. Hamricks' Music Box, capacity 1,897, now playing "The Singing Fool" is averaging $2,500 daily gross. This house is the remodeled Liberty Theatre, known as dead one year prior to sound installation. "Wings," with sound, at the Broadway, capacity 1800, broke the house precedent of one week runs. The picture was held two weeks extra, performances averaging $2,500 daily. "Lilac Time" failed to draw. The Hollywood Theatre shows 25 per cent increase in weekly gross since sound installation.

The Blight Theatre, Salem, Ore., and Castle Theatre, Vancouver, report thirty per cent increase in weekly gross with "The Jazz Singer."

DALLAS

Sound pictures are boosting grosses at all first run theatres here. The Melba shows an increase of $1500 weekly for sound over silent pictures. The Majestic shows an increase of $1200. The Palace shows an increase of $1400, excluding "The Singing Fool," which grossed $34,000 for the record week's run.

Considering average grosses of all sound pictures against the same number of silent pictures, the increase runs to much larger figures. The exceptional sound picture will gross far more than the exceptional silent, but there is no difference in the grosses of fair sound or fair silent films. Sound pictures are of no more box office value than silents, unless the picture itself is very strong. Sound news reels show no increase unless unusual.

PITTSBURGH

Sound pictures have proved life savers for several first run houses. The five local theatres equipped for sound have all increased business. The most notable success is the Stanley, which opened last Spring and until this Fall when sound pictures were installed, proved a failure. Business has jumped from 35 per cent to 50 per cent. Loew's Penn has installed sound, but it makes little difference as the Penn

Detroit Sound Case Postponed

Robertson Action Involves Delivery of Sound Picture Prints Regardless of Reproducing Equipment

THE case of James N. Robertson, Detroit exhibitor, versus Detroit distributors of sound pictures, an effort to secure sound prints for showings in his Roosevelt and Cinderella Theatres, which are not wired with Western Electric Equipment, was postponed this week by U. S. Circuit Judge DeWitt Morgan's court until November 7, 1928. This was done at the request of the Paramount representative, Frank Eaman, and with the consent of Ralph Routier, representing Robertson, the postponement giving both sides additional opportunity to prepare their arguments.

Robertson, with Roy Johnson, inventor of the Humanphone, charges that a conspiracy exists which seeks to prevent the presentation of certain sound recorded films in houses wired with other systems of sound apparatus than that of the Western Electric Company. For his two theatres he had contracted for Paramount product, and made new contract for a Paramount sound picture, "Warming Up," Robertson stated. When the distributor attempted to withhold service on the sound records, Robertson secured an injunction which won him delivery on "Warming Up" and another Paramount sound picture, "Sawdust Paradise," or any other production which his contract called for.

Other defendants named in the action are Electrical Research Products, Warner Bros., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists, Western Electric Company, the Vitaphone Corporation, Pathe Exchange and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Robertson claims that his device can reproduce sound either by the record method or the photographic process.

"A Woman of Affairs"

Exclusive Review of M-G-M Production

By Earl J. Hudson

Assistant Publisher, Motion Picture News

HOLLYWOOD, October 31 (By Wire).—Michael Arlen's "Green Hat" has been cleaned and re-blocked by M-G-M into an excellent box office model called "A Woman of Affairs". Seen at a Los Angeles preview its audience value was not a matter of personal opinion. Made in a silent version only, it produced its own sound effects of sniffles and sobs in abundance throughout the theatre. Innumerable masculine and feminine noses were blown clean with a frequency that was a great compliment to Clarence Brown's direction and performances by Greta Garbo, John Gilbert, Lewis Stone, Hobart Bosworth, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. and Dorothy Sebastian.

"A Woman of Affairs" illustrates the fallacy of official bans on successful stage plays that are regarded in stage form as too daring or immoral for screen production. "A Woman of Affairs" proves that questionable or objectionable things in stage plays can be treated from other angles without the least offense to decency or good taste.

The production has several situations of excellent subtlety fully equal to Clarence Brown's cleverest directorial touches in "Flesh and the Devil". The story has lost nothing of the dramatic power, fineness of characterization, splendid humanness and great situation suspense of "The Green Hat". On the contrary, the screen treatment at points rates higher in these box-office values than did the stage version. The story is exceedingly well told except for the motivating sequence early in the picture wherein the reasons for the girl's sacrifice were not sufficiently plain to the preview audience, but undoubtedly this point will be clarified before release.

The cast has real super-special proportions in name values. Garbo gives a great performance as Diana Merrick, while Gilbert has a difficult role that he plays to fine sympathetic reactions. Stone, Fairbanks, Jr., and Bosworth are excellent. Dorothy Sebastian makes a comparatively minor part stand out in the finest performance she has ever given. For the first time in her screen career, she looks and acts like a real potential star possibility.

"A Woman of Affairs" hasn't the slightest offensive situation. It points a worthy theme presenting two sharply contrasting kinds of honor. It is a great bet for girls and women especially. With the known popularity of productions that have irresistible effect on the tear ducts, this one should be billed "B. Y. O. H." or "Bring Your Own Handkerchiefs". If this production is sensibly appraised, the only ban possible on "A Woman of Affairs" is where city ordinances ban standing room in theatres.

In and Out of Town

MICHAEL J. GOURLAND, president of the Affiliated European Producers, Inc., arrives Friday of this week aboard the Mauretania after a ten-weeks' visit to Europe in the interest of opposing further restrictions on American films. While abroad he also lined up the Affiliated program which he will announce shortly.

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY, president of F.B.O., left New York City last Wednesday, October 31, for a visit to his company's studios in Hollywood.

LARRY DARMOUR, president of Darrow Productions and vice-president of Standard Cinema Corporation, arrived in New York last week. Since his arrival he has been in conference with J. I. Schnitzer, senior vice-president of F.B.O. Darrow recently completed 48 two-reel comedies.

ADOLPHE OSSO, managing director of the Paramount organization in France, and Henri Klarsfeld, sales manager, arrived in New York on Wednesday, October 24, for a conference with E. E. Shauer, general manager of the Paramount foreign department, regarding distribution plans for the coming year.

TEXAS GUINAN, who spent the last two weeks in Hollywood working on "Queen of the Night Clubs" for Warner Bros., returned to New York last week.

H. M. WARNER, president of Warner Bros., has arrived in Hollywood from New York. He will spend several weeks in the movie capitol conferring with J. L. Warner on details concerning the company's schedule of films.

CARLOS JIMENEZ, Latin-American sales representative for Pathe International Corporation who recently completed a deal with F. H. Knocke for bookings of the complete Pathe product in Cuba, the Virgin Islands and elsewhere, sailed last Saturday on the Siboney of the Ward Line for a five-months' sales trip in southern territories.

M-G-M executives leaving for the coast this week also include Louis B. Mayer, vice-president of the company, who plans to stop off for a day at Washington on the trip back; Al Lewin, scenario editor; Frances Marion, scenarist, and Robert McGowan, director for Hal Roach.

E. W. HAMMONS, president of Educational, left last Saturday afternoon, October 27, on the Twentieth Century for Los Angeles on his regular visit to the Educational studio.

THOMAS MEIGHAN, recently signed as a Warner Bros. star, left New York this week for French Lick, where he will spend the next few weeks reading manuscripts with George Ade for his forthcoming vehicle. Accompanying him on the trip were Mrs. Meighan, Mrs. Raymond Hitchcock, Mrs. Sam H. Harris and Mrs. Earl Ballan.

JOSEPH LEVIGARD, Universal director, arrived in New York last Saturday enroute to Germany, where he will direct for Universal at their studios there. He sailed on the Columbus Wednesday at midnight. He is accompanied by Robert Stumar, cameraman, and Robert Surtees, assistant. In London he will make tests for an English star to play the lead in his productions. He first plans to visit his home in Frankfurt, Germany, before starting work.

Too Many "Sound" Experts? Hollywood Wondering

Is All the Expense and Fuss Over Sound Stages Really Necessary?— Studio Officials Divided in Opinions

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.—A rapidly growing belief that "technical experts" and "sound engineers" are not quite as expert nor as sound as they should be, is spreading among studio executives. Where, a few months ago, producers rushed to secure services of synchronization authorities and burst into print with the $250,000 and $500,000 sound stages they were going to construct, studio officials are now beginning to wonder whether all the expense and fuss over sound stages is really necessary.

One of the major causes for this unrest and loss of faith is the success of "The Melody of Love" made by Universal. Another is the different opinions given by the experts in different studios. No two seem to agree on specifications or dimensions for the construction of sound stages. Very few of them seem to be willing, if they can, to explain just why a sound stage must be so much-by-so-much and just why one commodity must be used in more or less profusion than another. Either the explanations furnished have been too technical for producers to understand, or actually too vague for comprehension. The fact remains that many producers are expressing their newly created doubts loudly and far from incoherently.

"How was it," ask a few, "that Universal, without a sound stage or any so-called 'expert,' was able to borrow a bit of Movie-tone apparatus from Fox, and with only one microphone, make a seven-reel feature which is cleaning up? Universal at that time had no quarter million dollar building for recording scenes. It had no monitor room or apparatus running into thousands. Yet the picture has been recorded capably and is meeting with audience approval.

"If these men are actually experts, why don't they agree on the best composition for sound stages. Allowing for the fact that circumstances alter cases, that locations may require some difference, there hasn't been enough similarity in sound stages outlined in different studios to secure one general standard. Surely there must be one."

Other producers point to the fact that Warner Brothers have been operating without any especially constructed quarter million dollar stages heretofore. Conceding that Warners are now building special sound studios, they still want to know how it is that Warners are converting silent stages in use for years for sound purposes, and have evidently been more than successful in making their Vitaphone features.

The general attitude is such as given above, a Motion Picture News representative found in a general canvass. One executive who apparently has no fears and has all confidence possible in his method, is M. C. Levee, of United Artists. He stated:

"The Electrical Research studios spend over $15,000,000 yearly in experiments. They are really the only authorities we have to go by. Hence it is economy in such an instance, to go ahead with their advice

—even if they are wrong! The industry has had similar conditions to contend with in other matters and should know by now. In the past they've hit up against directors who have said that this-and-that is absolutely necessary to make their pictures with. They've employed cameramen who have insisted that so many lights were positive requirements. Scenarists have said flatly that it would be impossible to put a story in 500 scenes and must have 800 scenes.

"The only thing for the producer to do, in the case of sound experts, is the same course they had open regarding directors, cameramen and scenarists. Go ahead with their advice, and if they prove wrong—get others in their place."

After leaving Mike Levee, the Motion Picture News reporter spoke to several others. To one producer he quoted some of the statements made by Levee.

"Yes, Levee is right in much he says," drawled this executive. "But tell me, is it necessary to spend a quarter of a million for a building in which to experiment? Can't these same experiments be accomplished in a laboratory 20 feet square and get the same results? You must realize that this is one industry which is giving carte blanche regarding expenses. It is of no use to abuse the freedom of funds."

Meanwhile the sound stages are still being constructed in practically all major studios. But a lot of thinking and conferences are going to be held before plans for new ones are announced or determined.

Remote Previews Now in Force Producers Comply with Exhibitors' Request That Shows Be Held Far as Possible from Los Angeles

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.—As a result of a protest and appeal made recently by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Southern California, producers are now holding their studio previews as far from the environs of Los Angeles as conveniently possible. The protest, filed recently by the exhibitors, pointed out that studio previews, as held in and about Los Angeles, not only hurt the exhibitor but the producer as well in the long run.

Fox is now taking productions for "audience reaction" far from the view of picture-wise Los Angeles preview fans. Last week "The River" was brought as far as Fresno for preview. Fresno is almost 200 miles from Los Angeles. Universal is taking previews to its house in Santa Ana, about 45 miles away.

In a statement mailed to producers and trade papers, the exhibitors recently asked the cooperation of all in doing away with the "preview evil" as it exists in Los Angeles. Their claim was the producers were not getting genuine reaction, since L. A. Fans have become thoroughly "picture-wise" to the extent where they "shop" for previews before entering their neighborhood theatre. This has also injured business in all neighborhood houses.

"Such exhibitions," say the exhibitors, "constitute violations of every subsequent run contract in existence held in the area in which the preview is held. Further, if a preview is held in a theatre other than the one holding a first run contract, that first run contract is also violated and the business of that first run theatre damaged."

Other statements by the M. P. T. O. of Southern California are in part:

"The purpose of a studio preview is now being defeated through its concession to box office by excessive and advance exploitation.

"Established studio preview theatres subordinate their current attractions, however fine, by overemphasizing for the purpose of capitalizing on your experiment.

"Once characterized as a 'preview house,' such a theatre upon finding its public responding only when a preview is announced, resorts to subterfuge in providing a similar stimulant, by securing unreleased subjects from an exchange, and serving this hoax to its public. . . . The showmanship which should have been applied to the current attraction is prostituted . . .

"On Trial"

Exclusive Review of Warner Talkie

By Edwin Schallert

Editor of The Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 31 (By Wire).—Warner Brothers could have hardly picked a more sure-fire subject for talking pictures than "On Trial," courtroom melodrama by Elmer Rice which they have refurbished for present audiences with a cast led off by Bert Lytell, Pauline Frederick and Lois Wilson. It is certain of big appeal at all theatres that synchronize. Audiences will like the suspense, drama and pathos of this film. One scene alone where a little child, played by Vondell Darr, is on the witness stand testifying is bound to put over a heart tug so that everybody will be talking. This scene has the best recording of a child's voice that I yet have heard.

The picture is a straight depiction of trial for murder interspersed with cut-backs to happenings related by witnesses. The stage play from which it is adapted used this cutback form some fourteen years ago and scored a great success by quickly moveable settings which permitted words of testimony to be transformed into enacted scenes. "On Trial" has made an excellent use of screen technique and recording dialogue in renewing the tenseness of the original. Furthermore, the verbal battles of attorneys (played by Richard Tucker and Jason Robards), the presenting of their cases to jury and the examination of witnesses have been carried out in interesting detail. One gets a feeling of being present at an absorbing criminal case, in addition to beholding events in reality that lead up to it.

The minor roles sometimes almost take precedence over major ones. A bit of outstanding excellence is played by Johnny Arthur whose theft of a big sum of money from the murdered man complicates the unraveling of the court tangle. Lytell as the accused has a splendid voice and Lois Wilson is keenly dramatic on the witness stand. Fred Kelsey contributes humor as clerk of the court. Miss Frederick disappoints a little in the vocal medium, though the final scenes are exceptionally well done. The child, Vondell Darr, comes very near being the star. Direction by Archie Mayo is quite evidently capable.

English Producers Dined by U. A. Executives

At an informal luncheon on Tuesday, October 16, the heads of St. George's Productions, Ltd., the English company which made "The Three Passions," were the guests of United Artists executives. The visiting officials included Alex de Wichfield, president of St. George's Productions, and Captain Alastair Mackintosh, production and general manager of the same company.

They came to America several days ago and while here they are preparing an international exploitation campaign on the production, which was made by Rex Ingram.

In addition to Messrs. de Wichfield and Mackintosh, prominent figures at the banquet included Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president and foreign distribution general manager for United Artists, and Al Lichtman, vice-president and general manager of distribution in the United States. Others present were: Paul Burger, Victor Shapiro, Paul Lazarus, Bruce Gallup, Sumner Taylor, Thomas Patrick Mulrooney, Earl J. Denison, Joseph Burger, W. H. Miller, Charles E. Moyer, Fred Schaefer, Ed Finney and Norris Wileox.

Keith's Washington Will Close November 10

Keith's Washington Theatre, in Washington, D. C., will close November 10. After having been open for only a few weeks, following a dark summer, the house, which recently went on a continuous basis, posted notices October 29, advising employees of the pending closing.

Keith's Theatre has been one of the high-spots of Washington for some 15 years, during which time it was never dark until last May, when it was closed while an organ and new projection booth were installed.

Fox Linked With New Cincinnati Theatre

Present semi-official reports indicate that the theatre to be located in $7,000,000 building to be erected in Cincinnati will be operated by the Fox interests. Walter H. Ahlschlager, Chicago architect, said to be drawing plans for 40-story building which will have hotel on upper floors.

Theatre Owners Fight Zoning and Clearance

M. P. T. O. of Southern California Contests Plan; Sends Questionnaire to Independent Exhibitors

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.—Independent exhibitors throughout Southern California are being rounded up by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association of that territory in a determined effort to contest the "Zoning and Clearance" plan. A circular letter and questionnaire to all exhibitors has been mailed by the organization with a request for their entire cooperation.

The letter is addressed to "Mr. Independent Exhibitor" and reads:

"This Association is conducting a strenuous campaign in protest of the Zoning and Clearance arbitrarily imposed upon this territory at the beginning of the current season.

"We shall continue aggressively to contest this matter until the desired relief is forthcoming.

"You can help us to help you in a very material way, and it only requires a slight effort on your part.

"We are enclosing a Questionnaire for each one of the theatres you operate and ask that you thoughtfully answer every question and mail back to us as quickly as possible.

"The answers to some of the questions may appear to be very simple and obvious, but do not discount them for that reason.

"If we have overlooked what you believe to be the important features of this matter, please provide your comments and information in detail on the reverse side of the Questionnaire.

"Yours for the perpetuation of independence.

The Kenmore, A New K-A-O Theatre

An important new theatre project of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Circuit was launched with the formal opening of the Kenmore theatre in Brooklyn recently. This playhouse occupies a prominent location in the Flatbush section, a populous and rapid growing residence and business district. The Kenmore has a seating capacity of 3,000. Interior views of this playhouse are shown on this and the following page. Above, the inner lobby with stairway leading to the mezzanine.

Sound Supplants Trade Names as Sales Point to Exploit Audible Screens

Policy to Prevent Confusion in Public Mind Looms As Important Factor—Was Recommended in Original Publix Manual

WHILE engineers have been getting results in steady improvements of the apparatus for recording and reproducing synchronized sound with pictures, and the studios have made giant strides in the development of a new technic for this amplified medium of dramatic expression, the theatre men have been equally alert to the need for an operating code for efficient and successful showmanship in the exploitation and presentation of the audible photoplay and newsreel.

It is only a short time since the first attempts to plot a course to be followed in exploiting sound pictures was made by theatre executives and advertising specialists. Yet since that time great progress has been made in the direction of a standard method of procedure based on the best traditions of showmanship as applied to a new proposition in motion picture entertainment. The experimentation of the leading theatre circuits was shrewdly calculated to set a general course in the right direction, and it is notable that the experience gained during the past several months has wrought no fundamental change in the formula as originally laid out by the pioneers in this branch of exploitation strategy.

In proof of this remarkable fact we may compare the first edition of the sound picture sales manual prepared by Publix Theatres advertising and exploitation department with what is being done today at the leading show houses operating a "sound policy." This Publix manual, by the way, is perhaps the first comprehensive work devoted specifically to the exploitation of sound pictures to be compiled by either distributor or theatre operator.

The manual was prepared for the use of managers of the Publix theatres by Lem Stewart, advertising manager, and his staff: Kenneth Long, Gus Grist, George Planck, Rodney Bush, Earl Long and Theodore Ferro.

A second edition of the manual—which was issued July 6, 1928—is, in essentials, little more than an amplification of the original, though the revised manual offers a digest of the most successful campaigns put on by managers of the Publix theatres to exploit sound installations and attractions having sound as their principal element of appeal.

A striking example of foresightedness is provided in the advertising policy set forth in the manual in reference to the use of trade names of the various systems of recording and reproducing as a means of conveying the "sound" idea to the public. With the rapid increase in methods and trade names identifying them, the theatre men are presented with a problem of keeping the issues clear and preventing confusion in the minds of the public to whom they are selling their sound installations and pictures. On this point, the Publix manual offers the excellent advice contained in the following extracts:

"In the final analysis, what you are selling and have to sell the public are pictures with sound. It is the element of sound added to formerly silent movies, that doubles your potential business. It is sound and all that the term 'sound' implies, which brings new patrons and old ones more frequently to your theatre. The idea of selling 'sound' then, is the idea of major importance. After the inauguration of your policy, such terms as 'Movietone' and 'Vitaphone' are of minor importance except as these names may be used to identify a better or distinct quality of sound reproduction.

"There are other mediums of sound, 'Photophone,' etc., etc., etc. Use such trade names for all they are worth in your inaugural campaigns. But from that point on, don't yourself be confused. And do everything you can to keep your public from becoming entangled in a lot of trade names presumably synonymous with sound."

The application of the policy set forth above will prevent a situation in which many theatre men now are beginning to find themselves, much to the disadvantage of their position with regard to the popular conception of sound presentations. And with the mounting list of trade names referring to specific methods of sound synchronization the problem promises to become even more complex and disconcerting.

The experience of more than one theatre testifies to the advisability of taking the policy advocated by the Publix manual as a guide for the general plan of the advertising and exploitation which the theatre shall do in its efforts to realize the full potentialities of sound installation as an institutional feature.

A complete treatment of all branches of exploitation for sound installations and sound pictures is embraced in the original manual. Publicity is covered in a wide range of newspaper stories, informative, but dealing in a general way with the methods of recording and reproducing, and program readers. Advertising is illustrated with reproductions of specially drawn ads for announcement purposes and the stressing of sound as a marvelous feature of particular attractions. Exploitation suggestions likewise range through the several avenues of publicity by means of music store co-operation, window displays, railway company tie-ups, special newspaper sections hailing the new equipment to the theatre, lobby and front displays and street ballyhoos.

FROM time to time, Mr. Stewart and his assistants, issue supplements to the manual, these usually covering particular phases of sound picture exploitation as developed by theatre men of the circuit. One of the most recent issues deals with a highly important feature of "sound" campaigning. This concerns the difference between the campaign for sound pictures as an innovation in the locality and the campaign for a theatre with a new installation in a town in which sound pictures have been introduced by an earlier installation at some other house.

The two types of campaign are admirably set forth in outlines of two campaigns, one of each type, employed by Publix Theatre managers. The campaigns reviewed were staged in Omaha, by Manager Milton Korach of the Rialto Theatre, and in Tampa, Fla., by George Peck, manager of the Victory Theatre.

In Omaha, Vitaphone acts and Movietone had already been seen and heard at an opposition theatre, while the Victory Theatre was introducing Vitaphone for the first time in Tampa.

The sales arguments stressed by Korach for the introduction of sound at the Rialto were:

1.—That his theatre was offering a complete Vitaphone program, with his feature picture synchronized to a 100 piece orchestra. (Heretofore Omaha had only seen and heard Vitaphone acts.)

2.—In a subtle way, to impress his prospects that his equipment had all the improvements, that it was the most modern, and therefore better than that which Omaha theatregoers had come to know through their attendance at the first theatre to bring sound pictures to the city. The line "The Perfect Vitaphone" appeared in nearly all his advertising.

A similar policy to this was followed by other theatres in the Publix chain. The B&K houses in Chicago, for ex-

Strong Film Speed Indicator

Design New Speed Indicator for Sound Film Projector

AMONG the projection accessories given new prominence owing to requirements brought in by the sound pictures is a film speed indicator designed for the greatest accuracy and visibility. The effective synchronization of music or speech demands absolute control of projector speed.

It is not surprising that a projectionist impressed with the necessity of combining the two essentials of accuracy and visibility should design the latest speed indicator to be introduced on the market. This indicator is the Strong Film Speed Indicator, recently perfected for distribution through the National Theatre Supply Company, by the Essannay Electric Manufacturing Co., well known as the makers of the Strong Change-Over Device.

The new Strong Film Speed Indicator is calibrated to show both number of film feet per minute and the minutes consumed per thousand feet of film. The dial is lettered in clear numerals and is easily read at a glance from any angle.

The working mechanism of the indicator head is manufactured exclusively for the Essannay Electric Manufacturing Co. by one of the largest makers of speedometers and similar merchandise. It can be readily adapted to installation on any model projector. The purchaser indicates the type of machine he is using and the Strong Film Speed Indicator comes to him ready for immediate installation on his particular model of projector.

It is as nearly fool-proof as any mechanical device can be and is constructed for years of reliable use. Its accuracy is guaranteed.

The development of the new film speed indicator marks a definite contribution to the further perfection of sound pictures relying on synchronization with the projector.

Electric Heater of Special Design for Ticket Booths

A SMALL electric heater has always been found very desirable in the box office of a theatre, due to the fact that the general heating system does not extend to this part of the theatre.

There has been a demand for a heater which is perfectly safe in its operation so that it would be impossible for a fabric to catch fire due to accidental contact.

The Prometheus Electric Corporation has developed a ticket booth heater suited to the purpose. It is compact, 12 inches long, 12 inches high and 4 inches wide. It is rated at 660 watts. The heater is completely enclosed in a sheet metal case. It is so designed that no part of the heater reaches a temperature sufficiently high to cause burns or to be dangerous to inflammable materials.

Prometheus Electric Heater

An on and off switch is built into the case. It comes complete with 6 ft. of cord, so that it may be plugged into any convenient lamp socket.

Perfect New Type Projector Fire Extinguisher

AFTER extensive experimental work engineers of the Pyrene company have perfected an automatic projector fire extinguisher in which Pyrene Liquid is used.

The device is designed to deluge Pyrene Liquid under pressure into the several compartments of the projector, smothering the fire, instantly a fire occurs in the machine.

The new extinguisher, recently placed on the market is said to reduce to a minimum the footage of film destroyed by the fire and prevents damage to the projector.

The Pyrene Fire Extinguishing liquid used does no damage to the film or projector. Film used in a Simplex projector for the experimental work has been set on fire twenty-five or more times, and still there is no evidence of the projector having been on fire. The device is constructed for use on a Simplex projector only. It can be recharged in a couple of minutes.

Builds Portable Reproducer for "Unwired" Theatres

They say necessity is the mother of invention. And that is amply proved by the way R. H. McCullough, West Coast technical expert, under supervision and direction of President Franklin, solved the problem of supplying effects for "Wings" in those houses not equipped with sound installations.

McCullough conceived the contrivance, to reproduce phonograph records. An operator is stationed at the machine during the time of operation and each pickup has a separate push button mounted on the control panel, so that cues may be picked up immediately.

The four turntables operate together or individually and the pickups mounted on the records are kept on the records at

Manufactured Weather in Winter

Some Suggestions for the Showman in Connection with the Proper Operation and Advertising of Air Conditioning Equipment

THE passing of Summer and approach of the Winter season, with its promise of competition keener than ever before, brings to the showman of sound business judgment a new realization that patronage depends largely upon conditions of healthful comfort within the theatre.

Showmen, therefore, would do well to look to their air conditioning equipment as a very definite and important medium for increasing patronage and box office receipts.

Manufactured Weather A Boon to Patronage

The theatre-going public is recognizing and patronizing those theatres which make adequate provision for their health and comfort, and are avoiding, whenever possible, the unconditioned theatre. Patronage once lost is extremely difficult, perhaps impossible, to regain.

Create a Consciousness of Comfort

Owners of Carrier Conditioned Theatres have complete and properly installed air conditioning systems, capable of maintaining ideally comfortable and healthful conditions throughout the house every day in the year, regardless of outside weather conditions. It is up to those owners, therefore, if they would make the most of their opportunities, not only to provide for their patrons the most healthfully comfortable conditions possible, but to see that their Carrier Systems are exploited to the fullest extent.

Check Your System Now

To owners of Carrier Conditioned Theatres we recommend an examination of the Autumn and Winter conditions maintained in your theatres. Are you operating properly the equipment in which you have invested? What is the temperature? What is the humidity? And, above all, are your patrons comfortable?

Tell Your Patrons

Out front ballyhoo as an advertising medium, if properly handled, is not a passing whim. It has already proved its worth in many of the Carrier Conditioned Theatres throughout the country. Signs, but not of the side-show variety, displayed out front, in lobby or foyer, may be used to announce to your patrons that you have provided Manufactured Weather for their health and comfort. The beautifully executed bronze tablet shown in the accompanying illustration will serve as a permanent announcement to your patrons and will be presented, upon request, to the owner of any Carrier Conditioned Theatre.

Trailers may be run occasionally, calling attention to the scientifically conditioned air within the theatre. Dignified announcements on the back of your program may also be used to good advantage. If your claims are true the audience will be led into a consciousness of comfort and will remember it.

Cooling Required in Winter

The air conditioning problem in Winter, when the theatre is well filled, is still one of cooling rather than of heating. This is evidenced by the fact that in most un-conditioned houses during the Winter it is invariably too hot, too stuffy, too draughty. This nearly always means an ill-smelling, enervating, dangerously contaminated atmosphere. The correctly air conditioned house, however, can provide for its patrons the ideal combination of temperature, humidity and air movement which is conducive to the maximum state of comfort for the average person. See that your engineer is instructed not to overheat the house—then watch the saving in fuel.

Through long research it has been found that a temperature of approximately 70 degrees F. with a relative humidity of from 35 to 40 per cent. is most practicable and comfortable. The air should be clean and washed or filtered to protect the health of patrons and to preserve the beauty of the decorations and draperies. The proper quantity of conditioned air should be carried to and distributed uniformly throughout every part of the building, without draughts.

Correct air conditioning, producing these results, can be obtained only from a correct installation of equipment which has been designed and installed to meet the individual needs of each theatre, and which is properly operated by your engineer.

If your theatre is NOT Carrier Conditioned, or if you are contemplating the construction of a new house, now is the time to have our Engineers call and present to you the essential facts underlying the successful application of Air Conditioning to the Theatre. Ask, too, for the Book, "Theatre Cooling and Conditioning."

Theatre Building Business Map

Including Analysis of Key City Attendance Averages

Above Average Business	AA	Very light new construction
Average Business	A	Light new construction
Under Average Business	UA	Moderately heavy construction
		Heavy new construction

The map of the United States shown here is divided into seven territories, with colored shading indicating the division of new proposed theatre building as represented for the period from September 15th to October 15th. This new construction is represented in valuation of dollars and cents rather than number of projects.

The shading is in four densities; solid, which represents the greatest value of proposed theatres; heavy stipple, which is second in valuation of new construction; medium, which areas represent conservative building; and the very light areas, where the investment in new theatre projects is very light. The information used in compiling the statistics visualized by the map was obtained through several reliable sources, and the map is to be considered as very nearly accurate in representing comparative theatre building activities in various sections of the country.

The circles shown on the map are located in key cities and illustrate averages of theatre attendance during the period from September 15th to October 15th, 1928. The diagrams indicate the relative attendance at the first-run theatres in these cities during the period covered. These are given by "averages," with symbols to indicate "Above Average" and "Under Average" box office returns. The term "average" as applied in this survey indicates satisfactory box office returns, based upon theatre expectancies, which, in turn, are governed by past earnings under similar or nearly similar conditions.

These attendance statistics were compiled from an analysis of the Key City Reports, published weekly in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and other sources of information gathered by this publication.

IT has been our pleasure in the past to report exceptionally heavy building with very few exceptions, in our monthly reports for the year of 1928. In practically every instance the reports were well above the average required to give a total greater than the original estimate for 1928 building as given in our survey of December, 1927. However, for our September 15th to October 15th report, this succession of heavy building reports is broken as in this thirty-day period 38 new projects were reported calling for a total investment of only $5,484,000 with a total seating capacity of 47,100. Furthermore, only one of these projects will require an investment of over $500,000.

While the total number of projects is not materially less than the figures of some of the previous reports, yet the amount of investment is considerably less; in fact, it is only slightly in excess of 50 per cent of the amount reported for August.

These figures seem to further emphasize the tendency in present-day building in investing a moderate amount per theatre—a change which we noted sometime ago in our reports. In using the above figures, it is found that the average house for this thirty-day report calls for an investment of $144,000 and an average cost per seat of $116. However, the average seating capacity is not materially less than other reports, the figure being 1,240.

While this drop in investments in new theatre properties would tend to show falling off in theatre building, yet, when it is considered that the cost for the average seat has been reduced, it is shown that the additional seating capacity being added for this thirty-day report ranks well with the past programs. It is simply a matter of economizing on putting money into the actual building and so constructing theatres on a more moderate scale for smaller towns and neighborhood sections.

Speeding Planes rushed the plans

AT 2 P. M. Wednesday the telephone rang in the Chicago office. Los Angeles was on the line. "We want complete organ specifications by tomorrow night," they said. They had in mind a large unit orchestral organ, one of the biggest ever to be built, for a 2,000-seat theatre. This was no small task!

Twenty-eight Hours Later

Chicago 'phoned headquarters at Lima. A special airplane was chartered and late that afternoon, with detailed specifications on board, the plane hopped off for Chicago to connect with the westbound air mail. At 5:45 Thursday evening the plans were in Los Angeles, twenty-eight hours after the inquiry was received at the factory! A modern epic of business!

For Catalina Island

The organ was built—a de luxe instrument, one of the finest of its kind, similar to the marvelous Page Unit Organ which daily delights radio listeners everywhere from Station WHT, of the Radiophone Broadcasting Corporation, Wrigley Building, Chicago. This new Page achievement was ordered by the Santa Catalina Island Company for the beautiful theatre at Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, Calif., one of the properties of William Wrigley, Jr.

About the Page Unit Organ, Mr. Wrigley recently wrote: "It is not necessary for me to hear the Page Organ as there is one in the Wrigley Building which goes out over the radio every day. "I know the Page Organ is a good organ and have an idea it is possibly the best."

Complete Orchestral Organ

Four manuals, 1,500 pipes and all the tonal varieties of a large orchestra distinguish the Page Unit Organ built for Mr. Wrigley's Catalina Island theatre. It has such stops as the brass with copper bell saxophone; English post horn of 16-foot range on the pedals; 16-foot French horn of 85 pipes; two tibias of special scale.

In the reeds are included the kimura, trumpet, tuba horn, vox humana, clarinet, oboe, sousaphone and saxophone. A special Page flute stop combines into one stop five families of flute.

Master Achievement

There are also in this huge organ, a master xylophone and large marimba band. Other percussions are the glockenspiel, orchestra bells, harp, chrysoglott and chimes, all of Deagan make. Truly this organ can be said to be a master achievement. Throughout it reflects the ability of Page to serve every theatre requirement with superb workmanship. Careful attention to details and the use of only the finest materials are unchangeable elements of the Page code of craftsmanship. Learn today what Page can do for you. Learn why Page always means marvelous tonal quality, instant response and dependable performance. Page architects are glad to give their advice without obligation.

The detailed reports on the building for this report, by territorial divisions, are as follows:

The Middle States lead, with a total investment of $2,320,000 to be invested in 14 new theatres, one of which will cost over $500,000. The total seating capacity for these theatres will be 16,700, while the average cost per house figures out $165,700, seating 1,190, and giving an average cost per seat of $139.

West Coast States rank second with a building program costing $1,043,000, which will build 8,150 seats to be incorporated in 8 theatres. The averages for this section are $130,000 per theatre, seating 1,020 and $127 cost per seat.

The territory ranking third is the North Atlantic States, where $1,000,000 will be invested in 7 theatres with 12,400 seats. The average cost per theatre will be $143,000 with 1,770 seats at an average cost per seat of $81.

South Western district reports a relatively heavy program where $720,000 will be invested in 5 new projects seating 6,400. The average cost per project is $144,000, seating 1,280, with an average cost per seat of $112.

The other territories call for negligible programs.

Canada has two new theatres projected which together will cost $235,000, and will seat 1,600.

New England will have only one new house, costing $150,000 and seating 1,400, while the Western States report one small project of $16,000 and 450 seats.

No new building is reported for the South Eastern territory.

A new state takes rank as the leader in new building for this report—Kansas with three new theatres costing $800,000 and seating 5,200.

California is second, where 5 new theatres will cost $760,000 and will seat 5,600.

Indiana will have 3 new houses which together will seat 4,500 and cost $625,000.

Ohio also has 3 new theatres reported which will cost $560,000 and seat 3,900.

Pennsylvania takes last place among the leading states with 3 new theatres seating 5,000 and costing $550,000.

A factor which may have a direct bearing in the falling off in new projects for this month is the extensive remodelling and renovating programs which have been announced by many theatre circuits and independent houses. Whether this tendency to remodel theatres, already in operation, has been caused through competition with new theatres recently constructed in the territories where the old theatres have been operating, or whether the explanation lies in the appreciation that exhibitors give to the fact that up-to-date theatres are required to attract a gain in patronage, cannot be ascertained from the data at hand. However, in any event the remodelling and renovating schedule that has been reported for this thirty-day survey has been exceptionally heavy.

The sales of all types of equipment, excepting the installations which are used exclusively by the million dollar theatre, show an increase over the previous month. This increase may be explained in part by the renovating and remodelling program creating a heavy demand for new equipment.

One of the outstanding features in the sale of equipment for this last thirty-day period has been a tremendous stride made by the manufacturers of apparatus for the reproduction of music accompaniment and sound effects for theatres. A great many of these equipments sold have been the non-synchronous type, though heavy deliveries have been made by the Electrical Research Products Corporation and also more recently, the Photophone Corporation. If the cost of these installations were included in our estimate of the total amount being invested in equipment, undoubtedly this total would show a record for all times.

THE general tone of theatre business over the country is very good. Though estimated here entirely by the attendance records at the first-run houses in key cities, the strength shown by these houses may be accepted as reflective of general business, and in support of this view there are reports which show that the smaller towns are enjoying prosperity wherever local and individual conditions are such that the theatre, by reason of proper bookings and efficient management, is not so handicapped as to be unable to take advantage of potential patronage.

A glance at the map shows that but one key city in the number reported on is rated at Under Average for the period September 15th to October 15th, that city being Tampa, which naturally felt the effects of the hurricane which swept the state of Florida at the beginning of the period we are covering. For the rest the great majority are at average for the season, and that means flourishing business.

A COMPARISON of the current map with that of last month shows the following:

Upward changes are Albany from Average to Above Average, and Los Angeles from Under Average to Average.

Changes downward are Baltimore, Chicago, Dallas, Kansas City, Minneapolis, New York and Oklahoma City, all from Above Average to Average; and Tampa from Above Average to Under Average.

Fifteen cities are static, four at Above Average—these being, Portland, Ore., Salt Lake City, Boston and Cleveland—and ten at Average rating, the latter being St. Louis, Philadelphia, Seattle, San Francisco, Atlanta, Birmingham, Cincinnati, Des Moines, Detroit, Indianapolis and Pittsburgh.

The check-up of the leading attractions at the key city theatres for the period gives first place to "Wings," with "Our Dancing Daughters" running a very close second. "Wings" only recently become a general release, and the interest built up for it by road show presentations again proves that road shows for a picture that has the ability to legitimately live up to that standard in no way lessens its value as a general release. Some years ago there was an agitation against this method of presentation, some exhibitors claiming that the distributors should give them for regular release the bigger pictures instead of scooping the cream off them by road showing. MOTION PICTURE NEWS made a survey of the situation and summed it up in an interview with J. J. McCarthy, who handled the only real road show attractions developed up to that time. These were "The Birth of a Nation," "Way Down East," "The Covered Wagon" and "The Ten Commandments." All of these were handled on the road by McCarthy, and all of them were big money getters for the regular motion picture houses which presented them as first runs at popular prices. Thereafter there was less hostility to the "road show," which is something entirely different and apart from the purely "exploitation" run which many pictures have been given. According to McCarthy's definition, a picture is a "road show" only when it has demonstrated that it can play for 30 weeks or more at the so-called legitimate houses in a two-day presentation at a two-dollar scale.

COMING back, for a moment, to "sound" we find that "Our Dancing Daughters" belongs among the attractions which offer synchronization as one of its features, so "sound" may be credited with some of its success by many in the industry. Those who take that view of things would do well to consider one very interesting demonstration, that being the records of the picture at Loew's Warfield theatre in San Francisco and at Loew's State theatre in Los Angeles. "Our Dancing Daughters" established a new record at Loew's Warfield playing as a silent picture, and likewise set up record figures at the Los Angeles presentation, which gave it with the added feature of its synchronized score and effects.

Our "ten best" of the period covered, a regular feature of this report and given to keep the record on pictures in their performances at key cities, to which the report applies, is as follows:

1. "Wings"
2. "Our Dancing Daughters"
3. "The Singing Fool"
4. "The Terror"
5. "Two Lovers"
6. "The Fleet's In"
7. "The King of Kings"
8. "While the City Sleeps"
9. "The Night Watch"
10. "The Patriot"

THE FINAL TEST of any new attraction in the show business lies in the response it receives from the public—in its actual cash value to the exhibitor.

Rarely has a musical feature so widely—so repeatedly—won the enthusiastic reception that has been accorded Orcestraphone.

The consensus of opinion among Orcestraphone owners is typically summed up in these few accompanying statements received from theatres where Orcestraphone is now in actual use. Patronage increases of from 10 to 50 per cent, attributed solely to Orcestraphone, are commonly reported from every section of the country.

Such response only reflects the real merit of the instrument itself . . . Orcestraphone will bring the world's master musicians to any theatre—marvelously reproduced in tone and volume and perfectly adapted to cueing with the picture.

WEST. COAST THEATRE STAR CONTEST

"LILAC TIME" STARTS FRIDAY

HERMIE KING and his band

THE theatre advertisers are breaking ranks from the procession of traditionalists and "joining up" with the parade of the "moderns," with the result that in various parts of the country the amusement pages of the local newspapers are a study in contrasts between the honored styles of the past, interesting examples of what the future may bring, and in some cases, where the intentions are good but the performance is rotten, there are specimens of what look like proofs pulled from a batch of pied type.

Of course, there is no basis for surprise or even of remark that theatre advertising should swing along with the general trend of advertising in all other lines of business—unless it be to remark again as one always remarks about the mazing way in which a new movement gets started by concerted action on the part of entirely dissociated individuals and groups. But the "modernistic" style is all too provocative of the very effects layout men are constantly shooting at to be left out in the cold by any particular advertiser. Again, the prevailing vogue, is a big factor in advertising just as it is in plays, books, food, fountain pens, dress and everything else. The "style factor" we suspect, more than any well defined plan to develop better advertising along modernistic lines is at the root of the new movement in theatre advertising, judging by the great bulk of the "modernistic" layout work so far used by the theatres.

The reproductions of some recent newspaper layouts for metropolitan theatres make this fact evident. There are one or two samples of rather excellent work in layout and some promise that the theatre men will grasp the real potentialities of modernism in art as an effective instrument of advertising.

In the strict sense, the modernistic style cannot be attained by the use of rules or even cuts of jig-sawed all-over patterns or conventional photographs. But for purposes of novelty both of these things, combined with blocks of type set off at angles in opposition to illustration or decorative rules, have been found effective and will be employed to even greater effect as time goes on and the layout men become more imbued with the true spirit of the modernistic style.

For the reason that a truly modernistic illustration employing a photograph as the major feature of the design must be modernistic in the original or capable of being made modernistic by retouching, it is too much to expect that any great amount of thoroughly modernistic advertising will be found among the productions of the average theatres. The theatre men are greatly dependent for their illustration material upon the distributing companies, and the still photographers at the studios are too busy shooting away at trick ideas done in the obvious way to be getting anywhere along newer lines of photographic technique.

Whenever anything new becomes a temptation simply because it is new, it is always well to get back to the a b c's of the proposition and discover just what the new tool is supposed to accomplish, and to make use of these issues and principles as a pattern for the proper employment of a new method.

In general effect the high priests at the altars of advertising art and science, have been telling us that the layout must conform to the laws of vision, first. That having that quality which attracts the attention of the reader, the curiosity of the reader must be aroused; that copy, or illustration, must then satisfy curiosity and his interest in details of the proposition must be stimulated so he will continue on through the ad to get all the information the advertiser seeks to convey.

Just how any of those ideals are to be achieved by the use of a layout which merely is striking because it is grotesque or an obvious attempt at departure from the conventional way of doing things while it adheres to convention in doing its work after it has caught attention, it is difficult to understand. Much more puzzling is the notion—which arises when one regards some of these attempted modernistic ads—that the value of an ad is increased by meaningless decoration shot through with sudden angles which lead the vision everywhere except into the spot where the meat of the ad is located. Those modernistic ads which are highly effective are the work of the artist much more than they are the achievement of the layout man, and it is the art of the illustration much more than the composition of the ad which makes for the striking effects gained with this style of display.

An interesting layout in the modern style for "Caught in the Fog" as the feature presentation at the Newman Theatre, Kansas City. Reduction of this three-column display to the size shown below robs the display of the clear, readable appearance it presented in the original.

One of the most common faults of the theatre advertisement is that there is too much material crowded into the ad. The whole bill, and every detail of every element of the bill, frequently seems so impressive to the theatre manager that he shoots the whole works and lets the various features fight it out for prominence in the display. The result of this method is a display thick with ink, heavy with illustration and in the altogether little more than a blotch in which every item blurs into the next and fights the reader instead of accommodating him with ideas and facts which might sell him the show.

The efforts at a modernistic style of display as so far revealed make it appear that this old fault will be greatly off-set by the newer methods. The easiest way to get what may be considered an approach to the modernistic style is to set off rules or designs which produce sudden angles, against a liberal ground of white space. And therein lies the factor which may convert theatre men as a whole to the use of white space as an effective element of the display.

Modernistic designs have distinct advantages for the advertising artist. In the first place the theory behind it all is to produce ideas by means of designs. Consequently the modernistic art has more sparkle and spontaneity, because as opposed to the conventional method of presenting facts according to established notions, the new style seeks to express facts and familiar objects in a fresh dress and in a condensed form. The new gives more play to the imagination, is lighter and less labored in its address to the interest of the reader.

But for the very reason that the modern style seeks to convey familiar objects in an odd or fanciful or fresh way, there is danger in it for those who do not grasp the spirit of the style or possess the flair for invention and creation which it requires.

Unless the designer uses forms which produce mental images nothing is gained by putting angles, contours and planes at odd places here and there about the illustration or the composition. The use of lines, angles or light values for the purpose of interrupting the vision and leading the eye from the novel idea employed to attract attention to the message of the ad is one thing. It is something entirely different when these sudden angles are put into the display for no better purpose or reason than to make the ad "look modernistic." The same result in negation of every principle of good advertising follows the use of hand lettering, which goes to extremes of oddity in the mistaken idea that departure from the usual alone is sufficient to produce the "modernistic" effects.

Keith Memorial Theatre New Boston Land-Mark

WITH the opening of the $5,000,000 B. F. Keith Memorial Theatre at Boston this week, another step in progress has been made by the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Circuit in the construction of modern theatres, for in the care which has been taken in providing for the comfort of artists and employees, this theatre shows a great advance over any other theatre in their more than seven hundred playhouses. It was designed by Thomas W. Lamb, architect.

Erected as a memorial to his late business partner, E. F. Albee has given personal supervision to the new structure. As the late B. F. Keith was the "father of vaudeville," so the new Keith Memorial Theatre will continue to be "the home of vaudeville." It is in keeping with this "home" idea that the new theatre is more unique.

The "back stage" of the Keith Memorial theatre is more like a hotel in appearance than a theatre. There everything possible for the comfort and happiness of the artists and the employees have been provided. Each will have a private room, beautifully furnished, with private bath and shower. There is a large waiting room, a gymnasium, handball court, billiard room, nursery fully equipped with toys and in charge of a trained nurse, a complete electric laundry, complete electric kitchen, a barber shop and a beauty parlor. There are private elevators running from the basement to the sixth floor.

Trained animal acts have come to be of such importance that a special room for the animals has been provided beneath the stage, also equipped with a huge bathtub in which even the largest of the animals can take a dip after the show.

The ivory and gold decorative scheme which has become characteristic of the Keith-Albee theatres, is used throughout the new theatre with touches of light blue here and there in the murals. The house is carpeted in black and gold; the upholstery is of deep red and gold and the theatre decorations are of ivory and pure gold leaf, thousands upon thousands of dollars worth of it. There is no gilt paint in the theatre, every bit of gold work being of gold leaf.

Three years have been consumed in building this 2,900-seat theatre, but art works which are placed in the theatre have been in process of collection from all parts of the world for a score of years.

The policy of the theatre is different from any in operation in New England. From Mondays to Fridays, inclusive, all seats will be reserved. On Saturdays, Sundays and holidays there will be no reserved seats. From Mondays through Fridays, inclusive, there will be two shows daily but the feature picture will be shown twice at each show, that is, the program will open with the feature film, then will follow the vaudeville, six acts, and short subjects, and the feature picture will then be repeated. The same routine will follow the evening performance. On Saturdays, Sundays and holidays the show will be continuous with three complete shows. There will be no morning show. Doors open at one and seven o'clock. The top is $1.00 with a 75 cent matinee.

Henry Taylor, who was for some time at the Empire Theatre at Lewiston, Maine, is the new division manager and will make his headquarters at the new theatre. Harry Browning, who was for a time at the Publix Fenway Theatre in Boston and has been in charge of exploitation for Publix Class A theatres, is managing director of the new Keith Memorial Theatre, with Frank K. Eldridge, formerly with Publix in Maine and New Hampshire and who recently opened the new J. J. Ford Theatre at Auburn, Me., as house manager.

The Keith Memorial Theatre occupies a spot which has been used as a playhouse for more than a century. It was erected on the site of the old Boston Theatre.

Three entrances have been provided to the Keith Memorial Theatre, one from Washington street, one from Mason street and one from Tremont street, where a foot subway passes beneath Mason street to the theatre.

DIRECTIONAL Signs like Lighting Fixtures are an essential part of Theatre Equipment that go to make the modern show house what it is today—a place where every effort is made to care for the comfort as well as the entertainment of the patron.

Care should be taken that Directional Signs should be so designed and placed as to lend charm and grace to the place of amusement while at the same time conveying the desired information very plainly but under no condition should they be so bold or glaring that they become obtrusive or in bad taste.

Naturally, the Directional Sign must follow or harmonize with all other architectural treatment of the Theatre. They should be so distinct and entirely clear as to meaning, without being so pronounced as to detract from any purely decorative feature. They should contribute to the interior harmony without assuming undesirable prominence.

The Directional Sign is unique and may be so designed as to fit in harmoniously with the decorative scheme so as to have a real artistic value as well as a service requirement.

As a patron enters the Theatre Lobby or Foyer, the Directional Signs should be placed so that they are perfectly legible at all times. If the Ladies' or Men's Room is placed at the end of the Foyer and the patron must walk towards it to enter the Auditorium, then the recessed type of sign should be used if the structural conditions will permit, otherwise the exposed box type will be needed. But where these rooms are on the side of this passage, where patrons must pass to enter the Auditorium, it will be necessary to use a type that would extend out over the door and be of either the single or double-faced type depending upon whether it is desired or necessary that the Sign may serve its purpose from one or both sides.

A sign showing a lady seated at her vanity suggests the Ladies' Room while another showing a man enjoying his cigar

in "American" Chairs

Number 4072—3300 of these chairs were installed in the Chicago Theatre. Appropriately beautiful to match the unusual splendor of the Chicago. Mahogany wood parts, rose and gray figured velour back, and dark red upholstered Moroccoline seat. Noiseless ball bearing hinge insures silent and easy up and down seat movement. Comfortable, enduring and pleasing to the eye.

EVERY NIGHT . . . in 12,434 theatres the country over . . . and in every nation of the world . . . 24,968,436 theatre patrons are seated comfortably in "American" chairs. An amazing total that proves the universal response of the theatre-going public to comfortable, attractive seating. Further . . . the exclusive use of this company's seating by the nation's greatest exhibitors amply demonstrates "American" stimulus on box-office receipts.

Commerce Report Shows Gain in Equipment Business

The Department of Commerce announces that, according to data collected at the biennial census of manufacturers taken in 1928, the establishments engaged primarily in the manufacture of theatrical scenery and stage equipment in 1927 reported products valued at $5,745,472, an increase of 60.6 per cent as compared with $3,578,210 for 1925, the last preceding census year.

This classification covers establishments engaged primarily in the manufacture of scenery for theatres, halls, and schools; advertising curtains; stage hardware and equipment; floats for street pageants, etc.

Of the 39 establishments reporting for 1927, 10 were located in New York, 6 in California, 5 in Illinois, 4 in Ohio, 3 in Missouri, 3 in Oklahoma, 2 in Minnesota, and 1 each in Iowa, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Oregon, Pennsylvania, and Texas.

Study Management Problems at Theatre School

For the past few weeks Manager John D. Howard of the Rialto Theatre, Omaha, has been conducting what he calls an Usher School. At these informal meetings, where attendance is voluntary, Manager Howard instructs his men in the different phases of the show business.

That the meetings are a success is evidenced by the fact that Richard Speigle, one of the ushers, was inspired to arrange a tie-up of his own initiative with the leading cab company in Omaha to advertise the Warner Brothers picture, "Midnight Taxi."

Manager Howard comments: "A tremendous interest has been taken by the ushers and some splendid stunts and tie-ups have been arranged on coming attractions."

Arrange to Give Returns as Election Night Feature

With a man whom Albany claims as its own running for the presidency of the United States on the Democratic ticket, every motion picture theatre in Albany and Troy, with the possible exception of one or two small and rather isolated houses, will announce election returns on the night of November 6. Greater preparations have been made for the reception of such returns than in any other campaign. Intense interest is being shown by the public and theatre owners figure that thousands will flock to the houses rather than stand in the streets to receive the returns. This will be particularly true in case of inclement weather. Many of the bigger houses, including Harmanus-Bleecker Hall, in Albany, and the Proctor theatres in Albany and Troy, will stage an extra show starting at 11 o'clock on election night.

Harmanus-Bleecker Hall will use not only a special wire service but also will supplement this by announcements received direct by radio while a special messenger service will bring to the theatre the results from Albany's wards. In Troy, Jacob Golden, manager of Proctor's theatre, and a former newspaperman, has completed arrangements for a service that will be fully the equal of any newspaper.

At the Troy theatre, Walter Roberts has made special arrangements for the reception of election returns, which will be announced from the stage. Even small neighborhood houses in Albany and Troy, are installing radios, by which they will furnish election returns.

Offers Prize for Best Song About Home Products

An ingenious method of capitalizing on local drive was evolved by Nate Frundenfeld, manager of the Capitol theatre in Des Moines, where a "Know Des Moines Products Week" was featured by local merchants and business organizations.

The management of the Capitol announced that prizes totalling fifty dollars would be given to winners of a contest to find the best song on Des Moines products. The winning song also was to have its first public rendition by the Capitol theatre orchestra.

It Pays to Protect Your Theatre Organ

Organ protection is vital to longer organ life. Smooth even heat, combating cold and dampness, is essential if you are to maintain your organ properly and inexpensively. This applies to all organs for none can stand sudden temperature changes or changing climatic conditions.

EVENHEETERS are essential in your organ chamber, for this organ protection. If you are a theatre owner you'll save many times their cost in saved maintenance bills. If you are an organist your organ music will always be in tune and proper pitch. And if you are an Architect the lowered maintenance costs and general satisfaction all concerned derive from the use of EVENHEETERS will be a direct reflection on your ability to select the proper kind of theatre equipment.

The coupon on the bottom of the page will bring you our new booklet on EVENHEETERS. Many helpful suggestions are found there and everyone interested in the organ and organ welfare should write for a copy. Clip the coupon today and we will mail your copy at once.

Rents "Night Space" in Downtown Store as Stage for Mechanical Display

Through an arrangement with a business concern, Marsline K. Moore, manager of the Joie theatre in Fort Smith, Ark., made use of an upper-story window for night-time display which in many respects improved upon the majority of exploitation ideas of the routine sort. Moore used his idea to exploit his presentation of "Dancing Daughters."

Moore picked a busy corner to put on his act where plenty of people passed daily and nightly. The display was a silhouette of a girl dancing and was worked in the following manner:

A piece of unbleached muslin was stretched over a window on the second floor of a prominent ladies' ready-to-wear store and inside the building—way to the rear of this particular window—was placed a high powered spot lamp. Between this lamp and the muslin, the services of two local dancers were secured to put on solo acts; each taking turns from 7 to 9:30 in the evening.

A radio loud speaker attached to a phonograph furnished the music for the dancers as well as attracting attention of the people on the street.

Alongside of this window was a large illuminated banner giving the announcement of the title of picture, name of star and theatre as well as play dates.

The stunt was used the three nights during play dates, and on each occasion it attracted so many people that the traffic officers were given a new beat in keeping traffic going in front of this place.

Directional Signs—Purpose and Place in Theatres

By S. L. Furry

ette naturally leads one to the Men's Room.

Exit Signs may be plain and simple, or of a decorative character, and follow along the lines of the Ladies' or Men's Signs, but must conform to local requirements as to color of glass, size of letter and positioning of Sign while at the same time fit into the architectural treatment.

Where Signs indicating the aisle numbers are necessary, these should be placed over the door and designed so that they can be read from either a front or side view.

The panels in all Signs can be of red, green or white opal glass with appropriate and harmonious decoration either etched or painted on them, while the metal frames and supports should in all cases be designed to carry out in detail the same architectural period as may be followed throughout the entire theatre.

Finally, Directional Signs should be so designed and embody all that may be desired in an atmosphere of good taste, culture and refinement—a wordless picture and a service feature combined—and contributing largely to a decorative scheme that is pleasing and harmonious and lends cheer and comfort to patrons, employees and the management.

It may be also worthy of note that this very desirable feature may be accomplished with an additional expense that is almost negligible.

What to Expect from a Projection Lens

A lens can only produce on the screen, that which is registered on the film.

The following are the four qualities—and the only four—that a projection lens can give to the projected image. They are identical with the characteristics of the CINEPHOR Lens.

1. Flatness of field
2. Maximum illumination
3. Clear definition
4. Contrast between black and white

When you have a CINEPHOR you have a lens that possesses these qualities and that will faithfully reproduce the film image.

We will gladly send you further information on the CINEPHOR. Just send your name and address.

Capacity Houses!

SUCCESSFUL theatre managers know the power of electric advertising in helping to fill "those vacant seats."

Flexlume displays are ideal for the purpose. They emphasize by day as well as by night, the theatre name, location and current attractions to the thousands up and down the street.

There is a Flexlume Display to meet every need—exposed lamp, glass letter, neon tube; interchangeable glass letters to feature current attractions; then there are marquee signs to flood the theatre approach with light; projecting signs, dominating the street with their spectacularity; roof-top displays, too, that can be seen all over the city.

Let us make suggestions as to how to "draw the crowds." We will mail you free booklet "Theatre Electric Displays," and also submit a color sketch of a display to meet your needs. Write FLEXLUME CORPORATION, 1858 Military Road, Buffalo, N. Y.

all times when sound effects are being used. Sound records include American airplanes, German planes, machine guns, big guns, falling planes and many other effects.

"We have found it difficult to teach men to operate sound effects backstage," McCullough says, "and follow the picture, which is the only other way we could have supplied effects for 'Wings' in houses other than those wired. We find in most cases that these hand-made effects are always late, but with our new type of equipment the operator follows the cues closely and is never late with the action."

The equipment weighs approximately 300 pounds and is easily transported from one place to another. It may be installed in any theatre in ten minutes, and can be taken out just as quickly. The machine is not only good for sound effects, but also for orchestrations, organ solos and anything in connection with music or sound equipment.

Many experiments have been carried on to develop this equipment so that the sound effects would be equal to those produced with synchronized pictures.

All-Sound Policy Winning Favor at Florida Theatre

The Florida theatre in Jacksonville, Fla., one of the most recent of the Public houses to abandon stage bands and presentations in favor of an "all sound" program, is reported to be realizing highly satisfactory results with the new entertainment policy.

"The Wedding March" and a group of sound short subjects ushered in the new regime. The theatre drew capacity crowds the opening day of the "whole show on the screen" policy, and newspaper as well as patron comment was enthusiastic regarding the change in the style of shows.

"Talk" Substituted for News Idea in House Organs

Ideas regarding theatre house organs are undergoing a change as a result of sound pictures. Such titles as "News-ette," "Movie News," etc., are going out of date and the word "talk" is becoming prominent in names for programs. The Liberty theatre in Olympia, Wash., now offering sound pictures, has launched a house organ which bears the title "The Movie-Talker," and features the slogan "Our Screen Speaks for Itself." The bulk of the space in the Liberty program is devoted to extolling talking, synchronized and "effect" pictures that are in prospect for the house.

Broadcast of "Singing Fool"

Popular Radio Feature

Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" is the first Vitaphone picture to be broadcast to radio audiences in its entirety. This was accomplished recently in Erie, Pennsylvania, where the picture had its premiere at the Strand Theatre.

At 9:45 in the evening, "The Singing Fool" was put on the air direct from the Strand through Station WEDH and the listeners-in were treated to Al Jolson singing his hits and to hearing the complete Vitaphone synchronization. The announcer at WEDH spoke from time to time, explaining the progress of the story between the song numbers and helping to make the whole picture comprehensible and entertaining to the radio audience.

WEDH and the Strand subsequently received a large number of letters which proved that the stunt was well worth while and was a decided success from every angle.

Stanley-Press Name Contest Brings 30,000 Suggestions

Announcement is made by the Stanley Company of America that the new theatre being erected by the company at Penn and Beatty streets, East Liberty, Pittsburgh, will be known as the Enright theatre, in honor of Thomas Francis Enright, a Pittsburgh boy, who was one of the first three American soldiers to pay the supreme sacrifice in the World War.

Of the 30,000 suggestions that were made for a name, the successful suggestion was made by only one person, John L. Schaffer, a personal friend of "Tom". Enright, and to Schaffer goes the $150 cash prize offered to the winner of the name contest, conducted by the Stanley Company and the Pittsburgh Press.

It is interesting to note that fifty persons suggested the name Keystone; one thousand persons suggested Highland, and fifty suggested Stephen C. Foster.

"Sound" Preferred to Trade Names in Ad Campaigns

ample, used the line "perfected sound pictures" in much of their advertising to exploit sound installations at houses in a city where "sound" was more than a year old. Properly handled, this implication of improvement of the new installation over the old of the town, is perfectly legitimate and effective, but to be good practice and generally profitable this angle must be sold by implication, because direct comparison seeking to prove that the older installation is inferior has the usual effect of implanting suspicion in the public mind.

The Tampa campaign followed the usual line of operation advocated by the Publix manual. It was an excellent example of that style. The advertising flashed "Vitaphone" in all newspaper ads, and the marvels of the new invention which has given voice to the formerly silent drama were stressed in ads and publicity. The campaign also built up an interest in the future of listing in the newspaper ads the names of such stars as Al Jolson, Elsie Janis, "Whispering" Jack Smith, Van and Schenck, Marion Tally, and the other "names" which the talking pictures have brought to the screen from the high places of vaudeville, musical comedy, opera and the concert stage.

Promotion for Several West Coast Men Announced

Close upon the heels of announcement that Herschel Stuart, Seattle Division Manager for West Coast, had been appointed general manager of the Poli circuit of theatres in New England, and the appointment of Charles M. Thall to fill Stuart's Seattle post, comes word of other West Coast promotions within the ranks.

Phil Phillips, publicity man at the T. & D., Oakland, becomes manager of that theatre, stepping into the shoes of Robert Harvey, who succeeded Frank Whitbeck as director of publicity and advertising for the San Francisco Division. Whitbeck now heads the publicity and advertising department for the entire West Coast chain.

Theatre Firm and Union Cannot Come to Terms

Due to the inability of Fitzpatrick and McElroy and the musicians' union to reach a satisfactory agreement, patrons attending the theatre firm's houses in Michigan City, Ind., are being served their movies sans musical accompaniment. Orthophonic instruments are being installed to fill the need and tentative arrangements have been made for the installation of talking movies. The Fitzpatrick and McElroy Theatres in Michigan City include the Tivoli, Starland and Willard.

The breach with the musicians occurred over a dispute arising when the old contract expired on September 15. Recently the directors of the local union submitted a new contract calling for a seven-day week with the usual Sunday matinee, but it was rejected without a counter proposal being offered.

Reformers Defeated in Ill. Town by Large Majority

The citizens of Urbana, Ill., on October 23 routed the Ministerial Alliance and others of the reform element who sought to continue a city ordinance which prevented Sunday amusements. The vote was 1225 votes for Sunday amusements and 1119 against them.

Several weeks ago Urbana's twin city, Champaign also voted in favor of Sunday shows.

The ministers two years ago defeated Sunday amusements in Urbana, which is the seat of the University of Illinois.

Even Biblical Dramas Are Taboo in This Blue Town

On complaint of a minister and a Sunday school superintendent, the manager, cashier, projectionist and four ushers of the Leroy Theatre, Portsmouth, Ohio, were arrested when the initial flash of a Biblical picture was shown on the screen for a Sunday performance. The seven alleged violators of the Ohio blue laws were taken to police headquarters, and released on $100 bonds.

Charges Fly in Lowell Managers-Police Tangle

As a result of complaints brought against Lowell, Mass., police by some of the theatre managers, that policemen would come into theatres, remain for protracted periods and would frequently disturb the shows, police have countered with complaints against some of the theatres alleging violations of the provisions of their licenses. Because of the interest in the case it is probable that state licensing officials will be asked to pass upon the case.

Bandit Plunders Earle in Washington of $2,760

Receipts of the Earle Theatre, Washington, D. C., for October 28, prepared for deposit in the bank, found an unexpected resting place early the following morning when an unmasked bandit walked into the office of Manager Harry E. Lonmeyer and shortly thereafter walked out again, richer by $2,760 in bills.

Warner Studio Exercises Strict Ban on Writers' Representatives

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 30. The Warner Brothers ban on business representatives of writers was extended to the First National studio this week, several agents being refused interviews and told that the studio would deal with clients direct.

Meanwhile, a similar ban which existed at the Fox studios has been greatly modified and in most cases lifted entirely.

Rayart in Production Pact With British Company

In Conjunction With British Screen Productions Johnston Co. Will Make 9 Features in U. S. and 3 in London

AT a dinner at the Motion Picture Club in New York last week in honor of a visiting film man, George W. Pearson, managing director of British Screen Productions, Ltd., of London, Rayart last Tuesday disclosed that a contract had been entered into by the W. Ray Johnston company with Mr. Pearson's company, the contract providing for the production during the coming season of 12 specials, nine to be made in Hollywood and the remaining three at the Isleworth studio of the English organization.

By the terms of the contract the entire dozen will be produced under the supervision of Trem Carr, director-in-chief of the Rayart studio in California. He will go to London to supervise the English-made productions. In Hollywood in May work will be started on the first of the specials, while the three to be cameraed in London will be filmed consecutively in June, July and August, it is said. Production on the Pacific Coast will be resumed after the Isle-worth studio has finished its allotment.

The affiliation also calls for the distribution in America by Rayart of several British Screen Productions, including "The Kohinoor Diamond," and two other vehicles that are to be filmed in India, the first in co-operation with the British government and Indian maharajahs. Another picture that is destined for the Rayart program will be filmed by a unit which left England last week for Lapland where scenes are to be made.

Before sailing for London on the S.S. Olympia on Saturday, Mr. Pearson is completing arrangements for staff representatives in various points in the United States for newsweekly service for his British news-reel.

Mr. Pearson is accompanied on his trip by Arthur Levey, importer and distributor of London. His negotiations have been carried on for several months by David J. Mountain, president of Richmond Pictures, Inc., foreign distributors for Rayart.

Tri-State Association

Theatre Owners of Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas Form Body; C. E. Williams Re-elected Nebr. Head

AT a tri-state convention embracing the theatre owners of Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas held in Memphis, Tennessee, last Sunday and Monday, the Tri-State Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association came into being, with M. A. Lightman as its first president. The headquarters of the new organization will be in Memphis. One of the features of the convention was an address by R. F. Woodhull, president of the national organization of theatre owners. Allegiance of the new body with the national is expected inasmuch as Mr. Lightman is a strong supporter of the M. P. T. O. A.

In addition to Mr. Woodhull, an address was also delivered by Fred Wehrenberg, head of the eastern Missouri and southern Illinois unit.

Officers elected at the convention were: John Collins, Paragould, Ark.; W. F. Ruffin, Covington, Tenn.; R. X. Williams, Oxford, Miss.; J. P. England, Norman, Ark. The first three gentlemen are the vice-presidents, while Mr. England is the secretary-treasurer.

The theatre owners of Nebraska also met in convention during the week at Omaha. They unanimously decided upon the re-nomination of C. E. Williams. At this gathering, Mr. Woodhull, too, gave a talk, speaking in praise of the Toronto convention and the constructive program of the organization he heads. He dealt also with the action taken on labor, music tax, legislations and other situations cropping up in the industry. The convention at the close of his speech pledged allegiance to the M. P. T. O. A.'s program.

Son Born to S. C. Einfeld Of First National

An eight-pound son, Richard, was born Sunday morning, October 21, to Mr. and Mrs. S. Charles Einfeld. Mr. Einfeld is the assistant advertising manager for First National.

Ban On Personal 'Phone Calls, New Ruling

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Oct. 29.—Personal phone calls from the studio by employees have been banned by Jack Warner, head of Warner Brothers Studio. Under the new ruling, posted on bulletin boards around the lot, only a specific group of studio executives can make outside phone calls for business, and all incoming calls are to be confined strictly to business of the company. The telephone operator questions each incoming call to ascertain whether it is for business or personal, and if the latter, no connection is made with the employee being called.

In the Warner general order, employees are informed that pay telephones are spotted generally around the studio, from which personal calls can be made. It is figured that the studio will save hundreds of dollars a year on toll charges and thousands of hours for work instead of personal business by elimination of outgoing personal calls.

Franklin Enroute to N. Y. to Dissolve Publix-Wesco

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Oct. 30.—Harold B. Franklin left today for New York to work out the details of the dissolution of the operation alliance between Publix and West Coast in compliance with the Government's suggestion.

Mr. Franklin says the Publix group of houses will be back under Publix operation about January 1. West Coast Theatres, Inc., will continue to operate Loew's State, Los Angeles, and Loew's Warfield, San Francisco.

"Queen Kelly" Goes Into Actual Production

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Oct. 30.—Contradicting published reports that Gloria Swanson and Eric von Stroheim have split and following many postponed starting dates, "Queen Kelly" went into actual production Thursday morning on location at the old Lasky ranch.

The present schedule calls for completion of the picture by the end of January. Gloria's next picture, "Clothes," is now being written by Harvey Thew.

Brooklyn Vita Plant in Charge of Foy

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.—Bryan Foy left for New York this week, where he will take charge of the Warner Vitaphone plant in Brooklyn. The Warners have decided to concentrate the major portion of their short subject production in the East, giving them greater scope in securing stage artists from New York theatres for sound subjects to be made there.

Larry Ceballos will take over whatever short subject production will be made on the West Coast. Ceballos is responsible for the presentations in the Warner Hollywood Theatre which revolutionized that field on the West Coast.

Ruling On Shooting Theatre Scenes

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.—Union demands that a union cameraman shoot scenes in the Carmel Theatre, Hollywood, for a Clark and McCullough Fox Movietone short held up production of the picture for a few hours, until a union cameraman was installed.

The company, under direction of Ben Stollhoff, had been working at the Fox Studios and moved over to the theatre to get some interiors of a stage and audience. Glenn McWilliams, cameraman of the unit, was not a member of the local cameramen's union. Just as the company was ready to take the necessary scenes, the theatre stage manager checked up to see that all electricians, grips and cameramen carried union cards. When he found that McWilliams was not a union man, he informed him to quit work or all union men would be called off the job. McWilliams argued that he had been employed by Fox Film Company and would take orders from proper executives of that company only.

Union officials were hurriedly called in, and an agreement was finally reached that McWilliams' assistant, a union cameraman, could shoot the picture, but McWilliams could do nothing more than supervise the work. He also was forbidden to even look through the camera lens to check up on correct focusing and lighting of the scenes to be made.

Although open shop regulations prevail in the studios, it was pointed out that the Fox unit, in going into the theatre for scenes, came directly under the rules of the stage hands and other theatre crafts; and the latter were perfectly within their organized rights to insist on union men in those branches of the business that had union locals.

Talkies Start Process of Elimination

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Oct. 29.—The "Talkies" took toll of two in Hollywood's foreign colony last week. Eva Von Berne was notified that her option will not be taken up by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer when the current contract expires in December, and Maria Alba was succeeded in the feminine lead of "In Old Arizona" by Dorothy Burgis, for Fox. The reason for both actions, as stated by each studio, was that the accents of the girls made it impossible to use them in talking pictures. Maria Alba, however, still continues under contract to Fox and will be used in silent pictures. Miss Von Berne has her choice of returning to Germany at M-G-M's expense, or remaining in Hollywood in the hope that she can land with some other company.

Corda Signs 6-Months First National Contract

A contract to last six months has been signed by Maria Corda with First National, the contract carrying an option for renewal. The actress' first role under the arrangement will be in "The Comedy of Life." She will be directed by her husband, Alexander Korda. Leo Birinski and Josef Laszlo, who did the original scenario, are now writing the continuity.

Albany Charters 6 New Motion Picture Firms

The past week brought the incorporation in Albany, of the following companies with the motion picture business as its object, in New York state: Elm Film Delivery Corporation, $36,000, Charles Stern, Benjamin Stern, Benjamin Marks, New York City; C. F. S. Road Shows, Inc., $3,000, Maurice Goldman, Grace Beach, Grace R. Wesp, Buffalo; Martin-Conway Theatrical Productions, Inc., $50,000, and The Real Thing, Inc., $50,000, with William N. Hechheimer, Michael Walters and Belle Jaffe New York City; New Daytona Theatre Corp., $5,000, Howard Lesser, Louis Kessler, Harry Heiman, New York City; M. G. Felder Sales Co., Inc., capitalization not stated, Pauline Shtrax, Matthew W. Rubin, Samuel Landow, New York City.

Cameramen Wondering Who Will Pay the $240

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Oct. 29.—Warner studio cameramen are wondering whether the company will stand the increased rates for their initiation into the newly formed cameramen's union. When the union was in the process of formation, it is said that Warner cameramen were given to understand that they were to keep out of the organization under penalty of dismissal. At that time, initiation fees were $10.

Recently, the Warner cameramen were given to understand that it might be well for them to join the cameramen's union without delay, but now the initiation fees have been raised to $250, and the cameramen feel that the company is responsible for the $240 increase.

Fairbanks Is Re-elected Academy President

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Oct. 30.—The annual election of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences resulted in the re-election of Douglas Fairbanks as president; Frank Woods, secretary; M. C. Levee, treasurer. William De Mille was elected vice-president succeeding Fred Niblo who declined re-election.

The Board of Directors announced that a big dinner would be given November 7 in honor of the visiting British editors who are touring America as guests of the Carnegie Foundation. The elite of the picture colony will attend.

Riesenfeld In Charge of U. A. Sound

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.—Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld officially took charge of all United Artists sound and music synchronization this week, as reported exclusively some weeks ago in the Motion Picture News. Riesenfeld, who returned from New York last week, will make his first West Coast synchronization with D. W. Griffith's latest production which is now known as "Masquerade." There is still a possibility of this title being changed. While in New York Riesenfeld synchronized "Two Lovers," "Tempest," "The Woman Disputed" and "The Awakening."

J. R. Freuler Returning to Production Field

With the production of "Take the Heir," final scenes of which are now being shot along New York's waterfront and Broadway, John R. Freuler, former president of Mutual and treasurer of the American Film Company when they were important factors in the motion picture industry, is back again in the field of film production. Mr. Freuler, who has until recently confined his film activities to financing and exhibiting, is now coming east from the coast to decide on pending negotiations for the American and European release of his feature.

Edward Everett Horton and Dorothy Devore are co-featured in "Take the Heir," being directed by Lloyd Ingraham from a story by C. N. and A. M. Williamson. Titling was recently completed on the coast.

B. W. Wooley Is Made Aide to G. E. Quigley

Formerly a member of the legal department of Western Electric, Burgess W. Wooley is now assistant to George E. Quigley, vice-president of the Vitaphone Corporation, having been appointed to that post last week.

For several years prior to his connection with Western Electric, Mr. Wooley was manager of a large sugar plantation in Cuba. He is president of the Argentine-American Chamber of Commerce, an organization whose primary purpose is the building of better business relations between the United States and Latin-American countries.

Publix Operating Miami Theatre Group

Under the terms of an arrangement recently concluded by Frank J. Dowler, Jr., southeastern division manager of Publix Theatres Corporation, and Harry Leach of Miami, Fla., Publix has taken over the operation of the large group of Miami theatres owned jointly by that organization and the Leach interests. The arrangement provides that the Leach interests will operate the realty holdings involved in the deal.

W. E. Drumbar, formerly district manager for Publix, has become city manager for Miami under the new arrangement.

British Motion Picture to Be Made in Austria

As a result of the recent affiliation of the Sascha Film A. G. of Vienna with British International Pictures, Ltd., the president of the British concern, Mr. Maxwell, has spent the past week in Vienna in negotiation with the Sascha Film A. G. looking towards the production of a number of British pictures to be made in Austria in which the English star, Betty Balfour, will play the title role, the department of commerce, Washington, D. C., is advised by Assistant Commercial Attache John A. Embury.

Subtitle—"I'm so furious, I can't think of the French word for roue—but that's what you are."—by George Marion, Jr., in "His Private Life" for Paramount.

Warner Directors Handling Dialogue for First National Features

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 30.—Warner directors are now directing dialogue for First National productions which are being disc-recorded in the Warner studios.

Howard Bretherton is now doing the talk scenes in "The Barker" which George Fitzmaurice directed.

Pettijohn on Arbitration

In Address Before Women's Clubs He Also Dwells on Sex Films and Censorship of Screen

COVERING various phases of the motion picture industry in an address made before the Federation of Women's Clubs of Nebraska and Iowa, at Omaha, C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, gave his attention primarily to the benefits derived from arbitration. The other topics he touched upon included the so-called sex-hygiene picture which he vigorously condemned and the comparative purity of the screen when compared to the newspapers.

To use Mr. Pettijohn's own words "the arbitration system in the motion picture industry is, in my opinion, the greatest outstanding achievement in American industry in the last decade."

"Let it be said without fear of contradiction," he affirmed, "that in the more than fifty thousand cases thus disposed of there has not been one instance in any case where there has ever been an accusation or even an insinuation that any individual serving on any board has been influenced in his opinion."

Everyone can agree, he declared, that the motion picture should be fundamentally clean. None of the sex pictures, which he termed as "unfit," are made by any of the producers regularly engaged in the production of motion pictures, he declared. He decried the fact that films of this type often receive the endorsement of doctors, clergymen and social workers, and disputed the reason that the endorsers generally give—that these pictures have a wholesome moral effect on the youth of the land.

A comparison was drawn by Mr. Pettijohn to the state of affairs nowadays when censorship is exercised over the screen and newspapers, books and other mediums of expression enjoy the constitutional guarantee. He asked his audience to remember that the screen does not touch upon murder trials and divorce cases, whereas the newspapers play up such stories.

"Motion pictures are cleaner than the spoken stage," he said. "They are cleaner than the present type of book, play, novel or magazine story." He made a point when he stated that the films are "as clean as the newspapers and most certainly nobody would be foolish or crazy enough to advocate censorship of the press."

World Wide-Ufa Deal

Product of German Company Will Be Distributed by J. D. Williams Organization in U. S. and Canada

ENDING a series of lengthy negotiations, World Wide Pictures, Inc., last week contracted with the German company, Ufa, for the distribution of Ufa's product in the unsold territories of the United States and all of Canada. Kurt Hubert, director of Ufa, and F. Wynne Jones, America representative of Ufa, carried on the negotiations with Alexander S. Aronson, J. D. Williams and Joseph S. Skirboll, of World Wide.

A generous supply of foreign-made productions will be supplied American exhibitors, promises World Wide. Such a deal as the one between Ufa and World Wide make for a closer bond between the industry of this country and that of the continent, it is believed.

Regarding the American public which Ufa will now serve for the first time and the efforts that that company will make to attract and hold both the American exhibitors and fans who see their product, Mr. Hubert said:

"An important business accomplishment, yes, but more important is the opportunity this contract gives us to better serve a new, great and intelligent public. Ufa is already a successful business organization. Besides our Studios, we have one hundred and thirty theatres in central Europe, one hundred and fourteen in Germany alone. We already have distribution throughout the remainder of the world, but our ambition has always been to show our pictures to Americans. We welcome the opportunity this alliance of World Wide and Ufa will give us, and shall do our best to make pictures that will please."

K. L. Burk Becomes Head of "U" Pacific Theatres

K. L. Burk, Pacific Coast theatrical owner and manager, has been named as head of the Universal chain of theatres in Portland and Seattle.

De Forest Wins Suit Against Westinghouse

THE De Forest Radio Telephone and Telegraph Company's suit against the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, involving a patent on a radio oscillating transmitter, was decided during the week in favor of the De Forest interests by the United States Supreme Court. The bone of contention between the two companies is a feed-back patent, now used generally in broadcasting for the purpose of increasing volume through regeneration and sometimes incorporated into talking picture devices for the same purpose.

The De Forest interests will again contend in the near future, the date for their Movietone suit against the Fox-Case Corporation having been specified as November 20, an arbitrary date set by both parties. This case has yet to come into court.

Darby and Darby are representing De Forest in the suit against Fox-Case, the same firm of lawyers and Charles Evans Hughes representing them in the Westinghouse suit. John W. Davis represented Westinghouse.

Columbia Signs Prevost, Cortez and Basquette

Three prominent names were signed last week for two new productions planned by Columbia, one as a special of the modern age and the other as a story of carnival life. For "The Younger Generation" Lina Basquette and Ricardo Cortez have been engaged while the leading feminine role in "The Side Show" has been entrusted to Marie Prevost. Frank Capra is fast lining up his cast for the former production, while Erle Kenton will shortly begin the direction of the latter following the completion of "Nothing to Wear," on which he is now engaged.

Will Try to End Dispute Between House and Union

The differences between the Embassy Theatre and the Musicians Union in San Francisco which have resulted in the strike of the motion picture machine operators at the Embassy may be amicably settled as the result last week of new negotiations begun by two commissioners of conciliation for the Department of Commerce in Washington, D. C., with W. B. Wagnon, theatre manager, and representatives of the labor union. Manager Wagnon explained the theatre's reasons for refusing the demand of the union that it install an orchestra during the conferences at which John C. O'Connell, secretary of the San Francisco Labor Council, represented the musicians. The adoption of a talkie policy by the Embassy precipitated the trouble.

Atlanta Film Board of Trade Re-elects Ezell

At the regular semi-annual election of officers held last Tuesday in Atlanta, Ga., by the Atlanta Film Board of Trade, John T. Ezell, manager of Warner Bros. exchange in Atlanta, was re-elected to the post of president, the sixth time that he has thus been chosen.

Other officers of the new administration chosen by the board are: W. W. Anderson, in charge of the Pathe branch, vice-president; Dave Prince, branch manager for Paramount, secretary; E. L. Cole, executive secretary and treasurer.

The board of directors elected were: John T. Ezell, W. W. Anderson, Ben Y. Cammack, branch manager for Universal; James H. Butner, branch manager for Educational; and Dave Prince. At the next meeting the standing committees of the board will be announced.

F B O Releasing 7 Shorts During November

There will be seven shorts from F B O during November.

"The Naughty Forties," No. 11 of the "Racing Blood" series starring Alberta Vaughn, will be released on November 4. "T-Bone Handicap," a Barney Google comedy with Barney Hellum and Philip Davis, will be a companion release for this date. "Facts or Fancies," No. 4 of the Curiosities produced by Walter Futter, will be issued on November 7 and the fifth Curiosities on November 21.

"Broadway Ladies," No. 12 of the "Racing Blood," will be issued on November 11 as will "The Family Meal Ticket," No. 3 of the Toots and Casper series co-starring Thelma Hill and Bud Duncan. "Mickey's Athletes," No. 4 of the Mickey McGuire comedies, will be distributed on November 25.

General Pictures Signs Richard Talmadge

Richard Talmadge, action star, has been engaged by General Pictures, the recently organized production company which Oscar A. Price, prominent figure in motion picture circles, heads. The first of the star's pictures for General has been completed at the company's studio at San Mateo under the title of "The Bachelors' Club."

Lasky Heads Red Cross M. P. Division

Jesse L. Lasky, Paramount executive, is again engaged in organizing a campaign within the motion picture industry to raise funds for the annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross.

"U" Chain Expanding in Virginia

THE Virginia holdings of the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., will be increased, Fred A. Flader, general manager of the circuit, having announced this week plans for a program of extensive expansion. At present, Isaac Weinberg, general manager of the Shenandoah Valley Circuit, a "U" affiliation in that state, is now in New York completing details with Mr. Flader for the immediate erection of several new houses.

"U" will build a new theatre in Harrisonburg, Va., at once. Within the next few weeks a plot on Court Square will be broken for a 1,200-seat structure. Joseph Nielson, who planned the new Universal Capitol in Winchester, may design the new house, it is said.

"U" will erect a house of similar size at Clifton Forge, Va., on the site formerly occupied by the Strand. The circuit is also working on plans calling for the construction of three additional theatres in the state. Dan Lederman, of the Universal Chain, is leaving for Virginia to finish details for their erection.

Zuro Musical Director for Pathe Sound Films

Josiah Zuro, who has long been identified with important musical events throughout the country, is now general musical director of Pathe's Sound Pictures. He has already synchronized "The King of Kings," "Captain Swagger," "Annapolis" and other Pathe features.

Zuro for six years was director of presentations for Paramount theatres on Broadway.

"Masquerade" to Replace "Love Song" Title

The new and final title for D. W. Griffith's latest production for United Artists, formerly called "The Love Song," is "Masquerade." Both silent and sound versions of the picture have been made. Sixty-five per cent of the picture is straight dialogue or singing, Lupe Velez doing the singing.

"Should a Girl Marry" a Rayart Roadshow

"SHOULD A GIRL MARRY?" a Rayart special starring Helen Foster, Donald Keith, William V. Mong and Dot Farley, and which will shortly be converted into a sound feature with dialogue sequences and complete synchronization, is planned as a roadshow. Fifty companies will go on tour in November, it is said, carrying with them besides the synchronized production five Filmtone Presentation short subjects featuring radio and vaudeville artists. Each of the units will have a Filmtone Reproducing machine in addition to a technical staff, consisting of electricians, operator and checker. Various key cities are now being visited by advance agents arranging for the presentations.

The Filmtone Studio in New York City will inculcate the sound and voice additions to the feature.

World Wide to Handle British Dominion Films

ASERIES of British Dominions' Productions will be distributed in the United States and Canada by World Wide Pictures, Inc., the deal for the handling of the program of films having been closed last week by Charles Wilcox, following negotiations with J. D. Williams and other executives of World Wide and W. Henderson-Clelland and Herbert Wilcox of British Dominions, who returned from America to London last week.

The series of English features will include a filmization of Wilkie Collins' "The Woman in White," starring Blanche Sweet, and a version of Sir Hall Caine's "The Bondswoman," starring Norman Kerry; both of these productions were filmed at the original locations of the stories. Herbert Wilcox directed both productions.

Charters Granted to 6 Pa. Theatre Companies

Charters from the department of state at Harrisburg incorporating them into the motion picture business of the state of Pennsylvania during the past week included the following motion picture companies: Clairton Theatre, Inc., Clairton, Pa., $50,000, Harry Hendel, Louis Hendel, H. D. Hirsh, Pittsburgh; Roosevelt Theatre, Inc., Pittsburgh, $50,000, Harry Hendel, Louis Hendel, H. D. Hirsh, Pittsburgh; Harris Amusement Co. of Mount Oliver, Pittsburgh, $5,000, Alex S. Moore, Pittsburgh, D. S. Harris, F. J. Thompson, Earl J. Mohn, M. A. Remlinger, Pittsburgh; The American Amusement Construction Company, Philadelphia, $100,000, William E. Strickler, Robert S. Stuart, Herbert B. Schmeck, Philadelphia.

Motion Picture Club Plans Election Night Celebration

The Motion Picture Club will celebrate Election Night with a buffet dinner, dance and entertainment. The Entertainment Committee has laid elaborate plans to make the affair pleasing to all. The tables in the dining room will be arranged in cabaret fashion and beginning at 7 P. M. a jazz orchestra will play. The election returns will be over a direct wire which will be installed in the club. Other facilities for the election returns with which the club is also provided include a ticker service and radio apparatus. Between the dances Broadway entertainers will be seen and heard until the club's closing time.

William Brandt, chairman of the Entertainment Committee of the Motion Picture Club, 1560 Broadway is taking care of the reservations.

U. S. Films Lead Trade Showings in England

During the first nine months of 1928, 550 feature films were trade-shown in Great Britain, the Department of Commerce is advised by Trade Commissioner George R. Canty, Paris. Paramount Profits $5,973,600 for 9 Months, $2,100,000 for Quarter

A PROFIT of $5,973,600 is estimated by Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation for the nine months and $2,100,000 for the third quarter, both ending September 29, 1928. These figures include the undistributed share of earnings of the Balaban and Katz Corporation, a 65 per cent owned subsidiary, and are equal for the nine months to $8.69 per share on the stock issued and outstanding before the recent split-up of three for one, and equal to $2.90 following said split-up. For the three months' period the figures are equal to $3.05 per share on the old basis and $1.02 per share on the new basis of the stock outstanding.

A comparison of the new earnings with those of the last two years indicates an increase, the third quarter of 1928 being the only case where the earnings have decreased.

The nine months' earnings and the third quarter's earnings for 1928, 1927 and 1926 are as follows:

1928—$5,973,600 nine months' earnings and $2,100,000 third quarter's earnings; 1927—$5,650,400 nine months' earnings and $2,118,100 third quarter's earnings; 1926—$3,640,300 nine months' earnings and $1,052,800 third quarter's earnings.

Amusement Tax Offensive

Agitation in Canada for Removal of Burden Becomes More Pronounced with Brady-Ferguson Tilt

THE next step in the agitation in Ontario for the total removal of the Amusement Tax was taken when John C. Brady, proprietor of the Madison Theatre, Toronto, and president of the Canadian M. P. T. O., issued a public reply to the statement by Premier G. Howard Ferguson of Ontario that the Provincial Government required the ticket tax to pay for Governmental services to the exhibitors. Premier Ferguson had also said that the exhibitors did not pass on the reduction to patrons when the tax was taken off all admissions up to 25 cents last year.

President Brady declared that the Ontario Government had a margin of $40,000 in theatre and exchange licenses and censorship fees over and above what was required for theatre inspections, censoring costs and other operations of the Provincial theatres branch. The revenue derived from the Amusement Tax, collected on admission tickets, went to the general treasury of the Province.

Mr. Brady ridiculed the statement of Premier Ferguson that exhibitors of Ontario had effected a saving of $600,000 through the abolishment last year of the amusement tax on tickets up to 25 cents.

At the M. P. T. O. convention in Toronto a Canadian committee was organized to arrange an interview with Premier Ferguson and arrangements are proceeding. This committee is: Arthur Cohen, Toronto, chairman; T. H. Moorehead, Brampton; A. A. Bugg, Midland; J. A. Stewart, Hamilton; J. M. Franklin and Don Stapleton, Ottawa; Mr. Filman, London; J. C. Brady and Col. John A. Cooper, Toronto, representing the film distributors.

Tiffany-Stahl Premieres

"Toilers" at Brooklyn Strand, Cavalier" Now Enjoying Run at Embassy and "Marriage by Contract" on Way

A HEYDAY of premieres is now being enjoyed by Tiffany-Stahl Productions. One of its specials, "The Toilers," is playing the Mark Strand in Brooklyn, one of the borough's leading houses. Another of its features, "The Cavalier," is playing for a week at the Embassy Theatre, a Broadway house, and still another, "Marriage by Contract," also a special, will soon be flashed on the Embassy's screen for the first time.

Thus Tiffany-Stahl begins the new season with its specials equipped with Tiffany-Tone synchronizations and playing at the elite theatres. The company announces many bookings. Among them are:

Schine Circuit of New York State; Regorson Corp. Circuit, Rochester; Goldstein Bros. Circuit, New England; Fox-Poli, New England; Wilmer & Vincent, Pennsylvania; Tri-State Theatres Corp., Arkansas; Finkelstein and Ruben, Minnesota, North and South Dakota; Coston Booking Circuit, Illinois; Fox Circuit; Loew Circuit; Stanley-Fabian, New York District; West Coast Theatres, Inc.; Durkee Circuits, Baltimore; Griffith Bros., Oklahoma.

Tiffany-Stahl considers "Marriage by Contract" the star attraction of their picture group. At its premiere next Friday at the Embassy an audience made up of judges, lawyers, club women, officials of welfare societies is expected.

Cameraman Keeps His $1400 Overtime

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.—A cameraman working for a coast studio recently was sent to New York to shoot a number of scenes for a picture. The man was a member of the west coast cameraman's union and came under the rules and regulations of the New York local while working in the East. A provision of the latter organization provides for overtime pay, and the cameraman is said to have collected $1,400 for overtime in addition to his regular salary.

Upon his return to the coast, so the story goes, the cameraman was asked by the studio to return the overtime pay he drew while East. He was told that the payment was only a gesture to abide by union regulations there, and the studio expected it back. The cameraman refused to rebate, and instead, took the matter up with union headquarters. When union officials brought the matter to the attention of a major studio executive, he later, it is said, disclaimed all responsibility for the actions of under-officials, and declared they never expected the cameraman to refund to them the money paid for overtime.

play, is in work with William A. Seiter directing. Harry Brown has started Ken Maynard's next, "The Lawless Legion" and Frank Lloyd has almost completed "Adoration," with Antonio Moreno.

Cafe interiors are in the making for the Barthelmess vehicle, "Scarlet Seas," directed by John Francis Dillon and while no director has so far been assigned for "Children of the Ritz," the new Dorothy MacKail-Mulhall picture, filming is ready to start. Adelaide Heilbron is doing adaptation and continuity.

After finishing "Stranded in Paradise," George Fitzmaurice will direct Billie Dove in "The Man and the Moment." Agnes Christine Johnston is adapting this Glyn novel for First National; Forest Halsey has prepared for the filming of "Saturday's Children," which Gregory LaCava will direct for Corinne Griffith and "Seven Footprints to Satan," a mystery play has been prepared by Benj. Christenson.

4 Christie Comedies for November Release

Four new Christie comedies will be presentations during November from the Paramount branches, one of the comedies being released each week and representing the four series that the Christie studio is producing for Paramount this season.

A Bobby Vernon comedy, entitled "Hot Sparks" and directed by William Watson with Nancy Dover, Eddie Baker, Cliff Bowes, Bill Blaisdell and Tom Dempsey in support, will arrive first, its release date being November 3. On November 10 "A She-Going Sailor," starring Billy Dooley.

Jack Duffy stars in "Lay on, MacDuff," a Sandy MacDuff comedy directed by Walter Graham, with Eddie Clayton, Betty Lorraine, Neal Burns, Glen Cavender, Kid Wagner and Lyle Tayo in support; this subject is set for November 17. The final Christie comedy is "Believe It or Not," co-featuring Frances Lee and Billy Engle, and one of the "Confessions of A Chorus Girl" comedies written by Jean Arlette and directed by Harold Beaudine with Lorraine Eddy, Eddie Barry and the Christie girls in support; it will be released on November 24.

Will Determine Status of Famous Canadian

A knotty problem has arisen in the Court of Revision at Toronto, Ontario, over the question as to whether Canadian Paramount Corp., Limited, should be assessed as a theatre-operating company or as a financial holding company.

An appeal was entered from an assessment of $430,000 on the ground that the corporation was a financial holding company liable to business tax but not liable to income tax. The representative of the appellant company claimed that the corporation did not operate the theatres but held shares in them and that the assets were from the investments in theatres. The company had a charter to operate but had never taken advantage of it.

It came out in the evidence that an affiliated company, Famous Players Canadian Corp., actually operated theatres and invested in them. Dividends of the Canadian Paramount Corp. all came from its subsidiary companies, it was pointed out. Judgment was reserved.

Famous Canadian Has Its Greatest Year

THAT Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, with its 140 theatres throughout Canada, has had its greatest year, is the information that has been divulged prior to the publication of its annual financial statement for the fiscal year ending August 25 last. An increase in earnings of over 20 per cent is indicated. There is an intimation that the gross receipts for the past fiscal year should exceed $7,000,000 and profit, less operating expenses, should run to $1,500,000 before depreciation, bond interest and income tax are taken out.

Figures for the first five months of 1927-28 show gross earnings of $3,356,094, leaving a balance of $672,301 after operating expenses had been deducted. The gross for the whole year of 1926-27 totaled $6,294,077, with profit of $1,169,493 after deducting operating expenses for the 12 months.

A widespread building campaign has been undertaken by Famous Players for 1929, the outstanding project being the big theatre in Toronto which will seat 4,200 persons. Work has already started on this amusement palace.

Glennon Filming "Taxi 13" Prologue

Bert Glennon is filming "The Joyride" a talking prologue for "Taxi 13," at FBO's Sound Studios on Park Avenue and 134th Street, New York. "The Joyride" features George LeMaire and is based on Mr. LeMaire's skit which was used in the Ziegfeld Follies last year. It can be booked as a talking short subject independent of the feature picture.

Stanley-Fabian to Build Theatre in Newark

AN investment of $4,500,000 in the form of an elaborate 6,000-seat theatre and building to occupy a plot more than 50,000 square feet with a frontage of 40 feet on Broad street and an additional frontage along Lafayette street is planned by the Stanley-Fabian Corporation, subsidiary of the Stanley Company of America, for Newark, New Jersey. The house is planned as the largest and best appointed in the state. It will be known as the Stanley.

Negotiations for the property, located at 878-880 Broad street, have been pending for several months and were finally concluded by Mastbaum Brothers and Fleisher, representing Stanley Co., and Albert M. Greenfield and Company, representing the seller, the Union Building Company of Newark, N. J.

Pathe Sound News Among November 11 Shorts

The first issue of Pathe Sound News, recorded by RCA Photophone, is included among the array of featurettes that Pathe will offer exhibitors during the week of November 11. It will be released every other week.

On the Pathe program of shorts are "Jim Jam Janitor," Johnny Burke's new Mack Sennett comedy, directed by Harry Edwards with Vernon Dent, Carmelita Geraghty and Glen Cavender in the cast; "Spartan Diet," a Grantland Rice Sportlight showing some of our gruelling modern sports; "Caught in the Draft," a new Aesop cartoon; "The Brink of Eternity," chapter five of the serial, "Eagle of the Night"; Topics of the Day No. 46; Pathe News Nos. 94 and 95, and Pathe Review No. 46.

Hearst Cameraman on Zeppelin's Return Trip

HAVING flown across the Atlantic on the Count Zeppelin on its recent flight from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst during which he obtained newsreel scoops on the dirigible story for the Hearst News Service which were later incorporated into the M-G-M News, Robert Hartman repeated his venture during the return flight of the Count Zeppelin to Germany. The scenes shot by him during the return flight will be featured in an early release of M-G-M News, the pictures being Hearst Newsreels exclusives.

Hartman now enjoys the distinction of being the only cameraman to fly across the Atlantic. He was recently made a life member of The White House News Photographers' Association. He has also been honored by a life membership in the Press Photographers' Association of Boston.

plays capacity all the time. The Grand, now in its fourth sound week, has taken a new lease on life and broke records of ten years' standing with "The Singing Fool."

Loew's Aldine, which last season offered silent drama and vaudeville, is now playing sound only and business is on the increase, with averages above those of last season. The Regent was brought back to life with sound. The house had been slipping the last two years, but since sound has been installed, new records are being made and business has jumped fully 50 per cent.

Talking pictures are bringing the biggest grosses and invariably bring bigger receipts than mere sound pictures.

ST. LOUIS

Sound pictures have increased receipts at Skouras Bros. Ambassador and Missouri Theatres approximately fifty per cent above silent features of equal value, considering drawing power of accompanying stage attraction in each instance.

Loew's State Theatre has eliminated stage shows formerly costing from three to four thousand dollars weekly since installation of sound picture reproducing apparatus and the gross of this house has gained. The Grand Central Theatre, dark for many months for the reason that it had failed financially, reopened last December with "The Jazz Singer" and has been a big winner ever since. "Wings" is there at present in its fourth week. Another house, which has been closed and which will reopen with a sound policy, under the new

Tiffany-Stahl Signs George Jessel for Feature Sound Picture

A CONTRACT for the services of George Jessel in the making of a feature length sound picture has been obtained by Tiffany-Stahl. "Lucky Boy" will be the title of the Jessel picture, a story has been written, a company is being selected, and it will go into production at once, according to this week's announcement.

Most of the production will be made in the East, where Jessel is appearing in "The War Song" in New York City. He will divide time between stage and studio. RCA sound method will be the process used. Later he may go to the Coast to make part of the production.

Jessel has never appeared in sound pictures with the exception of two short vaudeville subjects, in which he demonstrated his ability as a prominent artist. He was the original "Jazz Singer" of the stage play by that name. The sum of money Tiffany-Stahl will pay for his services is said to be one of the highest paid.

name of Midtown, is the Empress. Still another house that failed to pay under a silent picture policy and which is now doing nicely with sound pictures is the Capitol.

St. Louis neighborhood theatres, the Shenandoah, Kings, Lindel and Mikado, have been placed on the sound basis during the past two weeks and business has increased fifty per cent or more. However, it is early to draw definite conclusions regarding these theatres.

MILWAUKEE

Business at the Strand since sound pictures are being used has increased an average of $10,000 a week. This enormous increase for a comparatively small theatre is attributed not only to sound, but for the most part to the type of sound pictures shown, according to Loe Leo, vice-president of Midwesco.

At the Garden, where sound has been installed over a year, L. K. Brin, manager, says business has approximately doubled in the talking type of pictures, but has not materially increased in talkies synchronized films. At the Wisconsin, synchronized pictures have increased patronage 25 per cent. No talkers have yet played there.

DES MOINES, IA.

The biggest showing ever made in Iowa was recorded at the Des Moines Theatre, where "The Singing Fool" showed to over one hundred thousand people at sixty cents evenings and thirty cents matinees. This is estimated as a fifty per cent increase over an average silent feature.

Synchronized and dialogue films will go twenty-five to thirty per cent over silents and all-talking films will take ten to twenty per cent over the State show with a synchronized picture as competition. An example of this was the "Night Watch" against "The Singing Fool," "The Terror," at the Capitol, over "Beggars of Life" and "Dancing Daughters" following at the Capitol.

"The Singing Fool" is twenty per cent ahead of "The Jazz Singer" here, and "Lights of New York" is next best. This week "Wings" is taking rank with the mark set by "The Jazz Singer."

CANADA

Information from an official source is that sound pictures have more than doubled the weekly gross made by silent films at the Palace Theatre, Montreal, where George Rotsky is manager. They made their start at this theatre, in Canada, Sept. 1. Since then Rotsky has shown "Street Angel," "Four Sons," "Mother Knows Best," "Air Circus" with programs continuous from eleven a. m. to midnight and later.

The Tivoli, Toronto, started its sound picture policy Oct. 5 and "Street Angel" continued for four weeks with the house crowded day and night. It is considered a little early to make comparisons in connection with the Tivoli but it is a record-breaking situation. Subjects were repeated after eleven p. m. on account of the house being still crowded at that time.

The Metropolitan, in Winnipeg, obtained unparalleled business with six shows daily with "Street Angel" when sound was inaugurated Oct. 27. The Capitol, at Vancouver, is at present running its third sound bill.

Menjou and Vidor in "Concert" All-Talkie

AN all-talking feature, an adaptation of Hermann Bahrs' stage play, "The Concert," in which Leo Dietrichstein starred on the stage in New York, will serve as Adolphe Menjou's first venture into talkies and also as Florence Vidor's initial effort in this new field of the audible screen. Menjou will have the role portrayed by Dietrichstein and Miss Vidor will play opposite him, the first time since their "Grand Duchess and the Waiter."

Lothan Mendes has been appointed to direct this Paramount talkie and production will begin sometime in February. Menjou will take a vacation in New York following the completion of "Marquis Preferred," his current vehicle.

Pathe Executives Discuss Plans for Sound Picture Product

PLANS for an aggressive sound picture program and next year's product were discussed by Pathe division and eastern managers at a regional meeting held last week at the home office. Colvin E. Brown, executive vice-president, presided. After the opening session, a luncheon was given at the Hotel Roosevelt. Joseph P. Kennedy, official advisor to the company, was the principal speaker.

Expressing satisfaction over the showing made by Pathe's first sound picture, "King of Kings," Brown declared that "all Pathe pictures will include dialogue." The first all-talking picture, "The Missing Man" is now in production, Benjamin Glazer directing. Other R C A Photophone features, Brown announced, would be: "Ned McCobb's Daughter," "Captain Swagger," and "Marked Money" with unusual sound synchronization; while those that will be offered in both sound and dialogue are: "The Godless Girl," "Annapolis," "Show Folks," "Sal of Singapore," "The Shady Lady," "The Spieler," "Geraldine," "The Leatherneck," "Noisy Neighbors," "Square Shoulders," "The Flying Fool," "The Office Scandal," "Listen Baby" and "High Voltage."

Enthusiasm was also expressed over the first issue of Pathe Sound News to be released on Armistice Day, Nov. 11th. Other short subjects in sound are the "Aesop's Film Fables" and "Topics of the Day." The Grantland Rice Sportlights will use dialogue and vocal description.

Following Friday's business meeting, the Patheites visited the studios of the Radio Corporation of America to see and hear some of the Pathe sound features.

Those in attendance in addition to Messrs. Kennedy and Brown were: John Flinn, Vice President; T. C. Streibert, asst. to executive vice president; Lewis Innerarity, secretary; John Humm, treasurer; Terry Ramsaye, editor-in-chief of Eastern Production; Phil Reisman, general sales mgr.; Ray L. Hall, editor of Pathe News; E. J. O'Leary, feature sales mgr.; Harry Scott, short subject sales mgr.; George W. Harvey, director of advertising and publicity; John F. McAloon, mgr. exchange operations; Stanley Jacques, central div. mgr.; L. J. Hacking, supervisor eastern div.; Lou Kniskern, asst. to gen. sales mgr.; Arthur Rousseau, vice pres. Pathe International Corp.; Lou Miller, sales prom. short subjects; Bob Wolff, and Bill Raynor, mgr. New York branch; Oscar Hanson, mgr. at Buffalo; Bert Moran, mgr. at New Haven; Charles Stombaugh, mgr. at Albany; Bob Mochrie, mgr. at Phila.; R. C. Robin, mgr. at Washington; R. C. Cropper, mgr. at Boston; Harry Lorch, mgr. at Chicago; and D. A. Doran, eastern story editor.

Most of Warner Talking Stars Recruited from Ranks

CONTRADICTING the assumption that in most cases the motion picture industry would have to turn to the stage for talent in the production of talking pictures, Warner Bros. bring to light the fact that with but few exceptions Vitaphone stars have been recruited from the ranks of players who previously appeared in silent pictures. It is true that many Vitaphone players have had stage experience but in the majority of instances their screen popularity has been of long standing.

Twenty-nine actors and actresses have been slowly and consistently signed by J. L. Warner and the trend talking pictures are taking in the development of popular personalities can be studied to advantage through the following list of players appearing in full length Vitaphone productions. Those who have stellar rankings are:

Dolores Costello, Al Jolson, John Barrymore, Thomas Meighan, Fannie Brice, Monte Blue, May McAvoy, Betty Bronson, Rin Tin Tin, Conrad Nagel, Louise Fazenda, Audrey Ferris, Lois Wilson, Edward Everett Horton, Pauline Frederick, George Arliss, Sophie Tucker, Ted Lewis, Texas Guinan and Bert Lytell.

Players who fall under the featured category include David Lee, the child now scoring with Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool," William Collier, Jr., Myrna Loy, William Russell, Agnes Franey, Grant Withers, John Miljan, Andre Beranger and Harry Wardell.

Jolson Songs by M. C. Used to Exploit "Singing Fool"

A number of mediums were used to exploit the Al Jolson picture, "The Singing Fool," when it played the Riviera Theatre, Waterloo, Iowa. Outstanding among Manager H. D. Grove's stunts was the enlistment of his personality band leader's services in singing the theme song, "Sonny Boy" from the stage a week in advance. This gave Jack Bain, master of ceremonies, a legitimate reason to talk about the

Talkies Interest New York State Group

WITH the exception of the Schine brothers, the heads of practically every circuit in central and northern New York were in New York City last week, the number including William Smalley, of Cooperstown; William Benton, of Saratoga Springs; Mike Kallet, of Oneida, and Henry Frieder, of Hudson. The entire group made the trip, it is understood, in connection with sound pictures.

featured motion picture to be shown the following week.

Three window displays of the sheet music, "Sonny Boy," a 10-foot banner in Kresge's 25c store on Brunswick records and Al Jolson's tire covers on all taxicabs operating in the city and two 20-foot signs with a cut-out head of Al Jolson for the theatre front, were some of the additional exploitation mediums that inspired record-breaking receipts for the engagement.

Canadian Musicians Feel Brunt of Sound Films

The first rumble of labor difficulties in Canada because of the installation of equipment for the presentation of sound pictures has been heard at Winnipeg. The Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, screened its first sound feature, "Street Angel," starting October 27, while the Capitol Theatre is being wired. The orchestras and organists at both houses have received their two weeks' notice but the musicians will be employed on a temporary week-to-week basis until definite policies have been adopted.

It has also happened that Manager D. E. L. Fisher of the Garriek Theatre, Winnipeg, has dispensed with his seven-piece orchestra following the installation of a large pipe organ.

Jack Norworth to Appear in Vita Presentation

Jack Norworth, star of the variety and musical comedy stages who recently completed an important role in the all-talking Vitaphone production, "Queen of the Night Clubs," in which Texas Guinan is starred, has been signed to appear in a Vitaphone presentation of his own latest songs and stories, according to an announcement made by Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of Vitaphone production.

In his Vitaphone presentation Norworth will be assisted by Dorothy Adelphi.

Universal Signs Hoagland as Contact With Legit

As posted vaudeville and professional representative, (Tues) Carleton Hoagland has been engaged by Universal to interview and engage all Movietone artists in the east, to contract with the vaudeville colony and legit stages.

Mr. Hoagland is known in the vaudeville business as a booker of theatres and talent. For a time he was connected with Henderson's in Coney Island. He has been a producer of musical comedies and vaudeville acts in the east and on the coast.

Sound Film Storm Breaks Over Europe

England, France and Germany Awaken to Voice of the Screen

By LARS MOEN

(European Correspondent, Motion Picture News)

PARIS, Oct. 23.—When I left America, nearly a year ago, the gathering clouds foretold the coming storm that was to end the silence of the screen. In Europe I found scarcely a ripple of interest. Two processes had been developed in Germany and were languishing; some activity in England on the part of De Forest; in France principally ridicule and prejudice.

Today the situation has changed as if by magic—so much so that it is difficult to say how it has all come about.

First, it became known that the Paramount theatre was being wired for sound films and would open in about a month with "Wings." The Madeleine, where "Ben Hur" recently closed its spectacular run, likewise. Presumably Paramount expected to "scoop the field."

If so, that hope was shattered the past week when the following single-column advertisement appeared in the principal Parisian dailies:

Talking Films?

Musical Films?

A revolution in the cinema industry. For the first time in France, you may soon see, hear and judge, in a large establishment on the Boulevards, the first French talking films, made by the process Gaumont Petersen-Poulsen.

Then, a few days later, the following more specific announcement:

Cameo.

Is closed for the installation of the next spectacle which will be entirely composed of talking films, and the Aubert film, "L'Eau du Nil" (Water of the Nile), made from the novel of Pierre Frondaie by Marcel Vandal, and of which the orchestral accompaniment, voices and sounds will constitute a revolution in the cinema spectacle.

This will mark the debut in France of the sound film, in the modern sense. Yet, oddly enough, back in the days when the Lumiere Brothers were doing in Europe what Edison and Jenkins were doing in

Paramount's First All-Talkie Screen Comedy Will Be "The Dummy"

PARAMOUNT'S first all-talking screen comedy will be the stage play, "The Dummy," by Harvey J. O'Higgins and Harriet Ford, according to an announcement made by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production.

Robert Milton, New York stage director, will make his debut as a motion picture director with this production, while Herman Mankiewicz, former playwright and author, is adapting the play and preparing the dialogue for the 100 per cent talking film.

Production of "The Dummy" is scheduled to begin on the sound stages of the Paramount studios in Hollywood immediately upon the completion of "Half an Hour," which William C. De Mille is directing. Every facility of the sound department will be utilized in bringing this comedy of detective life to the screen as an audible motion picture.

America, France had her talking films—but that is another story of which I shall have more to say another time.

The Gaumont process is sponsored by Leon Gaumont, an illustrious name in French screen annals. After his alliance with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, he was long inactive in the production field, confining himself to theatre operation and equipment manufacture.

The two engineers who have developed the process Petersen and Poulsen, are Danish, and the latter will be instantly remembered for his invention of the Telephonograph, which records sound on a steel piano wire, and for a time had quite a vogue, as well as the important part which he played in the development of radio telephony. He is not, therefore, to be ignored as a possibility in this field.

The process is rather closely guarded at the moment, but we are reliably informed that it uses an extra film, with the sound track taking up the full width of the frame. Thus the process demands a special projection head and double the quantity of film, and if this defect cannot be overcome, through reason of conflicting patents, the process will probably make little headway in competition with American devices which place the track within the standard 35 millimetres.

However, it must be borne in mind that it will, perhaps, be two years before American devices will appear to any extent on this market, owing to the fact that home consumption is absorbing the entire production at the moment. There is always the possibility, however, that American companies will arrange for a similar production on the continent by subsidiary or affiliated companies. It is understood here that the G. E. process has been offered to all leading French producers.

Meanwhile, Louis Aubert, owner of 22 houses in France, and an important producer, has departed for a six weeks' period of study in America, principally, it is believed, to determine the merits of the sound film and its possibilities for his houses. Jacques Feyder, the director, is doing likewise.

Much of all this was precipitated by the debut in London on September 27 of the Vitaphone. Theatre managers from all over England, France and Germany went to hear it, and the result was an over-night change in sentiment as to the "film sonore," as it is called in France. And the critics, if some of them complained of the "bronchial" quality of the voices, were unanimous in their recognition of its importance.

Germany, of course, has not been behind in this. The Tri-Ergon process, already several years old (and the American patent rights of which are owned by Fox-Movietone), is showing new life. Walter Ruttmann, the decorative artist who turned to making abstract films, and who associated himself with Carl Freund, Ufa camera wizard, for the making of "Berlin, the Symphony of a City," is now with Tri-Ergon, and at the moment is in England, where he has made a short talking film with George Bernard Shaw as the subject.

And even from far-off Czechoslovakia comes the announcement that a corporation has been formed there to make and exploit sound films.

Premier of "Alias Jimmy Valentine" at Astor

Another dialogue picture from the M-G-M studios, "Alias Jimmy Valentine," will shortly make its appearance at the Astor theatre, New York City, following a successful run of "White Shadows in the South Seas."

This new picture, which stars William Haines, was adapted from the Paul Armstrong play of the same name. Lionel Barrymore, Karl Dane and Leila Hyams also have prominent roles. Jack Conway did the directing.

The film will be a combination of straight movie and dialogue and will also contain a synchronized score prepared under the direction of Dr. William Axt and David Mendoza.

"The Divine Lady" Will Be a Dialogue Picture

First National's "The Divine Lady," a special production visualizing the love and naval battles participated in by Lord Nelson, will come to the screen this fall as a dialogue picture.

Talkie Made in Record Time by Barrymore

STRAIGHT line production methods were applied to talkies by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, in the making of "Confession," a dramatic playlet directed by Lionel Barrymore, and in which are featured Robert Ames, Carroll Nye, Yvonne Stark and Christiane Yves.

Barrymore laid out the play, held rehearsals for a week, then played it on a stage before an audience in a Los Angeles motion picture theatre, as a prelude to filming. This was, in effect a preview. Perfection attained, actual filming took but a half-hour, as compared with days by the old method. Barrymore believes that all future sound pictures will be filmed in this manner, just as stage plays are produced.

Paramount Talking Shorts in Work at L. I. Studios

SINCE the reopening of Paramount's Long Island studios where "The Letter," with a speaking stage cast headed by Jeanne Eagels, is in full production stride, production of all-talking short subjects is proceeding at a rapid rate, a half-dozen already finished. James R. Cowan is in charge, assisted by Larry Kent and Joseph Santley.

Eddie Cantor the other day completed a two reel picture which will bring him to the public as a personality in a sense never realized before. The picture is called "Eddie Cantor, That Party in Person." It is expected it will be first shown in New York at the Criterion Theatre next month as part of the program at the opening of Paramount's first all-dialogue film "Interference." Bobbe Arnst of "Rosalie" appears with Cantor, both of them by arrangement with Florence Ziegfield.

Ruth Etting, another Ziegfield star, has made a one-reel film at the studio, recording her singing of Irving Berlin's "Roses of Yesterday" and Walter Donaldson's "Because My Baby Don't Mean Maybe Now."

Other short subjects already completed or nearly so are Elinor Glyn speaking on "What Is It?," Borah Minevich and his troupe of boy harmonica players from Hammerstein's "Good Boy;" and a sketch, "One Word," written and directed by Joseph Stanley. The three Giersdorf Sisters, singers, seen on the stage in "Cross My Heart," are soon to be recorded.

The Santley sketch, "One Word," is a novelty applying the efficiency principle to drama, eliminating needless words. The cast consists of Irene Purcell, recently in "The Great Necker;" John Rutherford, of "Queen High" and "The Love Call;" George Meeker of the film, "Four Sons;" Priscilla Knowles of "The Spider," and John J. Dwyer.

The Long Island studio also has turned out two talking pictures of the "Great Stars and Authors" series to be distributed by Paramount for the benefit of the Actors' Fund and the Authors' League. Many of the stage stars on Broadway have given their services for these pictures. They are "Night Club," from the story by Katherine Brush, and "The Pusher-in-the-Face" by F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Tonefilm Completes Large Sound Studio at Fort Lee, N. J.

COMPLETION of what is claimed to be the largest sound stage in the east, is announced by Phil Goldstone, in charge of production activities at the Metropolitan Studios, Fort Lee, N. J., the plant of Tonefilm Corporation.

The system of acoustics used in this studio is known as the Fin method, a system of fins extending around the stage and the ceiling, which, it is claimed, breaks up the sound waves of voice and musical tones and eliminates the base vibrations of the harsher tones. Johns-Manville, the builders, are using the studio as their show studio of the East and are at present at work on another stage for Metropolitan, said to be the largest ever built. The latter will be available to other producers of sound pictures.

Goldstone believes that the exhibitor will be the ultimate judge as to interchangeability and states that the Tonefilm device recently demonstrated its claim as a standard talking picture machine by properly rendering a subject made by a well known producing company. No batteries, but a special Tonefilm tube supplied with current from the electric socket, is said to be a special feature. This tube was invented by Wein, inventor of the Wein tube used with television.

Novel Talking Trailer for "Stark Mad"

A recent novelty contrived by Warner Bros. for a Vitaphone trailer is that for their all-talking picture, "Stark Mad." The trailer for this picture takes the form of a complete Vitaphone sketch headed by H. B. Warner who has the principal role in the production.

All the members of the cast appear on the screen one by one dressed in character. Each is questioned by H. B. Warner as to his identity and each answers, giving the audience an excellent idea of the amusing entertainment in store for them. The last to come on is a giant ape who brings the trailer to a close with a climax of real excitement.

Stage Players Featured in "Nightstick"

Five Broadway stage players who have never appeared before movie cameras are prominent in the cast selected by director Roland West for his all-talking film version of "Nightstick." This crook play was seen in New York last season. "Nightstick" will be placed in production at the United Ar-

Vitaphone Clicks in London Showing

VITAPHONE has clicked in London, according to Herman Starr, Warner Bros. executive, who supervised the first showing at the Piccadilly Theatre, which is now owned by Warners. Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer" was chosen as the first Vitaphone picture and the star was present for the premiere. The picture received an ovation, according to Starr.

The Piccadilly planned to hold "The Jazz Singer" only for four weeks, after which will follow "The Terror," Fannie Brice in "My Man" and Dolores Costello in "Noah's Ark."

tists Studio in Hollywood on November 15th.

Eleanor Griffith, recently star of "The Spider" on the Broadway stage, and as yet unacquainted with any movie camera, will be the Joan Manning of "Nightstick." She arrives in Hollywood Friday, November 2nd.

Pat O'Malley, screen and stage player, will have the leading male role of Tommy Glennon. Mae Busch, also a film and foot-light performer, will be seen as Daisy Thomas.

Chester Morris, New York Stage player and wholly unfamiliar with movie cameras, will be the Chick Williams of "Nightstick." Three other stage players who will be seen and heard in this all-talking film and who have had no screen experience at all are Regis Toomey, Harry Stubbs and Pernal Pratt. All three have been cast in important roles.

Separate silent and talking versions of "Nightstick" will be made by Mr. West, the director of "The Bat," "De Luxe Annie," and "The Dove." He acted on the stage, beginning when he was seventeen.

"Nightstick" is one of three all-talking pictures announced by United Artists.

Dita Parlo Arrives for Chevalier Vehicle

Dita Parlo, 19-year old German actress signed by Paramount after two film appearances in her home country, arrived in New York last Tuesday on the S. S. Columbus. She was accompanied by her mother. The young actress will remain in the east for a few days and will then leave for Hollywood to commence work on "The Innocents of Paris," Maurice Chevalier's first talking production for Paramount in which she will be the heroine. "The Homecoming," the first picture in which Miss Parlo appeared, will be shown at the Paramount Theatre on November 17. it is said.

Flo Lewis Signed for Vitaphone Sketch

Flo Lewis, known on the variety stage as "the inimitable singing comedienne" is to be seen and heard in a Vitaphone comedy sketch, "Give Us A Lift," in which she will be supported by Leo Karlyn, according to an announcement made by Bryan Foy, Vitaphone director and executive.

Miss Lewis has been on the stage since she was six years old. Her recent successes include "Big Boy" with Al Jolson, "Twinkle Twinkle," "Rain or Shine."

Talking Shorts Versus Vaudeville Survey

THE Vitaphone Corporation recently made a survey of a typical American community in an effort to obtain written testimony from the public as to its preference between vaudeville and talking shorts.

Mansfield, Ohio, was the city selected and it is claimed that a 14 per cent reply, from 500 letters sent, contained but 18 per cent in favor of regulation vaudeville, the remaining 82 per cent being decidedly in favor of the talking short subjects.

Pathe Announces Sound News Reel

First Issue Ready

November 11; Many Innovations Claimed

THE first release of the sound edition of Pathe News, to be followed by releases each fortnight, has been announced for the week of Nov. 11 by Colvin Brown, executive vice-president of Pathe.

The first issue of Pathe Sound News will be a full and complete reel, containing a wide diversity of subject matter in news and news features. Coincident with the first issue is the tenth anniversary of the Armistice and matter relative to this event of the Great War will be included. Many thousands of feet of film have been recorded and tested preliminary to the release and it is claimed that a number of new elements of sound and talking picture technique will be introduced.

One of Pathe's Sound News innovations is a form of screen interview which tends to combine the salient elements of newspaper reportorial practice and screen reporting. The new method promises the possibility of a better utilization of the box office values of important public personalities in relation to the activities and responsibilities which put them in the public eye—and ear.

Pathe Sound News is recorded by the Radio Corporation of America Photophone system, evolved by the General Electric Company and Westinghouse. This system claims special merits in the use of a sound recorder separate from the camera, rendering the camera more mobile than in combined units. The Photophone system is also said to differ from the Movietone system in that the RCA film record is made in terms of variable opaque area, in a hill and dale wave, on the sound strip, instead of the earlier and more widely used method of recording in variable densities. Various laboratory advantages are claimed for the RCA capacity method which permits the film printer to time for the pictorial image. In addition to the Photophone equipment, Pathe has available and in service for supplementary use some specially constructed

Pomeroy Completes Construction of Portable Sound Equipment

ROY J. POMEROY, director of sound at the Lasky studio has just completed the construction of what is declared to be the first portable sound equipment switchboard and recording control device for talking motion pictures. This new equipment enables Pomeroy's technicians to film and record scenes anywhere on the Paramount lot. It is likened to the remote control hook-up of the radio world.

In addition to other sound recording innovations, Pomeroy is responsible for Paramount's system of sound recording and voice reproduction, which differs considerably from others in as much as the recording is on a separate strip of film, independent of the picture negative.

recording units using the variable density method making a product identical in physical character with Movietone.

Back of this advent of Pathe News in sound is a long period of endeavor. It is editorially the product of the labors of Ray L. Hall and Terry Ramsaye, whose names have been variously associated in connection with most of the news reel enterprises of the last fifteen years as authors of the dominant styles of screen treatment and practices of screen journalism.

The Pathe Sound News organization personnel is being drawn chiefly from the long trained and disciplined Pathe staff. The first to be drafted to sound was Joseph O'Brien, film editor and cutter from Pathe News, who has been schooled at the Radio Corporation of America's laboratories. Among the cameramen thus far detailed to sound by Pathe are Harry Smith, Tommy Hogan, Robert Donahue and Alfred Gandolfi.

Marvin H. McIntyre, editorial representative at Washington in contact with the White House, the Army and the Navy, has been given responsibilities to the sound news.

Through the initial period of product Pathe Sound News has the co-operative attention of E. E. Bucher, vice-president of RCA, and the engineering staff under Carl Dreher, including Harry Dreyer and Harry Jones, assigned to technical supervision of the operations of the sound recording camions.

All Pathe Sound News prints are being made in Pathe's own laboratories in New York, Jersey City and Bound Brook, all of which have been specially equipped for this work.

Pathe Sound News prints will be routed from the Jersey City plant under the charge of Robert Richards, and the development of sound negatives and the making of first prints will be done along with Pathe silent news pictures in the high speed news laboratory under James Pozzi in the home office building at 35 West 45th street.

Use Made of Television in Talking Short

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Oct. 29.—Television has invaded motion picture production. Last week, in making a short reel dialogue Movietone of M-G-M stars and contract players for the opening of the New Empire Theatre, London, England, use was made of television and long distance oversea telephone to put over the idea that the players were making personal appearances before the audience.

The film, about 400 feet in length, included practically every star and player under contract to M-G-M with each doing a brief dialog via movietone. The only contract stars who did not appear were Lon Chaney, Ramon Novarro and Greta Garbo, all of whom were out of town when the film was shot.

Lou Ostrow produced the dialog reel under supervision of Irving Thalberg. Studio officials claim that the reel gives a definite guide to talking possibilities of all contract players, and every one who registered on the Movietone showed good voice registration for future "talkies" which the company will produce.

U. A. Staff En Route for "Say It With Music"

Production will start on "Say It With Music," the Harry Richman talking and singing picture Irving Berlin has written for United Artists upon the arrival in New York of Producer John W. Considine, Jr., director Alan Crosland, scenarist C. Gardner Sullivan, art director William Cameron and photographer Karl Struss. Richman, star of "George White's Scandals" will star and Berlin will assist in production. Crosland, it will be recalled, directed Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer."

Sherman Will Supervise and Act in Talkie

Lowell Sherman will supervise and enact the leading role of a one-act stage play by Stanley Houghton, produced on Broadway in 1914 with the title of "Phipps." It will be transferred to the screen as an all-talking picture. The play was ranked by New York critics as one of the fifty best one act plays ever written.

Other parts in the play will be portrayed by Betty Francisco and Cyril Chadwick.

"Broadway Melody," an All-Talking Picture

M-G-M's first all-talking picture, "The Broadway Melody," has gone into production with Harry Beaumont at the megaphone. Beaumont recently made "Dancing Daughters."

Work Starts on Fifth Sound Proof Stage

FURTHER proof that Warner Bros. are to continue the making of Vitaphone productions on a large scale is carried in Jack L. Warner's recent announcement that construction will immediately start on another large sound proof stage at the Hollywood studios.

"This sound-proof stage," says Warner's statement, "to be known as Stage 7, will be 200 feet by 300 feet and will be an exact duplicate of the one completed last month. It will bring the total number of Vitaphone stages up to five.

"This stage will contain many buildings, since separate space is needed for adjoining monitor rooms, recording rooms, projection rooms and various other necessary departments. The new stage will be completed at cost of more than five hundred thousand dollars."

A strong masculine virility is always in evidence in the directorial creations of Ralph Ince, which sometimes he enhances by giving a vigorous characterization himself. He was seen to good advantage in "Singapore Mutiny," and has just completed "Hard-boiled." Both are F B O releases.

A visitor to these shores, F. A. Enders, who distributes the Columbia product in England, was entertained recently at the Columbia studio by Director Frank Capra and Treasurer Jack Cohn, in the center and on the right, respectively

Henry King is developing this young man, John Holland by name, and now enacting the leading male role in "She Goes to War," which King is making as an Inspiration-Halperin production. Eleanor Boardman is the girl of the film. Holland is under contract to King and Inspiration.

Master Jack Warner is an autograph hound, but that doesn't put Bert Lytell nor Pauline Frederick on the qui-vive. They were "On Trial" for several reels in the Warner Vitaphone feature of that name. They, therefore, can afford to affix their John Hancocks in signature books. Besides young Mr. Warner has a high place in their esteem.

Here's a little redskin miss whom we'd vote for in any pageant of pulchritude. She is Dorothy Janis, one of the prettiest girls among the M-G-M stock players

One of the best things about the talkies is the experience of hearing faces with whom you have been silently acquainted burst out into song or story. Here are three players who acquit themselves creditably in Universal's Movietone "Melody of Love." Miss Mildred Harris, and on the left Tom Dugan and on the right Walter Pidgeon

A story of youngsters married in this jazz age in the much-ballyhooed "companionate" style is First National's domestic drama, "Companionate Marriage." Betty Bronson and Richard Walling are the happy pair whose adventure into matrimony seems to be having smooth sailing

One of the studio fellers you hear about but seldom see is the still cameraman, who is a pretty important individual in presenting the stars to the public. Here Richard Dix takes pleasure in presenting Fred Hendrickson of the Paramount staff who has been with him in all his recent vehicles.

They really like to pose for pictures underneath the California sky. Above, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Drew are snapped while strolling in the sunshine. Jerry is one of Educational's principal comedians, while his wife, Anita Garvin, also acts in pictures for various companies, including her husband's

Brakes Clamped on Screen Newcomers

No Publicity Until Two Pictures Have Been Made, Ruling

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.—As a result of too many recent cases in which highly exploited "finds" have been dropped by studios, fan magazine writers in Hollywood are establishing a rule that no publicity will be given screen newcomers until after two pictures have been made in which the "find" appears. During the past year over a dozen girls have been publicized as new "sensations" in fan magazines via the studio publicity departments, before they had played any role of importance in a picture.

In some of these instances, the girls had never appeared before a camera prior to being hailed as a "discovery." In others, the girls had plugged along as extras and were placed under contract as stock players. Such contracts led to similar exploitation. The fan writers feel that studio publicity departments have gone off "half-shot" too often and are making their mediums appear ridiculous in view of the fates suffered by most such "finds."

Recent ones include Eva Von Berne, at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Ruth Elder, at Paramount; Frances Hamilton, at First National; Ruth Hurst and "Dimples" Lido, at Universal; Agnes Franey, at Warner Brothers; Viola Richards, at Hal Roach; Lia Tora, at Fox; Sally Blaine, at Paramount; Sylvia Beecher, at M-G-M; Rosita, at United Artists; in fact one or two can be found in almost every studio.

One or two of these are still under contract, but have disappeared from publicity, being relegated to bits or practically extra work. Others appeared in one picture and were dropped by the studio. Still others remained under contract for six months and more, drawing salary weekly and never appeared in a picture.

Writers are asking publicity departments to seek interviews for such players only after the girls have accomplished something in one or two pictures. They feel it unjust to the player to raise her hopes and to the fans in promising new star material which is never developed.

College Boys Return to Other Jobs

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 22.—The last of a $20,000 experiment for "new faces" by First National disappeared from pictures last week. John Westwood, the one remaining boy of ten college youths imported to Hollywood by First National two years ago, decided the battle wasn't worth the price and became an automobile salesman.

Two years ago, First National, in conjunction with College Humor, the national publication, held a country-wide contest in every university from coast to coast with a view towards bringing new faces to the screen. John LeRoy Johnston was sent on a tour of the East and Midwest, and Ned Holmes of the West Coast and South. The result was the signing, on six months contracts, of John Westwood of Princeton, Stuart Knox of Yale, Richard Glendennin of California, John Stambaugh of Northwestern, as the survivors of a three months trial period for the ten collegians.

One by one, the boys have either returned to college, or entered commercial ranks. Westwood held most promise and held on doggedly until last week. He succumbed to the lure of shiny chassis and 1929 bodies last week.

The Movies Win!

The world is a better place because of the motion picture.

This was established last week when the decision over a debate between the University of Sydney, Australia, and the University of California at Los Angeles, was rendered in favor of the students defending the motion picture. The question, "The World Would Be Better Off Without the Movies," was propounded by the students to Sydney, Australia, with U. C. L. A. as their first stop in a series of world-wide debates with universities on various questions. Milton Sills officiated as chairman for the evening. The decision was informal, the only judges being the audience. Speakers for U. C. L. A. were Harold Kraft, Myron E. Smith and Kenneth Piper. The visiting youngsters, from U. of Sydney, were Norman C. L. Nelson, H. G. Godsall and W. S. Sheldon.

Good Administration

For the third consecutive year, the officership of the Mayfair Club remains identical. The recent election resulted in the same group of founders being chosen to serve. The officers include Fred Niblo, president; Charles Christie, vice-president; Irving Thalberg, secretary; M. C. Levee, treasurer; and Margaret Ettinger, corresponding sec-

Stud Poker Game Nets Winner $40,000

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.—Poker sessions with five card stud at table stakes is the current pastime of a select group of coast producers. The games have been kept well under cover on account of the prominence of the players participating, and very few in the picture colony know that the games have been held.

Last week, however, one producing head, a regular in the weekly sessions, wrote checks totalling over $40,000 for his evening's losses. Various winnings ranged from $5,000 to $15,000 by the participants who came out on the right side.

retary. The Board of Directors remains intact with the officers, and Conrad Nagel, Sid Grauman, Harry Rapf, B. P. Schulberg and Winfield Sheehan continuing to serve.

Sequel to "Dancing Daughters"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer intends following up "Our Dancing Daughters" with a sequel tentatively called "The Brass Band." The entire cast of "Dancing Daughters," headed by Joan Crawford, will be seen in the sequel, which is being written by Josephine Lovett, author of the former. Harry Beaumont, who directed "Dancing Daughters," will wield the megaphone on "The Brass Band."

Retains Richard Wallace

As a result of his work with "The Shopworn Angel," for Paramount, Richard Wallace, director, has been retained by that company to make the talking sequences which will be injected into the production. "The Shopworn Angel" was intended as a silent picture, but Wallace's direction made it good enough to synchronize. Gary Cooper and Nancy Carroll play the leads.

Starts "Wells Fargo"

Albert Rogell starts production this week on "Wells Fargo," which will be Ken Maynard's next release through First National. The story is woven about the history of the old express company in the pioneer days of the West.

Hollywood Veterans Say Producers Are Falling for a Lot of Bunk

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.—Members of the film colony who came to Hollywood with years of experience along New York's Broadway, are deriving much amusement from the manner in which producers are falling for the bunk handed out by a group of youngsters posing as "authorities" on show business. Several young men, scarcely out of school, if they ever went to school, who have apparently spent a few months as hangers-on to Broadway's wits and celebrities, have succeeded in impressing a few producers with their self-exploited contacts and have landed into very comfortable berths.

One such young man has not only promoted himself into a contract, but recently talked himself into a trip to New York and back at the company's expense, selling the producer the idea that he was to negotiate personally with Moran and Mack to appear in a series of shorts. The producer is evidently unaware that Moran and Mack have asked $325,000 plus fifty per cent of the gross to appear in a feature. Had he known, he might realize that it would take almost a hundred years or more for a film concern to get back its investment on such a basis with shorts.

Other youngsters, who speak glibly of "my pal, Eddie Cantor," or of their intimacies with Broadway's columnists such as Walter Winchell, Mark Hellinger, F. P. A. and the others, have succeeded in impressing production heads with their individual New York prestige.

Another source of amusement is the number of vaudeville actors, who, after appearing in one sound short, succeed in selling themselves as directors of sound shorts to other studios. Their work in one short is considered sufficient experience by some executives to warrant a knowledge of directing.

And it's all charged to "overhead."

Universal Sound Executive Returns to Coast

After spending several weeks in New York City where he closed important contracts for various artists, in behalf of Carl Laemmle, Nat Goldstone, sound picture executive for Universal, is enroute to the Coast to resume his activities at Universal City.

Probably the most notable deal Goldstone negotiated, while in New York, was the signing of Paul Whiteman and his orchestra for the production of a talking and musical picture. He carried out Laemmle's wishes concerning the arrangements to have Whiteman's entire orchestra brought to Universal City, February next, for six weeks of picturization and sound recording.

Other important deals, arranged by Goldstone, will be announced shortly.

Dotty Jottings

By Jerry Hoffman

LAST week I drove all the way to Santa Ana to see the first preview of "The Last Warning" . . . which is Junior Laemmle's most recently completed production . . . the preview was "silent" . . . and even in its rough first-cut state I can see the reason for Junior's unusual enthusiasm over it . . . and when I say "unusual enthusiasm" for Junior Laemmle . . . that should mean plenty, for this youngster puts everything he's got into everything he deals with. . . . Junior wants it to be the greatest mystery thriller ever made for the screen . . . and danged if I don't think he's succeeding. . . . Paul Leni directed . . . splendidly by the way . . . also by the way . . . this is not a review . . . merely comment . . . and get a load of the cast. . . . Laura La Plante, Margaret Livingston, John Boles, Roy D'Arcy, Bert Roach, Mack Swain, Burr McIntosh, Fred Kelsey, Slim Summerville, Tom O'Brien, Bubby Phelps, Carrie Daumeri, Darcy Corrigan, Tom McGuire, . . . reads like a Hollywood 'phone book . . . and oh yeah . . . a big hand for Tom Reed's titles. . . .

THE stage-hands and cameramen's unions in Los Angeles have the continual complaint . . . and oftentimes justified locally . . . that newspapers are unfair to them in the publication of news . . . and yet I couldn't help thinking last week . . . as I tried vainly to check a story with the I. A. T. S. E. and the cameramen . . . that they are more than unfair to themselves . . . for they crawl into a shell and shut up like clams when newspapermen come around . . . always carrying the chip on the shoulder for the press . . . try a little of the wide-open attitude and maybe there'll be better results. . . .

ARTHUR CAESAR . . . Broadway playboy imported to Hollywood by Fox to write Movietone sketches . . . is a great guy and likable . . . but some one is hoping that Fox will return a script to him just for the purpose of saying . . . "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's" . . . that'll hold him. . . .

ONE of the sentences which drew the only spontaneous applause at the debate held last week between the University of California at Los Angeles and the University of Sydney, Australia . . . on the subject "The world would be better off without the movies" . . . was used by one of the Australian boys . . . the argument was . . . "If only because of the fact that the motion picture is directly responsible for the origination of the atrocity known as 'the prolog' . . . it should be banished from the face of the earth." . . . It was an audience of laymen who applauded . . . think it over. . . .

LET'S see what else is taking place. . . . Lowell Sherman just directed and acted in a two-reel Movietone for M-G-M and as a result will be Norma Shearer's leading man in "The Last of Mrs. Cheney" . . . some one . . . when hearing about "Mrs. Cheney" and Sherman asked . . . "What does Lon say about it?" . . . William Bakewell is proving both a great protean artist and fine actor in Doug Fairbank's "The Iron Mask" . . . the kid makes lightning changes in both clothes and character . . . by the way . . . the latest term a la highbrow for talkies is "articulating cinema" . . . let this lay for a week.

Hollywood Notes

Dunlap are publishing a new novelized version of the story, written by E. Barrington. "The Divine Lady" is the first of eight Corinne Griffith features to be made by First National.

Supervisor Lazarus

Jeff Lazarus, who recently came to Fox from the West Coast Theatre chain where he headed the exploitation department, will become a production supervisor for the studio. His first picture will be directed by Al G. Werker. No title has been selected.

Celebrates Anniversary

"Hell's Angels" celebrated one year of actual shooting on October 31. The latest schedule has it slated to open in New York during March. Sometime ago it was supposed to be ready by the past July for presentation. Howard Hughes is still directing it himself, having taken up the megaphone last December when Luther Reed was obligated to meet other contracted assignments.

Ukulele Bound

Ramon Novarro and his troupe left for Hawaii this week to make "Pagan." W. S. Van Dyke will direct under the production supervision of George Kann. Dorothy Janis is to be Novarro's leading lady.

Minus Appendix

Jacqueline Logan has been out of the hospital but one week since her appendix operation, and is starting work immediately on "Ships of the Night," a Rayart special. Duke Worne is directing, the supporting cast including Ray Hallor, Sojin, Ruth Gordon, J. P. McGowan, Glen Cavender and Andy Clyde.

One Dozen Cameramen

Sam Woods will use twelve cameramen to shoot scenes of the big University of Southern California-Stanford football game, Saturday, Nov. 3. The scenes will be used in the production of "College Days" which Wood is directing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Social Editors

The "Edited By" club is Hollywood's newest organization comprised of film editors and cutters. Its function will be primarily social, but has for its express purpose, the betterment of pictures and the production of better understanding and co-operation between producers and film editors. Founders of the club are Frank Lawrence, Lloyd Nosler, George McGuire, Eddie Adams and Roy Stone.

"Arizona" Remakes

Another change of mind on the part of Fox executives results in the remaking of "In Old Arizona" with new changes in the cast. Irving Cummings, who was slated to finish the production when Raoul Walsh

Field Survey of Sound Pictures

It is gratifying to note the marvelous response to the letters we sent to various parts of the country asking for articles and opinions on Sound Pictures. We suggest that every member, or reader watch the publication of these items and make it a point to read them. They actually represent the pulse of the exhibitors from all over the country on this important topic of the day. Last week we published two of these letters, today we publish several more.

I have received letters from several important people in the industry asking for the CLUB'S opinion on certain matters. So you see we are rapidly being recognized as an important factor in the business. Members of the CLUB may well be proud of their affiliation with this great organization which has been sponsored by the MOTION PICTURE NEWS as the Clearing House for all matters pertaining to Box Office Problems and Theatre Operation.

Clinton, Mass. Up to the Minute

While driving through Mass. last week I passed through Clinton, a town of about 10,000 inhabitants and the home of the Hartford-Bigelow Carpet mills, and also stopped off to make the acquaintance of Mr. Keith, manager of the Strand Theatre, the leading playhouse of the town. I was a little fooled on the front appearance of this theatre and rather expected to find a small eight or nine hundred seater. But instead found a 1200 seat beauty. Both the theatre and the manager reflect the high class management.

Found Mr. Keith to be a "regular" who always extends a glad hand to brother managers and visitors. I suggest that if you are within reach of him, you pay a visit. You won't be sorry. I hope we hear something from this man as I'm certain he has a neat bag o' tricks up his sleeve that would look great on these pages. Come on friend Keith, let's hear from you.

Suggestions on Your Vaude Acts

Just what part a manager of a vaudeville theatre in a small town should take in the vaudeville show itself has always been a problem which each one treated in their own way. But I am prompted to ask how many of you sit through your show with the same reactions that your audiences sit through them. I happened upon several smaller towns recently and the thought came to me that possibly a little common sense tempered with good judgment might make many a "punk" show become a "whiz."

In the first place, all artists on a vaudeville bill cannot be expected to understand the type of audience they are playing to. In the second—many of them don't give a whoop. All they are interested in is their number of shows, their salary and then on to the next town to tell the stage hands there what a rotten town the last one was. But what struck me as a corking good bill was pronounced rotten by my host in the first town I visited. It was not rotten. It was just "over their heads." That's plain, simple facts. The stuff the featured act was giving them simply did not reach the audiences' understanding. So I repeat that if you managers, when reviewing your opening vaudeville bill, will try and see it from the same level that your audience must see it, perhaps you will be able to go back stage after the show and make some suggestions to your acts that will make their material more appreciated by your patrons. Just remind them that they are playing in . . . ville, and not Times Square. This is just a tip.

A Reopening and an Editorial

We all recall the free publicity we received on this, that or the other stunt, but it would not require many fingers to figure the number of times you kicked up enough interest as to get a featured spot in the editorial column of your leading paper. In most places the editorial column is a closed book as far as theatres are concerned.

From Bowling Green, Ky., Tony Sudekum of the Crescent Amusement Company sends us a news-story and an editorial from his local paper. Such attention is without doubt a marvelous medium of creating and stimulating good will and for this reason we believe this editorial worthy of reproduction.

Theatres An Asset

The importance of high class, well equipped, modern theatres, is an asset to a community that should not be overlooked.

The Crescent Amusement Company has given to Bowling Green several show houses that would be a credit to a city very much larger. These theatres are conducted on a very high plane and furnish our people with some clean entertainment.

In this particular the Capitol and Diamond are well equipped. The two theatres provided by the Crescent Amusement Company compare most favorably with those of any city in the state, population considered. And yet, when you are stressing the important features of our city, have you ever included the theatres among its important assets? As a rule people will enumerate the schools, parks and factories and the business concerns that employ a number of people. These are given prominence for the reason that they draw and distribute much wealth, and from this viewpoint these industries and institutions cannot be given too much credit. But it is well not to overlook the theatres, and if you do not think this is true, just make it a point some evening, or even afternoon, to check up on the number of out-of-town people who come to Bowling Green to see a good show. It might be of interest to know just how many automobiles from neighboring towns come here during the week, bringing from two to five patrons of the theatres.

Many of these visitors combine a theatre program with shopping, and most of them patronize some business firm, outside of the theatre, before leaving the city. It is well not to forget that the theatre is an asset because of the entertainment and education it affords, and also because it is one of our strong business attractions.

Messrs. J. P. and Russell Masters are very popular with the people of Bowling Green and Warren County, and strive to give the public good, clean amusement. The Capitol has undergone a complete renovation and this popular amusement company plans a fall opening the week of October 22-27, which holds in store for the public a real treat.

If you can think of some way to get your own local paper to give you such publicity, then you may indeed shout it from the housetops. It's worth shouting about.

We would like to receive more information about the activities of the Crescent Amusement Company's theatres.

Jack O'Connell's Sound Booklet

Every member of the CLUB, whether they run sound or silent pictures, is urged to write immediately to Jack O'Connell of the Vita-Temple Theatre in Toledo, Ohio and ask him to send a copy of his latest little booklet—"Hitching A Rumble Seat To A Wheelbarrow."

In this booklet, Mr. O'Connell has set forth a convincing argument to counteract the effect of all these "over-night" synchronized pictures that have flooded the market. It also tends to create interest in this type of entertainment and there are many who are looking for just such aid or suggestions. Besides containing much that would interest theatre men and laity alike, it is, from the viewpoint of good advertising, a fine piece of work. I'm sure Jack won't mind my telling you to write for this booklet. I'm as proud of it as he is.

"The Voice of a Nation"

(Editor's Note:— This is the second batch of short articles and letters that the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE has received in response to their request to certain managers in different localities.)

W. E. Belcher, Manager of the Riviera Theatre in Rochester, N. Y., is short and sweet, but right to the point in telling us what HE thinks about this "sound picture situation."

Dear Mr. Lewis:

"Please be advised that I am thoroughly sold on this new development and feel that it is going to be a great boon for the industry in general. Also, a life-saving tonic for some houses.

"I do not believe, as some would have us imagine, that talking pictures are simply a fad and will lose their appeal. I am convinced that they will remain a permanent part of our program, backed up by public demand. I believe the coming summer will see tremendous strides in this great art of entertainment and sincerely believe we are on the road to better things in the way of motion picture presentation.

"I wish to add that this house is equipped to present Vitaphone and Movietone subjects."

Signed,

W. E. Belcher, Mgr.

Here is another from William A. Levey, of the Beacon theatre, Port Washington, New York, who frankly expresses his opinion on the subject:

Dear Mr. Lewis:

"You have asked me to state in a letter or short article my opinion on the seemingly all important question of the motion picture field of today, namely, talkies and sound pictures.

"While I think it is a trifle premature to form any definite opinion or come to any positive conclusion in this matter, because like every new development it must stand on its own merits and prove itself worthy of public acceptance.

"I am certain that with considerable improvements which will be made in the industry from time to time the sound pictures are here to stay.

"We are still in the crude experimental stage of this policy of motion picture entertainment, both sound and talking pictures. I have seen practically all of the talking pictures which are being shown today and without exception none of them are what their producers claim for them; without exception the personality and charm one has held for the stars now appearing in the talkies is lost. It seems to me as a manager of motion picture theatres and a theatre-goer that the talking pictures fail to bring out that certain something which one experiences in the silent drama.

"As I stated above the sound picture is a fixture—it is interesting, educational and inspiring entertainment and as such will occupy the field of the all silent pictures to a supremacy.

"As for the talking picture I don't think the general picture audience will take friendly to a full length talking picture. A feature picture of 6 or more reels of all talking will become boresome rather than entertaining.

"I do not believe that the talking picture will ever supplant the silent drama or the speaking stage productions."

Signed, William A. Levey

P.S.—"Kind regards to fellow members of the club."

Dear Mr. Lewis:

"Not that I feel I am an authority of judging the Public's desire, for I am not, but I will say my ideas in the past have been pretty near correct, so I will give you my personal version of Sound Pictures, now and for the future.

"I will go back to the year of 1904 and 1905 when I was a reel boy for Howard &

Company of Boston. At that time two reel features were considered a box office attraction. I can recall the first three reel subject (I believe it was Edison's) that came in for bookings. At that time, I do not recall any straight picture houses, but it wasn't many days later that the big rush came for stores and lots to be turned into Nickleodeons, then the great demand for pictures. Each manufacturer was pressed for something big and they gave it, meaning four, five, and six reels. The theatre that advertised a five reel feature got the business, it was only a matter of a few years that a great percentage of these grind houses were turned into homes for the new fad, namely automobiles.

"Houses that were able to keep the pace were redecorated and enlarged, and so time has rolled on.

"We now come to the new age, as we will call it—talking pictures: Back in 1912 I remember a Mr. Snyder who was trying to perfect a daylight screen for daylight pictures. He was also working on a talking machine, one of the old horn type (Edison Record) and had one picture timed fairly good that I heard.

"I was offered a chance to record on a piano while my picture was being filmed, this taking place about four years ago in a studio just outside of Waterbury, Connecticut. Some days later I heard and saw myself playing, it was quite a thrill and made me think that the day wasn't very far away when talking pictures would be the money getter.

"That day is here, it's here to stay, just like the five reel features and the two reeler were in the beginning. Some houses will flop as before, but remember the Exhibitor that is giving his patrons more for the money cannot take it away, and he who has started must keep it up in order to protect his interest, his competitor must follow suit so what is the answer? Sound pictures are here to stay.

"The final answer to your question is this. The theatre that has sound pictures and the best program to offer will be the winner.

"Time will tell."

Signed, Very truly yours,

Edwin J. Loughton, Manager.

Construction Notes and Theatre Openings

The Cliftona, built by Harry Clifton, opened its doors to the citizenry of Circleville, O., last week. This new 800-seat house represents all the latest mechanical devices for the best exhibition of motion pictures. It is thoroughly fireproof, being built entirely of steel and concrete. The auditorium is done in Spanish style, decorated with bright colors. A complete stage has been installed, with dressing rooms and facilities for presenting acts. The lobby, foyer and dressing rooms have been treated to match the auditorium. The operator's booth is provided with specially designed shutters which drop over the machines in case of fire.

Short on Story, Long on Atmosphere
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT isn't much of a story concocted here for Charles Rogers, that up-and-at-'em young man who is winning the popularity stakes for Famous. This one presents a college background—and as far as its settings go it is all to the good. Real shots prevail here for considerable of the exteriors—and Princeton is the college. It genuinely boasts a picturesque setting. The story, strange to say, doesn't release a football game. It tells of a young collegian falling for a carnival girl and getting bad breaks when he is framed by a couple of carnivaleers.

As mentioned above, the settings save it as the story lacks both interest and punch. College yarns at best are not such great shakes because authors of them must skim the surface and rely upon athletics to carry the hero by. With the football game dispensed with here—there was nothing much left to put it over. There is some dialogue, but neither Buddy Rogers nor Mary Brian as the heroine are as successful with their voices as Chester Conklin.

In all it's fair enough for the average trade and through the star's tremendous hold with the younger set—and the fact that it is released for the Fall when colleges are functioning on all six it should do business. But Rogers needs better stories.

Drawing Power: Star's popularity and title. Suitable for all types of houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up title and bill as college story of Princeton. Mention Buddy Rogers as leading all male stars in volume of fan mail. Tie up with schools and colleges.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, October, 1928. Director, Frank Tuttle.

Theme Romance of college youth who falls in love with show girl.

Marked Money

Fair Program Feature
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A FAIR amount of interest, although not a great deal of convincing action, is to be had in this melodrama suited for the neighborhood runs but not for first runs and the like where they are more particular about their "fillums."

There is some good acting in its scenes: a likable characterization by Junior Coghlan; first rate comedy from big Tom Kennedy; a good picture of an irritable though lovable old sea salt as presented by Bert Woodruff; a happy pair of young lovers in the persons of Virginia Bradford and George Duryea. The villains cut up after the conventional manner.

The story's of the frothy, tenuous type and its climax is not conceived in accordance with sane continuity. However, this sort of entertainment has proven to be okay with audiences if one is to judge by serials and such.

Drawing Power: A fair bet for the "neighbies." Exploitation Angles: Feature the kid star, old Bert Woodruff and the aviation climax. Hand out stage money as an attractor.

Theme: Action drama of the part a boy plays in foiling a band of crooks set on stealing a box of money and kidnapping the niece of the man who has befriended him.

Produced and distributed by Pathe. To be released, Nov. 4, 1928. Length, 5506 feet. Original story by Howard J. Green. Adaptation by George Dromgold and Sanford Hewitt. Cameraman, E. Snyder. Production Mgr., R. A. Blaydon. Art Director, Edward Jewell. Assistant Director, E. J. Babbie. Film Editor, Harold McLernon. Director, Spencer Bennet.

"Early to Bed"

(M-G-M—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

LAUREL and Hardy—well, that's enough said. Exhibitors don't need to be advised how good these babies can be.

Here the two Hal Roach funsters have an extremely simple story to work with. Their material when boiled down really amounts to practically nothing. And yet they are funny, get the laughs and strengthen the thought that they are the best comedy team in present-day movies, whether shorts or features. It is all a matter of quality, gentlemen, both in Stan's and Oliver's performances, in the clever direction and the good tone of the material.

Hardy shows he is a more adept comic than his companion in this one. Laurel seems limited to a vacuous expression and a cry-baby look of injured dignity. On the other hand, Hardy gives evidence of a real roysterer whose moods change rapidly, whose bag of facial expressions, gestures and general comical antics is fuller than Laurel's. But both are good. Emphatically so.

The story only has three characters, the amiable pair and their dog. But it carries an impressive veneer of humor and easily deserves the recommendation: "Good for any house."

"The World's Playgrounds"

(M-G-M—One Reel)

SWITZERLAND and its playgrounds where Europe flocks to enjoy winter sports is the most interesting topic of this Ufa Oddities. There are some captivating shots of the various sports—horse racing on the ice, skiing, mountain climbing—and these are fortified by scenes of the natural grandeur of the Swiss Alps.

This little reel is educational in character, but not heavily so. It enables the spectator to make a brief sojourn among the Swiss landmarks, with enjoyment the result. Some lovely pictorial glimpses are had—especially in views of the gently sloping banks of snow and a procession of skiers crossing the snow in the dusk and bearing lanterns on a search for some poor soul lost among the rocks.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Moran of the Marines

Dix Is Good In Made-to-Order Film
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE very title of this picture gives it away. And it is Richard Dix who handles the well-known situation—one of those situations which have become time-worn. The idea exploits a young leather-neck—and his light o' love. It's familiar, naturally, and the star does need stronger material. Here you know from the title and the opening scenes just how it will develop. It doesn't vary from its path.

The plot takes the characters from America to China where the General's daughter is rescued from bandits by the husky mariné. To establish a bit of conflict the hero must be painted as quite without the social pale for a time in order to bring forth the climax that he is among the eligibles. So the old soldier frowns on the romance of his daughter—who dares to disobey her dad's wishes. But the finish comes out right and makes Mr. Moran a gentleman with a background.

There's a certain freshness of treatment about it—a certain slant of humor which brushes it up and makes it quite worth while. Richard Dix plays the title role with his customary abandon and spirit. Ruth Elder, who was especially engaged for the picture, does some flying and succeeds in looking okay.

Drawing Power: Title and star's popularity, coupled with fact that leading woman won fame in the air. Suitable for average house. Exploitation Angles: Play up title and feature star in breezy role. Mention Ruth Elder. Bill as romance.

Theme: Romance of marine who falls in love with General's daughter and wins her.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, October, 1928. Director, Frank Strayer.

"A Jim Jam Janitor"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

ALTHOUGH there is a fair amount of laughs supplied in this Mack Sennett-Pathe comedy featuring Johnny Burke, the former vaudeville headliner is capable of better. Burke has the stuff, but does not get the backing in "gags" and story. On this occasion he is given the role of custodian of the baggage department of a large hotel. When a woman guest of the hotel endeavors to use him as a means of arousing her husband's jealousy, Burke is let in on a lot of rough situations, that are good for a number of chuckles. Vernon Dent, and Glen Cavender turn out good work in their comic roles of this film. Carmelita Geraghty, the dark-eyed beauty appears to advantage as the mischievous wife. Harry Edwards directed.

"The Heart of General Robert E. Lee"

(M-G-M—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A HIGH class subject with pictorial splendor, simplicity and strength of story and some fine acting. A satisfactory drama for all telling of an incident in the life of a genuinely great American, of the struggle that was his to determine whether or not his men were to continue fighting against seemingly overwhelming odds. Strong emotional passages make their entrance, there is a strong patriotic fervor and there is also the exuberance of young love—all in all, it possesses qualities that determine a favorable reception.

Marjorie Daw and Richard Walling are the young lovers, the girl a Virginian and the boy an adherent to the cause of the North. The boy goes to war and during his absence his father nears death. The boy hears the news and passes through the Confederate lines disguised as a Southern captain. He is captured as a spy. The girl's plea to the General that the boy be set free and that the slaughter of other boys in the armies cease is shown as having an important part in determining Lee's decision to end the war.

Marjorie Daw is seen to splendid advantage as the young girl, whose womanhood is aroused to the highest pitch at the prospect of losing the man she loves. Richard Walling gives a subdued performance as the Northern boy while a dignified and becoming characterization of the great Southerner is given by J. Barney Sherry. Playing with his son as his father in the drama is William Walling, who is seen to fine advantage. R. William Neill contributed the direction.

You can't go wrong with a subject of this staunch calibre.

"The Magic City"

(Educational—One Reel)

NEW YORK CITY is always worth looking at and here the Our World Today camera contributes some more views of the tight little isle of Manhattan, its numerous spans and skyscrapers. The captions are just about average; some "jazz" would not be bad at all. The second item of the "Magazine" entitled "Knight Clubs of Long Ago" is a purely tame affair, it being a few scenes from a Swedish pageant recalling the days of jousting knights.

The third and last item of the Magazine introduces a little pep as it presents some snappy scenes of traffic, animals and humans whose pace is speeded up by the cameraman.

Fair entertainment.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"The Skywayman"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

AVIATION topics are now on the crest of the wave of popular interest. Of no momentary nature is the appeal which they have exerted time and time again on the public. Yep, aviation gets the headlines these days.

Therefore, this two-reeler should be accorded a good response from the movie fans, although it is really more calculated for juvenile consumption. But it can be included in the adult bill of fare, also.

The plot revealed by Thomson Burtis' story is the old pulverized and westernized material that has served time without number as the motif for the doings of three humans—one of them a villain, the other a helpless young maid and the last her courageous protector. The only difference in this case is that the old material has a new setting, the air, a sphere of action which has its appeal.

It is balanced with a variety of action shots, of planes in combat, sudden descents by parachutes, athletic prowess on the wing of a plane, etc. Revolving around Reed Howes, the ace of the Border Patrol, are a series of incidents in which participate his girl and a criminal impersonating an airman. The latter is anxious to get even with the girl's dad who sent one of the gang to prison. The girl is kidnapped and Howes goes to her rescue. This type of action, tried and true, will go over.

Marjorie Daw plays opposite Howes and the supporting players include Roy Stewart, Henry Barrows, Bobby Dunn, Lionel Hal and Buck Black. The production is one by Charles R. Rogers and Harry J. Brown, the latter directing. Bruce Mitchell is associate director, Frank Good cameraman, and Fred Allen editor.

"Bumping Along"

(Educational—One Reel)

A DESERVING Cameo, this new effort in the field of screen comedy, although slapstick all the way, will receive a good response of laughter when shown on the screen. There's no slowness about it and there are several flips and falls taken by the characters with good result. Of course, some of its humor has been kept in cold-storage, but on the whole the humor is such that satisfies the unsophisticated movie-goer.

Francis J. Martin contributed the direction, William Hyer the photography, and Estelle Bradley, Eva Thatcher and Henry Murdock the support for Gene Stone and Marshall Ruth, who co-star with fair success.—RAYMOND GANLY.

was injured, will direct it after all, despite reports that Walsh had recovered sufficiently to resume work. Warner Baxter, Edmund Lowe, Farrell McDonald, Tom Santschi, Frank Campeau and Edward Piel, Sr., will comprise the cast of the new Movietone version. Maria Alba, the Spanish "discovery," will be succeeded in the cast by Dorothy Burgis, who is imported from the local legitimate stage. Miss Alba's dialect, particularly in exciting moments of talk, was found impractical for Movietone purposes.

Co-starred

Victor McLaglen and Leatrice Joy will be co-starred in "The Baggage-Smasher" for Fox. John Ford will direct.

"Blue Danube" in Work

Henry Lehrman starts work this week on "The Blue Danube," which is to be a two-reel Movietone. The cast includes Marjorie Beebe, Arthur Stone, Stuart Erwin and George Bickle. The last-named is the once-famous musical comedy funster of Bickle and Watson in the "Follies" and in vaudeville of Bickle, Watson and Roth.

A Paramount Contract

Viola Brothers Shore has been placed under a long-term contract to write for Paramount. Her first will be an adaptation of Owen Davis', "Two Shall Meet." Buddy Rogers will head the cast, Dorothy Arzner directing.

Change of Title

Sir James M. Barrie is evidently not box-office to Paramount, hence the title of his "Half-Hour" has been changed to "The Doctor's Secret." William De Mille is directing it as a 100 per cent talkie.

Signs with Universal

Mary Philbin has been signed to a new contract by Universal. Her scheduled trip to Europe has been indefinitely postponed, since Miss Philbin will be co-starred with Conrad Veidt in "The Return of the Phantom," a sequel to "The Phantom of the Opera," which Paul Leni will direct.

Keaton's Next

Buster Keaton's next for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be "Spite Marriage." Lew Lipton is writing it as an original story.

Brice to Free-Lance

Monte Brice, one of Paramount's ace scenario writers, left that firm last week when his contract expired. He intends to free-lance for the next few months.

LeRoy and White

Mervyn Le Roy has been assigned to direct Alice White's next First National vehicle, "Bluffers," a college story by Robert Carr. Miss White is now working with Jack Mullhall in F. N.'s "Ritzy Rosie."

Rin-Tin-Tin Busy

Rin-Tin-Tin has started work on another picture for Warner Bros., "Frozen River," which will be three for the dog star this year.

Producing Abroad

Universal's latest for foreign production is "The Masked Marvel," from a successful Viennese musical comedy. Nan Cochrane and Faith Thomas are adapting the play.

Finishes Work

Texas Guinan has finished work in "Queen of the Night Clubs," the Warner-Vitaphone feature. This all-talking picture is now in the cutting room.

Columbia Signs Green

Howard J. Green, well known writer, has been signed by Columbia to write the screen story for "The College Coquette," which is to go into immediate production.

Add "Lena Smith"

Paramount has signed Alexander Woloshin, free-lance player for the role of janitor in the Joseph von Sternberg production, "The Case of Lena Smith," with Esther Ralston.

Change in Cast

Neil Hamilton will appear in Bebe Daniels' next vehicle for Paramount, tentatively titled "The Big Scoop." Hamilton will replace Robert Castle.

Will Write Dialogue

S. S. Van Dine, author of "The Canary Murder Case," will write dialogue for the talkie Paramount is to make of this novel. Mal St. Clair will direct and the cast will include William Powell, James Hall, Jean Arthur and Louise Brooks.

Titles for "Someone to Love"

George Marion, Jr., will title Charles "Buddy" Rogers new starring picture, "Someone to Love," announces Paramount. F. Richard Jones directed and the cast includes Mary Brian, James Kirkwood, Jack Oakie and William Austin.

Five Year Contract

Maurice Pivar, supervising film editor at Universal has signed a new five year contract, it is announced by Carl Laemmle, president.

Key City Reports

New York City

EVERYTHING considered it was just a regular week along Broadway the past seven days. No highlights except to repeat those of the past two weeks—the increase of attendance at the Capitol where holdovers have been in order for some time, and the consistent business being done at the Winter Garden where Jolson's "Singing Fool" holds forth. The weather was cool.

M-G-M's "While the City Sleeps," with Lon Chaney and Anita Page, gave the Capitol another excellent week's business, with shooting distance of the records hung up by "Dancing Daughters." Chaney's picture has sound effects and synchronized score. Other talking shorts were included in the program. The picture was held for another week.

The lobby of the Winter garden shows about as much activity as any theatre in town. Specs are hawking their wares in the vicinity of this theatre and there is a serious-money hum all around the place. The "Singing Fool" is cleaning up. That it will run 'way ahead of the "Jazz Singer" is a safe conclusion.

The Strand also got by with a very fair week's business with First National's "Waterfront," synchronized score and a few sound effects. Vitaphone shorts also helped things along. At the Roxy, "Me, Gangster" (Fox) gave this house just a fair week, contrasting advance reports of what was expected of this picture. Comment had it that opportunities to capitalize on certain episodes in the excellent Charlie Coe story, were not used. At the Paramount, "Take Me Home," rated as just a so-so Bebe Daniels vehicle, let attendance off quite noticeably.

The Criterion finished a year and three months run of "Wings" to strong business. There was a last week rush of those who wished to part with $2 to witness this fine picture, right in the face of it going into the Rialto at popular prices. There wasn't a vacant seat in the Criterion at the last performance last Friday night. Saturday saw "Wings" at the Rialto where on week end business it did practically as much as "Battle of the Sexes" did the whole week previous. The Griffith picture did not get much of a tumble during its two week's run. At The Rivoli, von Stroheim's "Wedding March" has been doing fair enough and it will conclude a four week's stay on Nov. 9th when U. A.'s "The Woman Disputed" goes in. Norma Talmadge is featured in the latter.

An announcement from M-G-M. states that "White Shadows," at the Astor, will in the near future be replaced by "Alias Jimmy Valentine," a combination of straight movie and dialogue. "White Shadows" has been making the grade right along during its stay at this house. Universal followed "Lonesome" with "Melody of Love," another sound and dialogue U picture and last week's business was O. K. Sound pictures have apparently given this house the tonic it needed—and of course, Ben Bernie and his band are of considerable help, too.

The Central, with "Lilac Time" (F. N.) stepped along about the same pace as the previous week—which means satisfactory trade—and the same can be chalked up for Fox's "Four Devils" and sound, at the Gaiety. Warner's "Home Towners" Vitaphoned all-talkie at Warners is getting a good break among the well-attended houses.

The Cameo is holding Amkino's "Three Comrades and One Invention" (Sovkino) for a third week. "A Shanghai Document," spoken of as a page from the Chinese Revolution, is also included in the bill. For the past two Saturday's, midnight shows have been in evidence.

Columbia's "Submarine" has finished its run at the Embassy, a run that was all in all very satisfactory. Tiffany-Stahl's "The Cavalier," with R C A synchronization and a couple of incidental songs and sound effects, opened Tuesday of the current week for a stay until Nov. 9, when another Tiffany-Stahl picture, "The Marriage Contract," will go in.

Los Angeles

LAST week saw the closing of three run pictures in local theatres. "Simba," the wild animal production, stopped at the Biltmore after several weeks at two-a-day. "White Shadows in the South Seas," after ten weeks at Grauman's Egyptian closed to weak business, and will be replaced Nov. 1 with Warner's "Noah's Ark." Paramount's "The Patriot" left the Criterion after a three week stay, with "King of Kings" in sound currently in for a run.

Al Jolson in "Singing Fool" coupled with Larry Ceballos stage show, is playing to capacity at Warners Hollywood. Long lines every day, with week-end business topping anything ever before seen in town.

Norma Talmadge in "Woman Disputed" at the United Artists, backed by a corking good stage show, hit $25,000 gross the first week, which is close to house record established by "Sadie Thompson."

The United Artists got top business on the week among downtown Los Angeles theatres; but Loew's State with Billie Dove in "The Night Watch" showed a profit at around $23,000. This star is well established at the State, and always rates to bring the gross up above average.

Metropolitan, with Paramount's "The First Kiss" and Publix stage unit, just got by with average business.

Pantages topped regular good business with showing of Universal's first all-talker, "Melody of Love" in conjunction with vaudeville. William Boyd in Pathe's "Power" was the film attraction at the Hillstreet, the other vaudeville house.

Fox's "Mother Knows Best" at Carthay Circle in fifth week struggled along with gross of $10,000 and will be replaced Nov. 5 with Paramount's all talkie, "Interference."

Oklahoma City

REAL Fall weather prevailed in Oklahoma City last week and helped to increase the patronage at all the downtown theatres.

At the Capitol, Emil Jannings, with Lewis Stone and Florence Vidor, presented "The Patriot" to large and well pleased crowds.

The National Players in repertoire presented "Laff That Off" as part of the bill at the Criterion. The feature picture, "Moran of the Marines," made the show a real good one.

The Liberty presented "Mother Knows Best" to good patronage.

"What Price Glory" enjoyed good business at the Rialto. Greta Garbo in "The Mysterious Lady" played at the Majestic.

Pittsburgh

ANOTHER big week for Loew's Penn. This time they had D. W. Griffith's "The Battle of the Sexes," which proved to be excellent entertainment and won the approval of the fans as well as the press. Stage attraction was the Publix unit entitled "Houseboat."

Business was good at the Stanley, where the talkie "The Terror" held sway. This is a great thriller with the talking and sound sequences and is good entertainment.

The Aldine also reported a good week with "Mother Knows Best." A human-interest drama, one of the best of its kind for some time.

The Davis had an average week's business with Johnny Hines in "The Wright Idea" and six acts of Keith vaudeville.

The Grand had "The Singing Fool" for a second week. Business continues very big and the production is again held over.

"The King of Kings" drew high class audiences to the Liberty, and business was satisfactory.

"The Patriot" at the Regent, although warmly acclaimed by the fans, did not draw as well as expected.

"Dancing Daughters" brought the best week's business to the Cameraphone in many months.

The Alhambra did but fair with "The Charge of the Gauchos."

Harrisburg, Pa.

CONTINUING a record maintained thus far throughout the Fall season, the Harrisburg theatres generally reported satisfactory business the week ending October 27th.

"Four Sons" at the Colonial had consistently good audiences all week.

At the Victoria, Bebe Daniels in "Take Me Home" provided exceptionally good comedy.

"Battle of the Sexes," played at Loew's Regent, did not draw to the extent expected, but was far from a losing proposition.

"The Horseman of the Plains," with Tom Mix, was shown at the State the last part of the week, and pulled capacity houses every night.

The Grand showed "Three Miles Up," and made a financial go of it, while the Rialto also profited with the screening of "Forbidden Hours."

Monty Banks in "A Perfect Gentleman" held forth at the Broad Street, and the Russell featured a double bill, consisting of "The Garden of Eden" and "California."

In all the theatres showing newsreels there was added interest in pictures recording the activities of the candidates in the presidential campaign.

Des Moines

THE Capitol Theatre showing "Beggars of Life" with Wallace Beery and with a Publix stage show quite up to standard, still had quite a battle to hold its own against "The Singing Fool" showing in its second week at the Des Moines. This feature while not staggering under the first week's crowds held out to fine business for the entire stay of the film. The box office exceeded the draw of "The Jazz Singer."

Minneapolis

TWO pictures finished out their record-breaking runs in Minneapolis this week and each held up well until the last day. "Wings," at the Strand, came to the end of its six weeks run—two weeks longer than any picture has ever stayed at that theatre. At the State Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" finished out its three weeks' engagement, breaking the previous record at the State by a week.

The Minnesota did a very nice week's business with Dolores Del Rio in "The Red Dance," supplemented by the Publix stage show, "Ocean Blue." The Lyric inaugurated its new policy—that of showing one picture a week instead of two—and found Buster Keaton in "Steamboat Bill, Jr.," to have a pull with the crowds.

At the Hennepin-Orpheum Rod La Rocque in "Love Over Night" proved a first rate addition to the vaudeville program, while "Wolf Fangs" seemed to please at the Pantages.

At the Unique theatre "Pitfalls of Passion," did a fair business to "ladies only."

The neighborhood theatres enjoyed excellent business for the most part. The newest one—the Granada—is especially prosperous and is enjoying full houses. Pictures which were shown at the Granada, Lagoon, Loring, Rialto, Lyndale, American and Arion included "The Fleet's In," "The Patriot," "The Road to Ruin," "The Terror," "Fazil" and "Their Hour."

Portland, Ore.

A NEW spirit has been born in Portland, according to our honored Mayor Geo. L. Baker, himself a leading showman of a quarter of a century, and this spirit was clearly manifested at the majority of first-run houses during the week.

John Hamrick's Music Box was clearly the center of attraction, where Al Jolson, in "The Singing Fool," continued for a second week with ever-increasing crowds, a number seeing the performance for the second and third time.

Back came Colleen Moore to the Broadway in "Lilac Time," and for the first few days looked like a big box-office for the week, but fell off considerably at the end.

In spite of usual adverse criticism by local reviewers, Pantages drew heavily with a half dozen clever novelty acts, supplemented by "Court Martial," featuring Jack Holt and Betty Compson.

"Battle of the Sexes" opened at the United Artists for a two weeks' stay, and the acting of both Jean Hersholt and Phyllis Haver was enjoyed. Movietone entertainment has also been added here, with Johnny Merwin, Marjorie Harris and Van & Schenck in up-to-the-minute songs. A worthy bill which should have brought bigger box-office.

"Caught in the Fog" continued for the second week at the Blue Mouse, and evening business drew full houses.

At Tebbett's Oriental "The Garden of Eden" played to good business.

On the screen at the Portland Theatre "The River Pirate" registered fairly well.

Birmingham, Ala.

THE past week in Birmingham proved a good one, from a box-office standpoint. With the exception of one day excellent weather prevailed throughout the week.

The Alabama, with Warner Brothers' Vitaphone picture, "The Singing Fool," with Al Jolson, played to absolute capacity business all week.

The Ritz with FBO's "Hit of the Show," starring Joe E. Brown, a Photophone production, and personal appearance of Clara Kimball Young, with four other Keith vaudeville acts, had fair business.

The Empire, with Lillian Gish and Lars Hansen, in "The Wind," was only listed at fair business.

The Trionon, with Clara Bow, in "The Primrose Path," had average business.

The Strand, with a return engagement of Paramount's "The First Kiss," starring Fay Wray and Gary Cooper, had fair business.

The Erlanger, road-showing "Wings," Paramount, with Clara Bow, Buddy Rogers and an all-star cast, with sound effects and orchestra, had only ordinary business.

The neighborhoods report a slight increase in business, with North Birmingham going into stock-tabs as added attractions, under direction of Manager Jack Marshall. The Princess, redecorated, reopened the past week, and Director Dick Kennedy had very good attendance.

Hollywood Notes

Max Parker Signed

John McCormick has signed Max Parker to act as art director for First National's "Synthetic Sin."

Fawcett and Jennings

George Fawcett and DeWitt Jennings have been assigned for important roles in "Stranded in Paradise."

Title Changes

Tiffany-Stahl announces that "Broadway Fever" is to be the new title for the Sally O'Neil picture which was temporarily called "Applause."

Two changes have been made by M-G-M "Gold Braid" to "The Flying Ensign"; "Adrienne Lecouvreur" to "Dream of Love." "Street Fair" becomes "Christine."

Conselman to Supervise

William Conselman has been signed by Pathe to supervise a series of pictures, the first of which will be "Listen Baby." Conselman will prepare his own continuity and dialogue for this one which is to be done with Photophone. He will work closely with Paul Bern on other productions.

Blaydon Promoted

Richard A. Blaydon has been appointed production manager for the Paul Bern productions at the Pathe studios. At present he is busy with "Geraldine," "Noisy Neighbors" and other Bern features.

Voice Tests

The first experiments and voice tests are under way at First National studios, where a supporting cast for Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackaill, playing in "Stranded in Paradise" from Donn Byrne's story, "Changeling," is being selected. Both Sills and Miss Mackaill are well qualified and much care is to be taken with their support. August Tollaie, character actor is the first to be selected.

Fox Completes Three

Newly finished pictures from Fox include, "Taking a Chance," Rex Bell's starring vehicle, directed by Norman McLeod; Emmett Flynn's production, "The Veiled Woman," with Lia Tora, and "Husbands and Lovers," with June Collyer and Conrad Nagel and directed by Ray Cannon.

Paramount Launches Four

New Paramount pictures in work include the von Sternberg production "The Case of Lena Smith," with Esther Ralston and James Hall; "Tong War," directed by William Wellman, with Florence Vidor and Wallace Beery; "Marquis Preferred," with Adolphe Menjou, and "Sunset Pass," a Zane Grey western with Jack Holt.

Sutherland Is Assigned

Edward Sutherland is to direct Bebe Daniels in her next starring picture for Paramount, "The Big Scoop."

Another Helen in the Movies

Frances Hyland is busily engaged by Tiffany-Stahl in writing the continuity for "Helen of London," a novel by Sidney Gowing, to be directed by George Archainbault.

Baltimore

BUSINESS at the first-run houses, with the exception of a few here was very good during the week beginning Monday, October 22.

Lon Chaney proved that he is still a big favorite in Baltimore by the reception his latest starring vehicle "While the City Sleeps" received at Loew's Theatre. Throughout the week patronage was very good.

"The Singing Fool," starring Al Jolson, as a talker at Warner's Metropolitan, still had them standing during its third week at that playhouse. Business was excellent.

The largest record for receipts at Loew's Stanley was done recently by "Our Dancing Daughters," "Wings," shown as a sound film this past week, almost reached that record despite the fact that it had been shown previously as a silent.

"Brotherly Love" proved a fine patron puller at Loew's Valencia.

At the Keith-Albee New Garden "Red Lips" proved a good attraction during the entire six days.

"The Air Circus," during its second week, did not measure up to what was expected and business was only fair for this sound talker with other short talking films.

"Caught in the Fog," the sound-talker at the Rivoli, was a good attraction for nights but the matinees were somewhat off.

At the Keith-Albee Hippodrome "The Naughty Duchess" did not pull so strong, even though there was good vaudeville.

Salt Lake City

SOME highly satisfactory reports have been received this past week regarding the attendance at motion picture theatres here. Some special productions as well as invigorating fall weather have done much toward the growing attendance.

"The Street Angel," a Fox special, was very well received at the Capitol Theatre, where packed houses were the rule continuously.

Erich von Stroheim in "The Wedding March" drew above the average crowds at the Paramount Empress Theatre.

Lon Chaney in his newest release "While the City Sleeps" drew packed houses to the Pantages in connection with the vaudeville bill presented there.

Fairly good sized houses were had at the Victory Theatre to witness Pola Negri in "The Woman from Moscow," a sound picture. Vitaphone acts were also presented as was the Movietone News.

The American Theatre has opened with a new policy this past week, offering United Artists productions, and the large house was fairly filled each night during the opening production, "Two Lovers."

Phyllis Haver in "Tenth Avenue," with Victor Varconi and James Schildkraut, was well attended at the Gem throughout the week.

The second run house, the Rialto, presented very successfully "The Jazz Singer" this week. "Laugh, Clown Laugh" did a satisfactory business as a second run at the Mission Theatre, a suburban house here, and The Tower had splendid results with "The Divine Woman," as a second run.

At the State Theatre here Olive Borden in "Virgin Lips" was well attended.

Cincinnati

BUSINESS in Cincinnati is again on the upward move; in fact, the past week has been as good as any of last season and much better than some.

Keith's, with first week of sound pictures, had an excellent week with "King of Kings," despite heavy opposition of other houses. The picture was road showed here previously, at which time it hung up a box office record, and the success of the showing with sound effects and synchronization at popular prices, has been such that the picture will be held over for a second week.

The Albee, with Bebe Daniels in "Take Me Home" had good crowds all week, not altogether on account of the picture, but partially as the result of an unusually good and diversified vaudeville bill which helped materially in selling the program to the public.

The Capitol with second week of "The Wedding March" duplicated the high attendance records of the initial run. Sound effects for this feature and the Movietone seemed to particularly catch the audience's fancy and they came in droves.

The Erlanger Grand, a legitimate house, ended a three weeks' showing of "Wings" to what is considered a box-office record in Cincinnati for a continuous run. Up to the present week, business at this house seemed to have had a rather demoralizing effect on the attendance at other downtown theatres.

At the Strand, where "Singapore Mutiny" was on view the week as a whole checked up well.

"Brotherly Love," the first half of the week at the Family, followed by "Code of the Scarlet" for the remainder of the week, did nicely.

Palace, pictures and vaudeville, although not turning 'em away, nevertheless maintained a steady flow which showed up nicely on the balance sheet.

The Orpheum, a neighborhood house, is getting a big share of the money with second run pictures shown shortly after the downtown programs. Vitaphone and Movietone, recently installed at this house, has built up the patronage wonderfully.

Other neighborhood houses report business from fair to good.

Cleveland

ANOTHER good week for the downtown first run picture theatres can be recorded. It is also interesting to notice that while all of the big pictures did big business, a house record was broken only by a talking picture. This was with "Midnight Taxi," which played to very large attendance all week, and is being held over for a second week at the Cameo.

"Four Sons" was such a success at Keith's Hippodrome that the foyer was continually filled with patrons waiting for seats. The picture was unanimously praised by both critics and patrons.

"Wings" did remarkably well during its third week at the Stillman. This is the first showing of the picture at popular prices, following a phenomenal road show engagement of 13 weeks. It will play a fourth week at the Stillman.

"The Woman Disputed," agreed to be one of Norma Talmadge's best pictures, played to large crowds all week at the Allen. It has all the elements of a box office attraction.

"The Crash" did fairly well at the State. The picture lacks some of the punch that usually characterizes Sills' pictures.

"The Red Dance" was well received at Keith's Palace and well attended. Dolores Del Rio and Charles Farrell divided honors equally in this tale.

"Captain Swagger" did very good business at Keith's East 105th Street Theatre where it was the feature attraction the first half of the week. "Taxi 13," shown the last half of the week, also made a good record for itself.

"While the City Sleeps" and "The Whip" made up the week's bill at the Park. The former did very well, but the latter was just fair.

"Simba," playing its second week at the Colonial at $1.50 top, continues to play to big crowds.

Neighborhood houses are resigned to doing just fair business this fall. Few of them are putting in sound devices. So, while not sharing in the big profits, they are not participating in the heavy expenditures.

Ottawa

GOOD pictures everywhere was the rule of the week in Ottawa, Ontario, and all exhibitors wore a smile. The weather was appropriate for theatre-going and football interest was on the wane with the result that the theatres held the centre of the stage.

Tremendous business was done at B. F. Keith's Theatre, thanks to a particularly strong picture and vaudeville bill, the film attraction being "Half a Bride." The total for the week was close to the house record.

Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In" scored heavily at the Regent Theatre. As usual, Clara was restful to the eyes.

"Four Sons," with its great human interest story, was a handsome pictorial treat at the Centre Theatre and crowds were considerably above average. This feature's reputation had preceded it to Ottawa with the result that many hurried to see it.

Marion Davies in "The Cardboard Lover" caused a rush to the Imperial Theatre.

Good old-fashioned action pictures were in evidence at the neighborhood houses and the patronage was typically good. The Fern Theatre showed "Flaming Eagle."

"Alias the Lone Wolf" was revived at the Rex Theatre with good result and interest was heightened by the last chapter of "Vanishing Rider."

"Brass Knuckles" at the Columbia Theatre was a crook melodrama that had them gripping their seats and cheering, while the final instalment of "Man Without a Face" helped to pack the house.

Dallas

ATTENDANCE at the Dallas first run theatres was considerably off during the past week. The best reason to be offered for this is that it was the first week after the fifteen-day State Fair of Texas. Another good reason is that the attractions offered were not up to par and so many unusually good pictures have been offered to Dallas theatregoers lately that a mediocre picture just won't bring them.

"Beggars of Life" with Wallace Beery and Richard Arlen at the Melba brought only fair business. Wallace Beery does not have the following in Dallas to enable him to turn in a week of good business if he is the star in an attraction.

At the Palace "Two Lovers," starring Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, also failed to get the business and the gross for the week was very much below expectations. Cameos proved to be a pleasing Publix stage presentation and gave the program a boost.

"Win That Girl" featuring Sue Carol, and David Rollins, checked off a good week for the Majestic. Eddie Pardo, headlining the Interstate Vaudeville bill, gets the greater part of the credit for the good business, however, and may be counted upon to get the business in Dallas.

"Man-Made Woman," with Leatrice Joy, John Boles and H. B. Warner, brought only fair business to the Capitol.

The Old Mill secured good business with "The Crash," starring Milton Sills and Thelma Todd, which was one of the best pictures to be offered during the week at the first-run theatres.

Another good gross was turned in by the Arcadia for the past week. The features offered were "The Little Snob," with May McAvoy, and "Four Walls," with John Gilbert and Joan Crawford.

The Ritz, featuring second run synchronized features, failed to hold the good business enjoyed for the first few days after opening. "The Lights of New York" got the business "State Street Sadie" with Conrad Nagel and Myrna Loy failed to bring them in. The Ritz is working under a handicap in that it is in the location that featured cheap pictures and cheap vaudeville and the public cannot understand all this in a week's time.

Chicago

"THE SINGING FOOL," at the Mc-Vickers Theatre, continued to be the outstanding feature of the Chicago loop with capacity houses the rule.

"The Man Who Laughs" ended its fairly successful run at the Roosevelt, yielding the screen to "Mother Knows Best," which got away to a good start.

"The Woman Disputed" remained at the United Artists Theatre, playing to satisfactory business.

Business was average at the downtown weekly change houses, the Chicago offering as its screen feature "Show People," Spitalny's orchestral feature "Faust" and "Pow Wow" as its stage attraction.

"Docks of New York" was well liked at the Oriental, where Paul Ash who is nearing the end of his engagement staged "Come On, Red," with Red Grange in person.

"The Patriot" was a strong drawing card at the Avalon, Del Lampe and his band and Vitaphone also being on the program. The Capitol also had a good week with "Lilac Time" with sound on the screen and Roy Dietrich on the stage, Fox Movietone News and Vitaphone.

"Caught in the Fog" was the feature picture of both the Granada and Marbro. Francis X. Bushman appeared in person at the former. Big crowds flocked to both theatres.

Two big B & K houses, the Uptown and Tivoli, did good business with "Tempest" as the feature and their usual big stage shows.

Milwaukee

MODERATELY good business was the lot of down town theatres last week. The Food Show in progress throughout the week detracted somewhat from the picture business but patronage was not materially affected by it.

"Wings" at the Strand takes the honors for greatest popularity. The box office was at all times of the day besieged by crowds. The picture began its second week and will no doubt continue at the Strand for a few weeks more.

"The Singing Fool" finishes its third week at the Garden and will be continued for some time longer. Here too business was exceedingly good.

The Alhambra was a busy place this week. Its attraction was "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and fared very well.

"Beggars of Life" drew fair patronage at the Wisconsin.

"While the City Sleeps" drew all the Lon Chaney fans, and there are many, to the Majestic this week with very satisfactory results.

The Merrill with "The Sawdust Paradise" was fairly well attended.

The Riverside had a very good week. Its photoplay feature was "Craig's Wife," which apparently was greatly enjoyed by patrons of this theatre.

"The Perfect Crime" was the Orpheum's feature and played to good houses.

The neighborhood theatres did unusually good business throughout the week. No doubt the strong attractions were directly responsible. "State Street Sadie" at the Uptown, Garfield and Modjeska brought in excellent patronage to these houses.

"Street Angel" did remarkable business at the Oriental and Tower during its four days run. "Rain" at the Venetian and Dwyer drew excellent patronage.

Tampa

CHILLY nights ushered in our first touch of winter this week, but the chill didn't seem to put any material pep into the business of the show-shops. The week went over just about average all around town.

After the record week at the Tampa, this week's business looked rather slim. The feature of the first half, "The Battle of the Sexes," didn't start anything, business running just about average. "Moran of the Marines," featured the last half, did better. There were two good reasons, for Richard Dix, the star, is very popular here, and then there was quite a little interest in Ruth Elder, who lived at Lakeland, near here, before she made the Atlantic hop.

The "talkies" at the Victory pulled the usual good business. They had "The Midnight Taxi" as the feature attraction. Four extra good Vitaphone acts, the Movietone News and Al Jolson in his talking trailer.

The Strand had an average week, opening with "Say It With Sables," which went over fairly good. "The Crash" showed up better at the box office and clicked a little better than average. "The Little Yellow House" closed the week to fair returns.

The second runs at the Franklin pulled about the usual returns. All three had been very good cards on their first appearance here. "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris," "Variety" and "Feel My Pulse" were the features of this week's bills.

Atlanta

"THE SINGING FOOL" continues to be the biggest draw in Atlanta. After breaking all records at the Howard Theatre last week during the initial six-day period of its originally scheduled twelve-day run, the picture shifted to the Rialto Monday, October 22, and set a new high record for that house. Incidentally the Rialto scale was raised to a par with the Howard for the run of "The Singing Fool" and so remarkable was the gross it achieved that the management will hold it for another week, making a total of three weeks on the Atlanta first run.

Keith's Georgia rolled up a good gross this week with its first sound picture, "The River Pirate."

The Metropolitan Theatre is enjoying the best business for a long time with Cecil B. DeMille's "The King of Kings."

Loew's Capitol had just about average with "The Man Who Laughs." The general criticism is that the picture drags and lacks the requisite popular appeal for box-office success.

"Two Lovers" at the Howard Theatre did not measure up to expectations as a box-office attraction.

Loew's Grand fell off the first three days with a third-run of "Forgotten Faces." Receipts improved during the last three days when "A Certain Young Man" came on.

The Tudor had only fair business during the week, depending upon "The Count of Ten" the first half, and getting mediocre results; then coming in with "The Wolf's Trail" for the last half and faring but little better.

Indianapolis

ANOTHER good week of fall business was evident in Indianapolis theatres last week.

Apollo announced Al Jolson's "The Singing Fool," which has been playing to capacity houses will be held the fourth week.

"Wings," which had a splendid week of business at the Circle, was held for the second week. It was one of the few pictures in the history of the Circle to be held the second week. Every box office record in the past was broken last week by "Wings."

D. W. Griffith's "The Battle of the Sexes" had a satisfactory week's run at the Palace.

Colleen Moore in "Oh Kay" played to well filled houses during the week. Charlie Davis' band presented "Wonderful Girl," with its usual popular appeal.

"The Road to Ruin" at Keith's was a flop.

Neighborhood houses did fair business.

San Francisco

COOOL theatre-attending weather, good attractions and a couple of specials, made the week profitable for the downtown first-run theatres. Resident theatres of the higher type reported good business.

The outstanding box-office attraction of the week was at the Loew's Warfield Theatre. Here Bebe Daniels in "Take Me Home" was shown.

At the Granada Theatre "Me, Gangster" was shown, which together with the Publix Revue brought good business to that theatre.

The St. Francis Theatre continued to do remarkable business with "Wings," and the California Theatre also reported good business with "White Shadows in the South Seas" during its last week in showing this picture.

The El Capitan Theatre did a fair business with the picture "Driftwood," but not as good as expected.

The Imperial Theatre reported a good average business with the picture "Brass Knuckles," and the Embassy Theatre, which is the local Vitaphone theatre, reported fair business the last week when "Caught in the Fog" was shown.

Pantages Theatre reported better business than usual with the picture "Lonesome." The theatre was crowded all week.

In the residential districts, the Marina Theatre did exceptionally well with "Gateway of the Moon," and the coliseum reported very good business with "Steamboat Bill, Jr.," in which Buster Keaton starred.

"The Big City" and "Oh, What a Night," filled the new Amazon Theatre in the evenings.

Albany

WHILE no records were broken either in Albany or Troy last week by offerings at the various motion picture theatres, business generally was reported as being very satisfactory.

The Leland used Marion Davies in "The Cardboard Lover" with the crowds being held out each night and with Tuesday running ahead of Monday in receipts. Along with the feature, there was a Grantland Rice picture that always has a following in Albany, and also one of the "Our Gang" series.

First run double features continue to draw good business at the Clinton Square Theatre, where the offerings last week were "A Million for Love" and "Ransom." Apparently double features have proved the solution for this theatre.

The Mark Strand in Albany found business satisfactory with Eric von Stroheim's "The Wedding March."

The Mark Ritz in Albany offered an excellent picture in "The Whip," but this week the theatre will probably play to the biggest crowds in its history as Vitaphone and Movietone have been installed and "State Street Sadie" will be the opening feature.

It is noticeable that Proctor's Grand in Albany is using plenty of newspaper space these days in calling attention to its picture end of the program; in fact, even more than the vaudeville acts. A round of the neighborhood houses in Albany found business satisfactory to the exhibitors.

In Troy "Lilac Time" played to whooping business throughout the week at the Troy Theatre, the house being packed both afternoon and evening and on many nights there were waiting lines.

The Lincoln used "While the City Sleeps" throughout the week and found the picture an excellent business getter.

The American used "She Stole His Heart, Senses and Jewels" and "Beware of Blondes."

The neighborhood houses in Troy as a general thing report business as being only fair.

Pittsburgh

LEASES have been taken over by the J. L. Gorris Amusement Company, with headquarters in McKeesport, on the Monarch and Rialto theatres, Clairton, effective November first. Along with the Capitol, which the Gorris' took over from Mike Thomas on July first, this makes their third theatre in the town. The Gorris now control seven theatres, the others being: three in McKeesport and one in Glassport. John Shultz, who had conducted the Clairton houses for some time, has not made known his future plans.

M-G-M has a new salesman, Bill Riter who is from Los Angeles.

Some of the recent out of town visitors were R. Pollock of Calistoga, Mr. and Mrs. Bower of Sparks, Nevada; J. W. Bascom of Sisson, and L. R. Killingsworth of Willows.

L. R. Crook, formerly of National Theatre Syndicate, is now associated with Kinema Theatres, a circuit operating in the Santa Clara Valley. Crook now has complete management of all the houses.

The Arlington Theatre at Suisun has reopened under the management of V. S. Nagair.
